DUCE SETS UP ALBANIAN RULE

FAITH 'THAT HE ROSE AGAIN' IS AVOWED TODAY

Churches to Retell Easter Story.

Easter weather today will be cloudy and cool, with showers by evening, Forecaster C. A. Donnel predicted last night. "Easter bonnets," said Donnel," ought to be safe from rain during the morning and afternoon." Temperatures are expected to range from 32 to 45 degrees.

BY THE REV. JOHN EVANS.

The Easter story of the Resurrection of the Savior, to be retold today before Chicago's vast Christian congregation in sermon, chorale and eucharist, was first written by an unknown author and given to St. Paul in the year 37 A. D., four or five years after the event had occurred. More books and more sermons and addresses came from the Easter event than from any other occurrence in the world's history, yet this first written record was only a few simple words—sixty-five in all—when translated from Greek to English.

Quoted Later by St. Paul.

At the time Christ rose from the tomb, St. Paul was Saul of Tarsus, a leader of the purge against the early Christians. He was converted and became one of the founders of the Christian church. The record of Christ's resurrection which was handed to Paul after his conversion was quoted later in Paul's own letter —or epistle—to Christians in Corinth. The story is told in 1 Corinthians xv., 4-7:

4 And that he was buried, and that he rose again the third day according to the scriptures:

5 And that he was seen of Çē'phās, then of the twelve:

6 After that, he was seen of above five hundred brethren at once; of whom the greater part remain unto this present, but some are fallen asleep.

7 After that, he was seen of Jāmeś; then of all the apostles.

[Cephas is one of the biblical names for St. Peter. The reference to twelve means the twelve apostles.]

The next written record, according to the Christian Advocate, official Methodist publication, was written about twenty-eight years later by St. Mark in the sixteenth chapter of the gospel which bears his name. The Advocate also cites what is claimed to be the first formulary or creed concerning the Resurrection prepared about 100 A. D. It follows:

"—He rose from the dead and ascended into heaven—"

Although briefly told, this faith is affirmed by more persons today than ever before, as the grand procession to Chicago's 2,000 churches begins at early hours this morning.

Cardinal to Celebrate Mass.

Catholic worship will center in Holy Name cathedral, where Cardinal Mundelein will celebrate solemn pontifical mass at noon.

The Episcopal procathedral of St. Luke, Evanston, will hold two major services at 9:30 and 11:30, when Bishop George Craig Stewart will deliver the sermons. St. James church, Wabash avenue and Huron street, and St. Chrysostom's church, 1424 North Dearborn parkway, will be crowded at their 11 o'clock services.

Harry G. Saulnier, chairman of the seventh annual Easter sunrise service, said that at least 50,000 worshipers were expected to attend the service at 5:30 o'clock in Soldiers' field. Many other sunrise services have been scheduled.

85th Annual Service.

New England Congregational church will hold its 85th consecutive Easter service this evening in St. James Episcopal church.

Presbyterians will observe Easter as also being Hospital day. Funds will be received for the maintenance of free beds and charity patients at Presbyterian hospital.

Greek Orthodox churches of all branches this year observe Easter on the same date with all other churches. Thousands of Russians of the city began their celebration at midnight in the new Church of St. George, 917 Wood street. The service continues until 6 o'clock this morning.

EASTER IS A TIME WHEN AMERICA SHOULD BE GRATEFUL FOR THE BLESSING OF PEACEFUL NEIGHBORS

COL. LINDBERGH SAILS FOR NEW YORK; TRIES TO HIDE DEPARTURE

CHERBOURG, France, April 8.—(AP)—Col. Charles A. Lindbergh sailed tonight aboard the liner Aquitania for the United States on what friends said was a business trip. Surrounded by French detectives, Lindbergh boarded the ship ahead of the other passengers and no one was permitted near him on the liner. Mrs. Lindbergh did not accompany him.

It will be Lindbergh's first visit to the United States since 1937. Some of his business associates said his trip was connected with the prospective opening of Pan-American Airways' trans-Atlantic service. However, it was recalled that Representative Carl Vinscn of Georgia, chairman of the house naval affairs committee, announced in January he would invite the flyer to return home and report on the state of European air rearmament.

In recent months Lindbergh has been collaborating with Dr. Alexis Carrel, the famous scientist, on a book on the mechanical heart they developed several years ago. It was understood Lindbergh might arrange for publication of the book while in New York.

VIRGINIAN SLAYS HIS COUSIN WHO REFUSED TO WED

Lynchburg, Va., April 8.—[U. P.]—Lloyd Maddox, 27 years old, killed his cousin, Mae Napier, 23, with five revolver shots today because she said their close relationship would prevent their marriage.

The slaying took place as the young couple sat at a table in Lynchburg's largest restaurant after a dance early today.

The girl slumped to the floor while a score of after-dance diners looked on, and Maddox beat her on her head with the pistol until the gun fell to pieces in his hands.

200 Lb. Truck Tire Bounced 75 Ft. by Train Hits Woman

Freeport, Ill., April 8.—(AP)—Here is how a freak accident sent Mrs. Bess Humbert of Chadwick to a hospital with cuts and bruises. She was standing on a railroad depot platform when a truck passed over a nearby crossing just ahead of a train. An inflated tire, weighing about 200 pounds, fell from the truck and landed on the tracks. The train struck the tire and hurled it seventy-five feet. The bounding tire struck Mrs. Humbert a glancing blow, knocking her down.

Red Betrays His Ancestry and Must Die

Red the Thief sat silently in his cell yesterday, 150 feet from the death-house where next Wednesday he must pay the supreme penalty for his crimes. Occasionally he lifted his head to heed a footfall in the corridor. But no one came to give him hope.

Unless a last minute executive pardon spares him, and none is expected, Red will be the first dog on record to die in a lethal gas chamber here as a habitual criminal.

"We will give him the usual five day legal stay of sentence and then he must take his last walk," said Pound Master Robert Forejt.

Owners Sadly Disown Him.

Not even Red's master and mistress, Mr. and Mrs. George P. Pabst of 5415 Giddings street, came to comfort him.

"We had no idea that we were harboring a criminal," said Mrs. Pabst. "He was a friendly dog and we took him in off the streets last January to give him a good home. But if he's a thief, we disown him."

There's no question that Red is a natural born kleptomaniac despite the fact that one of his parents was a police dog. The other was a chow.

Policemen Herbert Haerle and Victor Baginski caught Red red-handed on Friday. In fact, he walked right between them in a brazen manner and snatched a rug. The two policemen were standing on a third floor back porch at 4754 North Long avenue investigating a report that some one had been stealing one rug after another in the neighborhood. Occasionally a washing would be stolen right off the line.

Hardened Criminal at 3.

But even the most daring criminal sooner or later learns that crime doesn't pay. The police caught Red after a two block chase.

He was such a nice dog that Capt. Herbert Burns of the Jefferson Park police thought that some one had put him up to it. Mrs. Pabst came into the station voluntarily, however, and said she was shocked and grieved.

She recalled that once he brought home a red rug and another time a summer sausage, but he was young and she thought nothing of it. Red is less than 3 years old, but the police said he is too hardened to be treated as a juvenile delinquent.

This, they said, ought to be a lesson to other gay young dogs.

ENGAGES HOSPITAL BED FOR NEXT JULY; SHE EXPECTS TWINS

East Thompson, Conn., April 8.—(AP)—Mrs. Lydia Fifield, 41 years old, made preparations to enter a hospital in Putnam as a maternity patient next July and says: "It will be an accident if it isn't twins." Mrs. Fifield has had fifteen children, twelve of whom are twins. All but three are living. The father, Harry, 59 years old, is a WPA worker.

BURN MUSSOLINI IN EFFIGY, STONE HITLER'S IMAGE

MEXICO CITY, April 8.—(AP)—Police guards were stationed at the German and Italian legations today after crowds celebrating the Saturday before Easter burned an effigy of Premier Mussolini and stoned an image of Adolf Hitler.

Mexicans customarily stone or burn images of Judas on this Saturday but today the occasion broadened, with rightist and leftist political groups showing diverging sympathies.

The announcement of one group that it would destroy effigies of Vicente Lombardo Toledano, labor leader, and Luis Rodriguez, head of the administration political party, brought trouble on a broad thoroughfare in the center of the city. Police formed lines down the middle of the street to keep opposing factions apart and the effigies were seized.

DOUBLE MORMON FAST DAYS TO FEED JOBLESS

Salt Lake City, Utah, April 8.—(AP)—Latter Day Saints church authorities asked 750,000 faithful Mormons today to go hungry twice each month that the church might care for its needy members.

A program inaugurated last year, with a one meal a month fast, was intensified with a twice a month fast as 2,000 Mormon leaders studied the 1939 needs of their unemployed.

The original program, through which members donated the monetary equivalent of the meals they had forgone, netted $431,172 in cash in 1938, but work projects and food for unemployables cost the church $1,827,000.

Jail Inmates Use So Much Soap Their Bubble Bursts

Nowata, Okla., April 8.—(AP)—The use of too much soap by some prisoners in the Nowata County jail led today to an investigation by Deputy Sherif Ray Reed, who discovered it had been used to replace mortar dug from around bricks in the wall in an escape plot.

MUSSOLINI MAY FLY TO TIRANA TO SEAL CONQUEST; NAZIS MASSING NEAR POLAND

Hint Hitler Is Ready to Launch Drive Against Warsaw.

BY SIGRID SCHULTZ.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BERLIN, April 8.—Heavy German troop movements today resulted in a belief among many Germans that the world may witness another political sensation soon. The soldiers moved through Berlin's main thoroughfares throughout the day. Trains out of Berlin were delayed for hours in eastern Germany because of troop movements.

This question was frequently heard in Berlin:

"Are they on the way to help Danzig, the German parts of the Polish corridor, and Upper Silesia to return to Germany in time for Reichsfuehrer Hitler's birthday?"

The Fuehrer will be 50 years old on April 20.

Eye British-Polish Deal.

Since the details of the British-Polish mutual assistance agreement announced in London recently have not been made public, radical Nazis believe no real agreement was reached. They express the hope that their friends in Danzig and in the parts of Poland which Germany wants to annex will rise before the Poles have ratified whatever agreement was made.

Conservative Nazi groups, however, believe Hitler will not encourage his followers to rise for a return to the fatherland at the present moment. They believe pressure can be brought to bear on the Poles to compel them to step from under Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain's umbrella and come to terms with Germany.

Military circles believe that the Nazis will strike soon. This belief is held partly because of the great number of German troops in readiness and partly because of the strategic importance of some of the junction points in the hands of the Poles.

Two Strategic Points Cited.

Oderberg and Teschen, which the Poles now control, are of vital importance for trafic out of Germany's new protectorates, Bohemia, Moravia, and Slovakia, and out of Hungary and all other countries of southeast Europe. These two points are on the road to Gdynia, Danzig, and the Scandinavian countries — which are good customers of central Europe.

The psychological factor also plays a part in the figurings of anxious diplomats in Berlin. They believe that Hitler, angered by Poland's negotiations with England, will want to show the Poles who is master in Europe.

The Essener National Zeitung, the mouthpiece of Field Marshal Hermann Wilhelm Goering, Hitler's right hand man, today declared Germany is so strong that Poland will not dare to oppose her.

Throws Taunt at Britain.

"Even the British government, in its self-imposed rôle as the moral guardian of the world—a rôle which practically amounts to the maintenance of British world domination—lacks the courage to oppose the reich openly and decently," the Essener National Zeitung said. "The English government is looking for fools on the continent whose rôle it would be in the decisive moment to get the chestnuts out of the fire for England."

Before the world war, the paper declared, neither the German government nor the people would have stood for the gigantic and hate-inspired propaganda directed against Germany in recent weeks.

"It borders on the miraculous that Germany now faces these attacks with an almost joyful calmness," the paper added. "The German nation has neither been scared nor even disquieted."

Fear for Jugo-Slavia.

Diplomats are alarmed about the fate of Jugo-Slavia, despite Premier Mussolini's expression of gratitude for the understanding displayed by Belgrade while the Fascists were seizing Albania.

The diplomats see in the size of Mussolini's expeditionary force an indication that he wants more than Albania.

Messages from Belgrade report that the Italians are preparing to throw close to 100,000 men into Albania.

Italians have repeatedly claimed the Dalmatian coast as land which should belong to them instead of to Jugo-Slavia. Neutral observers believe that Mussolini may plan to take this land soon.

GUNS, GOLD, MEN: ALLIES BOAST A VAST ADVANTAGE

If war comes in Europe it is probable that at least seven, and possibly eleven, countries will be arrayed in an alliance against the so-called axis powers, Germany and Italy, and their possible allies, Hungary, Spain, and Bulgaria.

The seven probable alliance nations are Great Britain, France, Belgium, the Netherlands, Poland, Russia, and Switzerland. These seven might be aided by four others: Jugo-Slavia, Greece, Turkey, and Rumania. Available statistics tend to show that the eleven possess, in much greater measure than the axis countries, the resources for successful war making.

Allies More Powerful.

The stop-the-dictator alliance would have a huge preponderance in trained soldiers. In naval strength the alliance would be immensely superior.

In air strength the allies would also be far ahead. The same would be true of finances, mineral wealth, and agricultural products.

Germany, Italy, and their possible allies are estimated to have about 12,876,000 trained soldiers. If Great Britain and France enrolled the nine possible allies mentioned above they could muster more than 35 million soldiers. In naval power they would have a combined fleet of nearly three million tons to oppose the axis powers' 1,196,000 tons.

By the best estimates the eleven allies would have a total of 18,570 fighting planes as against 12,050 for the axis nations.

See Another Blockade.

Naval strength is sure to be of great importance if war should come. There has been much speculation as to whether sea power can be equalized by air strength and submarines. All the great navies have continued, however, the building of battleships, and most naval experts still believe that the allied fleet as listed above could again blockade the enemy countries as it did in the world war.

Another important factor is the ability of each country to defend its own borders. Poland is ill equipped to do this. So is Russia. But beginning with Switzerland and continuing to the English channel and the North sea is a chain of fortifications that is probably the strongest in the world.

Across France stretches the Maginot line of underground forts.

Italian King Invited to Sit on Throne of Puppet State.

ROME, April 9 [Sunday]. — (AP) — A provisional government was set up today in Tirana, the capital of conquered Albania, for the purpose of accepting Italian rule. Premier Mussolini was reported to be planning to fly here to proclaim the little kingdom a part of his Fascist empire.

Count Galeazzo Ciano. [Acme Photo.]

The first act of the new government was to advise all Albanians to accept the Italian occupation and to refrain from resistance and provocative acts against the Fascist forces, which had virtually completed their conquest of the diminutive Balkan state.

Duce May Fly Tomorrow.

Fascists said Il Duce probably would fly to Tirana Monday to proclaim Italian rule. Count Galeazzo Ciano, his foreign minister and son-in-law, preceded him yesterday to take care of the preliminaries.

Ahead of Ciano, an Italian army of occupation had marched unresisted into the city.

[Other dispatches said 120 Italian planes had landed 1,000 soldiers in Tirana in an experiment with the air transport of troops. Details on page 2.]

King Zog was in exile and his handful of troops was scattered in the hills—hills that were a province of ancient Rome 2,000 years ago.

The Fascist government made public an appeal from several Albanian leaders asking King Victor Emmanuel of Italy to assume the crown of Albania.

Zog Joins Wife in Greece.

Zog fled to Greece to join his American-Hungarian queen, Geraldine, and their 3 day old heir, Crown Prince Skander. The queen and her son crossed the frontier into Greece yesterday after a dramatic flight over mountainous roads in an Albanian Red Cross ambulance. [Details on page 4.]

The Fascist press here said Italy would be benevolent and generous toward the Albanian people but would be inexorable toward Zog and his henchmen.

The press insisted Italy had no plans to drive deeper into the Balkans and especially stressed her friendship for Jugo-Slavia, Albania's northern neighbor.

Mussolini, it was announced, had sent a special message to the Jugo-Slav government, delivered through the Italian minister at Belgrade, expressing the appreciation of the Fascist government for the neutral attitude of Jugo-Slavia.

Assure Serbian Interests.

The Jugo-Slav legation in Rome issued a statement saying the Jugo-Slav government is in continual contact with the Italian government, and that the Italian government is ready to assure Jugo-Slav interests. The statement added:

"The desire of Jugo-Slavia is to see the conflict ended as soon as possible. All Jugo-Slav views are based on the Jugo-Slav-Italian accords and Jugo-Slavia has no thought of receding from these accords."

No mention was made of Greece, Albania's southern neighbor, but there appeared to be little likelihood that Italy would move for the present to obtain the Greek island of Corfu, valuable key to control of the Adriatic off the Albanian coast. Italian warships bombarded and landing forces occupied Corfu in 1924 in a dispute with Greece, but the Italians were forced to withdraw by diplomatic action of the powers.

Italians Enter Scutari.

Italian forces were close both to the Greek and Jugo-Slav borders with Albania. An official dispatch from Tirana said an Italian column had entered Scutari, on Lake Scutari, which lies between northwestern Albania and Jugo-Slavia.

Another dispatch said the Albanian prefect of Koritza, near the Greek frontier, had surrendered the city to Italy and was awaiting the arrival of Italian troops.

Virginio Gayda, Fascist writer, launched a vigorous attack on France for what he called the shameful lies published there concerning Italy's operations in Albania. These, he said, included false reports of Italian defeats and Italian atrocities.

The Fascist invaders admittedly met resistance at the start and suffered 21 killed and 97 wounded in making landings on the coast yesterday at Durazzo and Santi Quaranta.

Gayda accused France of attempting to throw the Balkans into a state of alarm over what he called merely a collaborative action between Italy and the Albanian people.

"The French maneuvers at the head of the new confusion directed against Italy, which is being stirred up among a scant following," Gayda wrote in Il Giornale D'Italia with apparent allusion to the British-French anti-aggressor bloc, "are proven in all their squalid intentions in the light of demonstrated facts to the contrary."

Refugees Pour Into Italy.

Although extra editions of Italian newspapers proclaimed "Tirana occupied!" in their boldest type, the news was received here without excitement.

In Tirana, however, Italian communiques said, the populace rejoiced at the arrival of the dusty Italian columns, delivering them from Zog's rule.

Hundreds of Italian refugees reached Italy at Brindisi, an Adriatic port, aboard airplanes and warships ferrying them from Albania.

They said a pro-Italian counter-revolution had been launched against Zog in northwestern Albania and predicted that Prince John of Merdita, a tribal chieftain in that region, probably would be installed as puppet head of a new Albanian régime if Italy did not name an Italian governor.

Official Italian advices from Tirana said Italian troops had occupied Elbasan, the mountain town twenty-five miles south of the capital in which Zog and his government had spent last night before fleeing today to Greece.

Prepare for Guerrilla War.

TIRANA, Albania, April 8.—(AP)—The armed forces of Fascism imposed Italian rule in Tirana tonight as thousands of soldiers pushed farther into Albania to crush remaining resistance and complete occupation of the country.

Fierce Albanian warriors fled before the invaders, mechanized and replete with the most modern equipment of war, to take positions in the mountains for the guerrilla warfare which is their specialty.

King Zog had gone to Greece and an hour and a half after the first Italian soldiers entered the capital Count Galeazzo Ciano, Italian foreign minister, came from Italy by airplane and immediately took up headquarters in the Italian legation.

Many Italian Planes Land.

After Count Ciano arrived many Italian planes landed at Tirana, bringing various Fascist personages, including Gen. Alfredo Guzzoni, head of the expeditionary forces in Albania. Others were Gen. Giuseppe Valle, undersecretary for air, and Umberto Klinger, head of the Italian commercial air lines.

The staf of the Italian legation, joined by officials of the German and Spanish legations, turned out to welcome the Italians.

Zef Sereggi, former Albanian minister to Rome, who has declared himself in favor of Italy, accompanied Count Ciano.

The former regent of Albania, Zhaper Yapi, was on hand at the airport with a group of Albanians to welcome Ciano.

Troops Guard Ciano.

Armored cars and machine gun units were lined up along the parade route.

Count Ciano donated $5,000 to the poor of Tirana shortly after installing himself at the Italian legation.

The vanguard of the Italian troops, with feathers flying from their steel helmets, arrived in Tirana on motorcycles at 9:30 a. m. under the command of Gen. Muty.

Tirana had undergone a night of terror. Police fired continuously to scare away looters. Mobs ran through the streets, shooting firearms. The royal palace was sacked.

Hugh G. Grant, the American minister, sheltered the American colony yesterday and last night in the American legation.

Though the Italian flag floated over Tirana and order was rapidly imposed on the apparently docile people, observers believed fighting would continue in the hills for some time.

120 PLANES FLY ITALIAN ARMY OF 1,000 TO ALBANIA

Troops Land at Tirana in Experiment.

[Copyright: 1939: By the New York Times.]

ROME, April 8.—An experiment in the transportation of troops by air under actual war conditions was made by Italy today on an unprecedented scale.

A regiment of grenadiers, totaling well over 1,000 men, was flown in land planes from Grottaglie, in the province of Taranto, to Tirana, a distance of 135 miles as the crow flies. All the men were landed in Tirana about one hour from the time the first man left Grottaglie.

The operation, although carefully prepared in advance, was regarded here as a notable achievement.

120 Bombing Planes Used.

About 120 large trimotored bombing planes participated in the experiment. Each carried an average of eight men.

The experiment was rendered somewhat dangerous by the fact that landing conditions at Tirana were uncertain. Consequently, a number of planes were sent ahead to make trial landings before the troop movement began in earnest.

It was pointed out here that careful organization was necessary on the small Tirana field to permit one group of planes after another to land, discharge passengers, and take off again before the next group was allowed to land, so that the field always was clear.

Done Previously in Africa.

Similar experiments were repeatedly carried out in Ethiopia and Libya by the Italians, but never on a scale approximating this.

It is believed here the success of this experiment will revolutionize warfare, especially in the colonies. There, it is declared, owing to the presence of vast ungarded tracts and the comparative smallness of effectives engaged, it will be possible to strike with incredible swiftness the vital spots in an enemy country.

Goering Leaves to Inspect Italian Defenses in Africa

REGGIO CALABRIA, Italy, April 8.—[U. P.]—Field Marshal Herman Wilhelm Goering, German aviation minister, left by boat today for Tripoli to inspect Italian defenses.

CHEERING THRONGS WELCOME BECK ON RETURN TO POLAND

WARSAW, Poland, April 8.—(AP)—Foreign Minister Joseph Beck returned from London today with the new British-Polish mutual assistance agreement and conferred immediately with government colleagues on the effects of the pact on the general European situation. He received an enthusiastic greeting. A band at the frontier played favorite tunes of the Pilsudski Legionnaires. Cheering citizens crowded the station platform at Poznan as Beck's train passed through the town.

BEAUTY ESCAPES A BANDIT'S EYE AND HE'S CAUGHT

The alertness of a young woman helped trap a bandit last night as he was holding up a beauty parlor at 1414 North Clark street. The robber entered the shop shortly before closing time and ordered Mrs. Frieda Weigel, the owner; three operators, and a patron to lie on the floor.

Another patron, Miss Leona Dashner, 2123 North Clark street, was sitting under a drier in a rear booth and was not noticed by the bandit. She slipped out a rear door and telephoned police. Meantime the robber took $20 from Mrs. Weigel and demanded that she open a cash drawer.

He lingered too long. A few minutes later Policemen John O'Malley, David Mulchrome, and George Schert of the Hudson avenue station burst into the shop with guns drawn and overpowered him. He identified himself as Harry Williams, 49 years old, a railroad man just in from Minneapolis, Minn. He was armed with a toy pistol.

SERBS, FEARING REVOLT, GIVE DUCE FREE HAND

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS, April 8.—One reason for Jugo-Slavia's neutral attitude in the Albanian conflict, it was said in Paris tonight, is the realization that the population of the prewar independent kingdom of Montenegro never has become reconciled to the Jugo-Slav régime. Former Montenegro now is a Jugo-Slavian province on the Albanian border.

Recalling recent outbreaks of nationalist movements in other parts of central and eastern Europe, the Jugo-Slavs decided to remain neutral rather than to risk the sudden outbreak of an Italian sponsored nationalist movement in Montenegro.

The Jugo-Slavs realize, it was said, that Germany would come to the aid of Italy by stirring up trouble in Jugo-Slavia's German language districts.

Hungary also would not miss an opportunity to settle accounts with Jugo-Slavia, political observers pointed out.

BALKANS CRISIS ENDS VACATION OF CHAMBERLAIN

Premier and His Cabinet Will Confer Today.

BY DAVID DARRAH.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, April 8.—Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain, cutting short a fishing trip to Scotland, will arrive in London at 7:25 o'clock tomorrow morning. He will confer with his ministers on the situation in the Mediterranean as a result of the occupation of Albania by Premier Benito Mussolini of Italy.

The prime minister, who has been constantly in telephonic communication with No. 10 Downing street, decided to return after a 90 minute meeting in London. To this session opposition leaders handed a demand that parliament be recalled immediately to cope with the problems arising from the latest push of the Berlin-Rome powers.

The ministers probably will be called together tomorrow after Chamberlain confers with Foreign Minister Viscount Halifax.

Parley on Easter Saturday.

At today's meeting of the ministers, the first on Easter Saturday since the world war, Halifax presented summaries of the British government's diplomatic reports on the Albanian situation.

The independence of Turkey and Greece was reported to have been discussed. Responsible quarters in London believe that any attack on Greece would bring Britain to her assistance. This may be denied when Chamberlain meets the ministers tomorrow.

Following today's meeting, at which Sir John Simon, chancellor of the exchequer, presided, a statement was issued that "the situation is still somewhat obscure in regard to a number of important facts, and it has therefore been arranged that the ministers concerned should remain in or near London for the present."

It also pointed out that no action to recall parliament can be taken before Chamberlain is consulted.

Demands for the recall have been made by Clement R. Attlee, Labor party leader; Sir Archibald Sinclair, Liberal opposition leader, and Lord Robert Crewe, Liberal leader in the house of lords.

Call Coup Blow at Liberty.

Sinclair and Crewe telegraphed Chamberlain:

"The shameful Italian invasion of Albania violates the Anglo-Italian agreement and constitutes a fresh and dangerous assault on the liberties of Europe by the axis powers. We would urge that parliament be summoned immediately to consider government proposals for dealing with the situation."

Informed circles reported that while many members of the government are willing to admit privately that the Anglo-Italian treaty has been broken, there exists an extreme reluctance to denounce [terminate] the pact.

The British ambassador to Rome, the earl of Perth, will have further consultations with the Italian foreign minister, Count Galeazzo Ciano, before any decision is taken. Britain, it was pointed out, does not want to drive Italy any further into the arms of Germany.

Viscount Halifax at the foreign office received the Albanian minister, Lec Kurti, and the French and American ambassadors, Charles Corbin and Joseph P. Kennedy, respectively.

Balkan Alliance Pushed.

LONDON, April 8.—(AP)—The British government is pressing to get Rumania quickly into a European defensive alliance and hopes to conclude secret agreements with smaller Balkan states, diplomatic informants said tonight.

The alliance with Rumania would be formal. Secret agreements are said to be sought with Jugo-Slavia, Turkey and Greece, all reported wary of offending Italy and Germany by joining any anti-aggression bloc.

The foreign office also was keeping well informed of the situation in Jugo-Slavia, believed here to be in line for pressure from the Rome-Berlin axis. British official quarters discussed the possibility of a quick German coup without even the knowledge of Italy.

Germany would like to have an outlet to the Adriatic and this could be won by a coup in Jugo Slavia. Italy is reported to have no desire to have Germany occupy territory that Fascists say is within the Italian sphere of interest.

UNS, GOLD, MEN: LLIES BOAST A AST ADVANTAGE

xis Powers Are Short on Essentials of War.

llows the Rhine valley for ninety iles. France spent nearly a billion ollars on it and considers it impreg-able.

Its right flank is on Switzerland, hich has its own impressive defenses addition to a rugged mountain ter-in. In Belgium the line is continued. t Namur and Liege are fortresses im-ensely better than those which held the German gray waves in 1914.

Recent dispatches have indicated at the Dutch also are strengthening eir fortifications that look toward ermany. They do not feel they can ermanently halt a German invasion, it that they can stop one long enough r help to arrive. They have also a aditional weapon—the power to open e dykes and flood their low lying rritories—and they have indicated ey will use it if need arises.

Germany also has a line of defenses at reaches from Switzerland to the orth sea. Its secrets have been well ept. At the beginning of hostilities is not impossible that both sides will nd themselves stalemated along the hole western front.

Threat of Air Raids.

The threat of air raids would be rious to all the countries involved, it whether the civilian populations uld be cowed by them is uncertain. any writers have maintained that e bombing of cities played little rt in the settlement of the Spanish ar. The British and French recent- have been adding planes to their rces at a tremendous rate, and they pposedly are creeping up in this spect.

Although the world is, in the pre-rious peace that now exists, no nger on a formal gold standard, old in wartime would be a real eapon, usable in the purchase of pplies and as a basis for internal rrency expansion.

Compared to the axis powers, the lliance nations have a plethora of e yellow metal. Holdings of the o sets of countries follow:

AXIS POWERS.
ermany	$174,000,000
aly	210,000,000
pain	525,000,000
ungary	37,000,000
Total	$946,000,000
ALLIANCE POWERS.
reat Britain	$1,801,000,000
rance	2,435,000,000
etherlands	975,000,000
elgium	581,000,000
witzerland	699,000,000
oland	85,000,000
Total	$6,576,000,000

The Russians give no figures on heir gold holdings, but they have een mining for the precious metal teadily.

Current figures on steel production re not available. Germany in 1937 roduced nineteen million metric ons, a little less than the joint out-ut of France and Great Britain. Last ear, it was reported, Germany in-reased her output.

Italy Weak in Iron.

But Italy has hardly enough iron re for her needs and the Scandi-avian countries, if they remained eutral, could furnish the allies with rge quantities of steel—provided, of ourse, that France and England naintained control of the seas.

In war tremendous value accrues to ertain minerals, such as nickel, tin, hromite, tungsten, and antimony. They are extensively used in indus-rial processes, including the making f war materials. Save for mercury, Germany and Italy have little of hese. Rubber would be kept out of oth the leading axis countries by a ea blockade and substitutes, cer-ainly more expensive and possibly ess efficient, would have to be used.

A table prepared by Dr. E. Berl of he Carnegie Institute of Technology ecently showed that Germany would e able to produce within her own oundaries, and in sufficient quantity, nly eight of twenty-three war essen-ials [mineral and vegetable].

Italy also could produce but eight ufficiently, and would be totally de-oid of a domestic supply of eight. One of the great lacks of the axis owers would be petroleum.

It has been said so often that it s a truism that "an army fights on ts stomach." So, too, does a civilian opulation. All reports from Ger-many indicate a chronic state of undernourishment there. Fats are rationed; so are eggs; meats are scarce. The latest figures available estimated German wheat production at 130 million bushels annually. Italy had enough wheat for its own needs, with 229 million bushels annually.

Germany is at present, according to reports, forced to import wheat. France, on the other hand, is offering subsidies to encourage her wheat growers this year to export some of their surplus. She has too much; Germany too little. Russia is a great wheat bin and Great Britain, with an average production of 49 million bushels domestically, can draw at will on Canada's and Australia's granaries.

A Heavy Burden.

In view of the short supplies, it is unlikely that Premier Mussolini could maintain in the field anything like the more than seven million men he claims. The strain of keeping three and a half million at war might well break the German spirit in a few months.

Experts who look at the European situation realistically hold that in a prolonged war the man power, the wealth and the resources of the allied nations would be almost certain to overcome the axis countries. They have everything it takes to do the job. Further, it is unlikely that they can be surprised by invasions in unexpected places as they were in 1914. The readiness of the small countries to resist, as indicated by unusual military preparations in Switzerland, Belgium, and the Netherlands, is the best guarantee of this.

Axis Powers Outstripped in Armies, Navies, and Air Forces if Europe Fights

On this map of Europe are comparisons of the war strength of the axis powers and of the nations which probably would be allied against them if a general war should occur. The axis powers are Germany and Italy, with perhaps Spain, Hungary, and Bulgaria, all shown in black. Opposing them would be Great Britain, France, Russia, the Netherlands, Belgium, Switzerland, and Poland. On the same side might be Jugo-Slavia, Rumania, Greece, and Turkey. These eleven nations are in gray. In many instances exact strength is not known, but the best available figures have been used.

MOB 10 FOLLOWERS OF FATHER COUGHLIN IN N. Y.; 2 ARRESTED

New York, April 8.—[Special.]—Two persons were arrested late tonight in Times square as members of a crowd of several thousand persons who mobbed ten followers of the Rev. Charles E. Coughlin. Followers of the "radio priest" were selling Coughlin's paper, Social Justice. Two members of the crowd tore up several hundred copies of the paper and engaged in a fight with the volunteer newsboys. The crowd was dispersed by a police squad which had been detailed to the Times square zone after representatives of Social Justice and of the Free American [Deutsche Weckruf and Beobachter], organ of the German-American bund, had complained.

Japanese Bombs Raze Presbyterian Residence

SHANGHAI, April 8.—(AP)—Japanese war planes demolished the residence and damaged other property of the Northern Presbyterian mission at Hengyang, South Hunan province, on Thursday, the American embassy at Chungking announced today. American residents escaped injury. They were Raymond Kepler and wife of New York City, Lucinda Gernhardt of Woodburn, Ind., and Frank Newman of New York City.

JAIL INDIANA MAN IN NEW YORK FOR CARRYING A GUN

New York, April 8.—[Special.]—William B. Hoadley, 40 years old, of Bloomington, Ind., who said he was president of the Walker Brothers Stone company in Bloomington and a former state senator of Indiana, was arrested tonight in his hotel room where the police found a revolver and a tear gas gun with six loaded shells.

Hoadley had a revolver permit issued in Indiana, but it is not valid in this state. He was charged with violation of the Sullivan anti gun toting law. Arrested with him was Barney Sabella, Brooklyn, who was discovered hiding in a closet when detectives investigating a tip came in to search the room.

FLAMES CAUSE $100,000 LOSS TO AURORA PLANT

Damage of $100,000 was done last night by a spectacular fire which swept through the old glue plant of the Alba Manufacturing company on highway 20 and the Fox river, about one mile north of Aurora.

The fire started from unknown causes and, fed by combustibles in the plant, spread quickly. Aurora firemen who responded were helpless to stem it and concentrated successfully on keeping the flames from adjoining and newer buildings.

Mexico Imposes New Ban on Arms, Explosives Sales

Mexico City, April 8.—(AP)—The Mexican government today imposed strict control on the sale and transportation of arms, munitions, and explosives, tightening regulations decreed four years ago. The government suspended all general permits of merchants dealing in arms.

ZOG JOINS QUEEN AND BABY PRINCE IN GREEK EXILE

Ex-King Reported to Have $160,000 'Nest Egg.'

FLORINA, Greece, April 8.—(AP)—King Zog and Queen Geraldine of Albania were united here tonight after separate flights from Tirana, the Albanian capital, which now is occupied by Italian troops.

The Hungarian-American Geraldine, who is 23 years old, had made her way to a tiny inn in this Greek mountain village with her 3 day old son, Crown Prince Skander, by Albanian Red Cross ambulance yesterday.

The journey over rough, dangerous mountainous roads took fourteen hours. She was preparing to go on when Zog appeared, having followed her a few hours later when his monarchy started to topple.

Queen in Good Condition.

Koco Otta, the Albanian premier who accompanied Zog, said the royal family and their suite would leave tomorrow for Saloniki, to which two of the king's sisters perviously had gone.

It was reported that Zog had decided to stay in Greece until the queen recovered her strength fully and then to take up residence somewhere abroad. Zog was reported to have in his possession the entire Albanian gold reserve of $160,000.

From Saloniki Zog and Geraldine were expected to go to the summer resort, Portaria, near Volos. The queen withstood the ordeal well, although she was greatly upset. Her Austrian physician said she was strong enough to travel but would be unable to walk for several weeks.

Geraldine is the daughter of a Hungarian count and the former Gladys Virginia Stewart of New York.

Zog Urges People to Fight.

Zog had urged his people by proclamation to defend Albania to the last drop of their blood, but there was no further indication that he would resist the Italian occupation.

Zog is a Mohammedan, son of a ruling tribal family who fought his way to the kingship. He married Geraldine last April 27. Zog is 43 years old.

Until she went to Tirana to share the royal palace with Zog, Geraldine had worked as an office girl in the Hungarian National museum in Budapest. Hungarian authorities were concerned tonight over the possibility that she might return to Hungary, where she was born. The question was raised whether giving her asylum there would offend Italy, a political ally of Hungary.

She Hopes World Is Shocked.

LONDON, April 8.—(AP)—In her own story of the flight from Tirana, Queen Geraldine today told The Star, a London evening newspaper, that she hoped world public opinion is shocked into action by the Italian invasion of Albania. The story was dictated to her grandmother, Mme. d'Estrale d'Ekna, who repeated it by telephone to London.

Geraldine said she left her husband leading his troops into battle, but what could Albania do against such armed might, she asked.

The grandmother added that the queen did not want to leave Tirana. She pleaded with her husband to let her stay, but he was adamant and ordered her to go.

As war clouds were threatening, the grandmother said, a fleet of cars stood ready in the palace courtyard. One was an ambulance. The queen rode in this.

Curly Top an Orphan

[Acme Photo.]

VIOLET SCHMIDT.

Elkhart, Ind., April 8.—[Special.]—Violet Kathleen Schmidt, the little girl known as "Curly Top" who won fame by waving daily to the crew of the New York Central railroad's Twentieth Century Limited, has been placed in a Mishawaka, Ind., orphanage. Her mother died last November, and her father, George L. Schmidt, who married again in January, disappeared last Monday.

Curly Top, now 11 years old, never had ridden on a train until the crew of the Century took her and her mother to Chicago in January, 1937. Five months later they took her back to observe her ninth birthday. This was followed by a trip to New York and a 3,000 mile tour of the United States.

Mrs. Schmidt left eight children. When Schmidt remarried two months after her death, he moved from the house beside the track where Curly Top watched each evening at 5:30 o'clock for the speeding Century. His eldest daughter was married and the stepmother made a home for the seven others.

Several weeks ago the Juvenile court took jurisdiction over the children. Schmidt cashed his $50 pay check last Monday. Police received a note from him Tuesday saying his body would be found in a river. Three other children are with Curly Top in the orphanage and three have been placed in private homes. The second Mrs. Schmidt abandoned the house and went to live with relatives.

BULGARIA MOVES TO FRONT AS KEY TO BALKAN CRISIS

May Make Demands with Support of Axis.

PARIS, April 8.—(AP)—Italy's invasion of Albania thrust Bulgaria today into the forefront among the unknown factors in the Balkan situation. French experts were represented as worried about an extension of the tension provoked by Italy, particularly in Bulgaria's direction.

The Sofia government, counting on Italy's support, was believed to be in a position—if it should so decide—to make demands of its own, possibly against Greece.

Diplomatic circles considered that Italian occupation of Albania would give Italy and Germany a direct frontier from which to support Bulgaria if she should demand Grecian territory for an outlet to the Ægean.

Outlines Greek Fears.

Nicolas Politis, Greece's minister to Paris, conferred with Foreign Minister Georges Bonnet and outlined his country's fear of a spread of Fascist influence beyond the Albanian border.

Sources close to the French foreign office emphasized that Politis brought no direct news from Athens but was more concerned with the general chararacter of the Balkan situation.

French legislators, meanwhile, clamored for some concrete action by the French government.

Deputy Florimond Bonte, communist, asked Jean Mistler, president of the chamber's foreign affairs committee, to call the committee into session to hear Bonnet report on the Albanian occupation.

Cries of "Anger and Horror."

He urged that the group join in "cries of anger and horror which are mounting in the sympathetic breasts of all nations against the new act of aggression by Italian Fascism."

Arab sources in Paris contended that Italy's move would offset much of her recent anti-French and anti-British propaganda in Moslem parts of the French and British empires.

Increasing Alarm in Balkans.

ISTANBUL, Turkey, April 8.—(AP)—Grigore Gafencu, Rumanian foreign minister, came here today for urgent consultations with Turkish officials on steps members of the Balkan entente should take as a result of Italian invasion of Albania.

Gafencu's hurried visit reflected the increasing alarm of Balkan nations over possible intentions of Italy and Germany. He came in a specially chartered steamer and began conversations with Sukru Saracoglu, Turkish foreign minister, immediately. Other members of the entente are Jugo-Slavia and Greece.

Foreign offices in the countries of southeastern Europe had been considering the advisability of associating themselves with the British-French-Polish front against aggression.

Not So Attractive Now.

But some observers believed that Italy's move against Albania, driving a wedge between Jugo-Slavia and Greece, had reduced greatly the attractiveness of the British plan to the Balkans. Many political leaders in Jugo-Slavia admitted Italian occupation of Albania's seacoast gave Premier Mussolini virtually complete control of the Adriatic. Observing themselves in this strategically precarious position, many Jugo-Slavs were not impressed by the security promised by distant powers.

HUNGARY TAKES OVER 386 MILES GAINED BY SLOVAKIA PACT

BUDAPEST, April 8.—(AP)—Hungarian troops today occupied territory acquired in a border agreement reached with Slovakia on April 4.

The troops were followed by police and government employés to administer the 386 square miles and the 45,000 citizens.

With the final partition of Czecho-Slovakia last month, Hungarian troops advanced into Slovak border areas. Slovakia, which became a German protectorate, agreed to yield the land to end border warfare.

BORDER DEFENSE IS STRENGTHENED BY JUGO-SLAVIA

BELGRADE, Jugo-Slavia, April 8.—[U. P.]—The government tonight strengthened its defense posts along the Albanian frontier and called up a small number of reserve officers.

Well informed sources said that the precautions taken as a result of the Italian occupation of Albania were "normal under the circumstances and by no means extraordinary measures."

The government, which had said earlier that Italy had given assurance that Jugo-Slav interests would be respected, pursued a cautious policy in connection with Albania. All communication lines to Tirana were disrupted.

U. S. DENOUNCES ALBANIAN GRAB AS PEACE BLOW

Borah Opposes Changes in Neutrality Act.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., April 8.—[Special.]—Official denunciation of Italy's invasion of Albania was coupled today with a vigorous attack by Senator William E. Borah [R., Idaho] on proposed changes in neutrality laws.

The veteran senator, an authority on foreign affairs, denounced the administration bill introduced by Senator Elbert D. Thomas [D., Utah] as a subtile measure designed to get this nation into war.

Borah was speaking in the senate at the same time that Secretary of State Cordell Hull issued a formal statement, approved by President Roosevelt, denouncing the Italian invasion of Albania as a threat to world peace. Hull made the statement public at a special press conference after a telephone conversation with the President at Warm Springs, Ga.

Text of Statement.

"The forcible and violent invasion of Albania is unquestionably an additional threat to the peace of the world," the statement read.

"It would be short-sighted not to take notice of this further development. Any threat to world peace seriously concerns all nations and violates the will of all peoples in the world that their governments shall lead them not toward war but along paths of peace.

"It is scarcely necessary to add that the inevitable effect of this incident, taken with other similar incidents, is further to destroy confidence and to undermine economic stability in every country in the world, thus affecting our own welfare."

Evades Question on Treaty.

Hull evaded a question on whether the United States considers the invasion of Albania a violation of the American and French sponsored Kellogg-Briand anti-war pact, which both Italy and Albania signed, but his attitude implied that he did.

Other official sources viewed the Albanian situation as the prelude to a more serious European crisis which is expected to approach the explosive point when Adolf Hitler orders the seizure of the free city of Danzig and the Polish corridor, considered the next step in totalitarian expansion.

Borah did not mention names in his speech against proposed scrapping of the neutrality act, but it was obvious that he was referring to the Thomas bill, which would permit the President to designate an aggressor, or a nation which has violated a treaty, and with the approval of congress exempt the victim of aggression from embargo provisions of the present neutrality act. The act prohibits the export of munitions or other war materials to any nation at war.

The senate foreign relations committee is conducting hearings on this bill and one proposed by Senator Key Pittman [D., Nev.], chairman of the committee. Pittman's bill would permit the sale of arms and supplies to all belligerents on a cash and carry basis with shipment in vessels of the purchaser. This bill has also been interpreted as discriminatory in that it is expected Great Britain and France would have control of the seas in case of war between them and the totalitarian powers, and that Germany and Italy would be prevented from trading with the United States.

"It seems that proponents of these measures," Borah said, "want us to become the moral censors of the world, decide which nation or nations is in the wrong in case of war and then punish the one or ones we decide to be wrong. If this nation wants to get involved in war, I can think of no better way than to adopt this aggressor policy."

"It has been proposed and is now being adroitly urged," Borah said, "that we engraft upon our foreign policy the doctrin of the 'aggressor.'

Means Judging Aggressor.

"The theory is that, in case of war between two or more nations the United States will determine who, among the powers thus engaged, is the aggressor, that is, who has violated a treaty or in other ways initiated the contest.

"The next step in the program is for this nation to open up an economic war upon the aggressor nations. We seek to break down its economic strength, to starve its people, and to render it incapable of carrying on war. We take part at once in this economic war."

SEES U. S. MENACED

Warm Springs, Ga., April 8.—[Special.]—President Roosevelt is convinced that the forward march of dictator nations to new conquests is threatening the security and prosperity of the United States.

This statement was made by a White House spokesman at the same time that Secretary of State Cordell Hull, with Roosevelt's approval, was denouncing the invasion of Albania by Italy.

The spokesman represented the President's views as being that Italy's invasion of her Adriatic neighbor constituted the second phase of a European military aggression that aggravated the world trade situation through extending the influence of the Nazi-Fascist barter system.

Each grab of land and trade by dictator nations is bringing nations which do not belong to the dictator barter group closer to the time when they will have to choose one of three courses of action, the spokesman said. These were listed as building a Chinese wall of isolation, lowering labor standard to compete with the products of dictator nations and subsidizing exports to offset cheap labor costs in dictator countries. The White House spokesman knocked down all three of the methods as impractical.

CANADA NEARING SHOWDOWN OVER COURT REFORM

Appeal to Foot of Throne May Be Abolished.

OTTAWA, Canada, April 8.—(AP)—King George VI. is preparing to make his first visit to his Dominion of Canada just as the dominion is debating whether to sever the last real bond of submission to his rule.

That tie is an imperial subject's right to appeal to the crown for redress from a court of law. It is the one point in which Canada is not free to govern itself.

Around the struggle moves a Canadian parallel to President Roosevelt's attempt to remake the United States Supreme court.

High Court on Sidelines.

Interpretation of the constitution was at issue in the United States court struggle. Interpretation of the Canadian constitution is the issue here.

Advocates of change in Canada would leave the Canadian Supreme court alone and abolish appeals from it to what might be called a super-Supreme court in England.

This super-Supreme court is the judicial committee of the imperial privy council, made up of advisers to his majesty.

The right of appeal to it grew out of the British tradition that a subject never should be deprived of the opportunity to call on his sovereign for justice. The procedure is known as carrying a case to the foot of the throne.

The system worked smoothly when Canada and other colonies were dependents. But after Canada rose to dominion status and acquired equal freedom in the empire with England, Ireland, Australia, New Zealand and the Union of South Africa under the statute of Westminster in 1931, opposition appeared. The charge against it was that the judicial committee used it to twist laws passed by the Canadian parliament to fit British ideas.

Social Security Upset.

The opposition had sufficient strength in 1932 to enable commons to abolish the appeals in all criminal cases. This left civil cases unaffected, and they were the most important from a national point of view. Most constitutional questions were on the civil side.

Agitation was stirred in 1937, when a social security program enacted by the commons in the dying days of the Bennett administration was nullified on appeal. It was ruled out partly by the judicial committee and partly by the Canadian Supreme court on the basis of judicial committee precedents.

Since then the appeal right has been both condemned and indorsed by legal experts in commons. Debate on a bill to abolish the appeals will begin in commons soon after the legislators return from Easter recess, only a month in advance of King George's scheduled arrival at Quebec.

The argument for the appeals is that they protect minority rights and guarantee consideration of cases by a body sufficiently distant to be politically disinterested. Against the appeals it is asserted that the judicial committee, through ignorance of Canadian problems, has distorted the tent of the Canadian constitution.

CHILD KILLED BY AUTO.

Rosiclare, Ill., April 8.—(AP)—Edna Mae, 2 years old, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. A. Knight, was killed today by an automobile backing out of a driveway at the home of relatives.

HEADLESS BODY OF WOMAN FOUND; MODEL MISSING

Havana Police Work on Strange Mystery.

BY GUSTAVO RENO.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

HAVANA, April 8.—A strange international crime in which an American woman was mysteriously murdered in what appeared to be a huge gambling swindle, taxed the cunning of Cuba's police tonight.

The woman was hacked to pieces. Parts of her body have been recovered, but the head is missing. Detectives said they were convinced the victim was Miss Kaye Gallegher, 26 years old, an auburn haired woman from Florida.

Complicating the mystery is the case of Miss Jane Pierce, an attractive model and friend of Miss Gallegher, who is missing and is being sought.

Manicure with Two Cars.

Miss Gallegher flew to Havana on Jan. 18 from Miami, where, police were told, she had been a manicure. Two days later two automobiles arrived in her name from Miami. The police wonder how a manicure could have maintained them.

In registering with the immigration authorities, Miss Gallegher declared she planned to stay at either the National or the Presidente hotel. Instead, she joined Charles Baxter, Andrew Chaborneau, J. Foster, and Pinkey Gallegher, Americans, and Juan Martinez and Fred and Adolfo Bosque, brothers, all Cubans.

Police assert that Baxter is wanted by American authorities. They added he operated a pool hall where a betting syndicate operated.

Women Hires 2 Maids.

Miss Gallegher, the police said, rented a house and hired two maids, telling them she was Baxter's wife and that he was a jocky. She also told them of importing two horses from Florida. The horses arrived. They were in Baxter's name but belonged to her, police said.

Two days later Miss Gallegher and some of the men she originally met established a business contact with Mark Stell, described as an American circulations agent. Police say he was a betting agent in the United States for Baxter and was engaged in other businesses.

Miss Gallegher went to Miami by boat on Feb. 4 but returned Feb. 7 by plane. With her was Miss Pierce. Another passenger was Edward Emberson, now thought by police to be an international spy. Nothing further was heard of the woman.

Her Absence Explained.

On March 9 parts of a woman's body were found in separated areas on the outskirts of Havana. Examination indicated the woman had been hacked while alive.

Among theories held by police is one that Miss Gallegher became involved with a ruthless gang and tricked it or knew too much. Another is that she was lured for her money, of which, it appears, she had considerable. Of all the men she associated with, only Adolfo Bosque is in custody. Most or all of the others have fled to the United States.

Bandit's Widow Captured

Estelle Mae Dickson, wife of Bennie Dickson, slain outlaw, demonstrating skill with firearms. She had no gun, however, when seized by G-men yesterday in Kansas City, Mo.

CAPTURE WIDOW OF SLAIN BANDIT IN KANSAS CITY

Unarmed, Mrs. Dickson Is Seized on Street.

Kansas City, Mo., April 8.—[Special.]—Agents of the Federal Bureau of Investigation captured Estelle Mae Dickson, 17 years old, widow of the slain outlaw, Bennie Dickson, on the street here today. She was unarmed.

Search for Mrs. Dickson had been concentrated in Missouri since Thursday night, after Dickson was shot to death as he stepped out of a sandwich shop in St. Louis.

Mrs. Dickson will be arraigned before the United States commissioner here on Monday, charged with having transported a stolen automobile across a state line. By Monday federal officials will have decided whether to try her in South Dakota for bank robbery or in Michigan for kidnaping.

Linked to Two Bank Holdups.

The Dicksons, both experts with firearms, were identified as the couple who held up the Corn Exchange Bank of Elkton, S. D., last Aug. 25 and stole $2,187. Next they were identified as the couple who robbed a branch of the Northwest Security bank in Brookings, S. D., on Oct. 31. They escaped with $17,500 in this raid.

Dickson and his wife fled from South Dakota, and a month after the second bank robbery, fought a gun battle with police in Leonidas, Mich. The Dicksons abandoned their automobile when fleeing from Michigan police because its description had been broadcast. Then they kidnaped two farmers in a car, driving the stolen automobile across the state line to South Bend, Ind., where the farmers were released and the Dicksons disappeared.

A coroner's jury in St. Louis today found federal agents were justified in killing Dickson.

At Jefferson City Sherif Carl Walz disclosed that Dickson had been identified in a plot to smuggle dynamite and arms into the Missouri state prison last September to enable prisoners to escape. The munitions were put in furniture which Dickson expected to be repaired in the prison shop where he formerly worked. Walz said he believed the purpose of the plot was to free Adam Richetti, who was executed in November for the Kansas City Union station murders.

Dynamite in Dickson House.

New Orleans, La., April 8.—(AP)—B. E. Sackett, agent in charge of the federal bureau of investigation here, said tonight F. B. I. men had found sixteen sticks of dynamite in the second of two houses in which the slain outlaw, Benny Dickson, and his wife resided there. He said the couple left a rooming house here for the apartment and remained there until last Tuesday.

Mob Sacks Jail in India; Beats 8 Police to Death

BOMBAY, India, April 8.—(AP)—Eight police and jail guards were beaten to death today by a mob of 1,000 natives who stormed and sacked the state jail at Ramdurg, capital of Ramdurg state, a small native principality about 300 miles southeast of Bombay.

2 FLYERS KILLED IN PLANE CRASH CN ILLINOIS FARM

Ship Goes Into Spin and Falls in Pasture.

Moline, Ill., April 8.—[U. P.]—Two youthful pilots were killed today when their airplane crashed on a knoll on a farm fourteen miles east of the airport here. The dead are Arnol Johnson, 25 years old, of Moline, and Allen Stamp, 24, of East Moline.

Both men held private pilot's licenses. Stamp had been flying for four years. Johnson had obtained his license only a few days ago.

Witnesses said the airplane, which had taken off from the Moline airport and was stunting, went into a spin at about 2,000 feet altitude. The pilot appeared to regain momentary control, but the ship went into a second spin at 300 feet, then crashed to the ground.

Plane Hits Mountain; Two Die.

Van, W. Va., April 8.—(AP)—Two men were killed and a third was seriously injured tonight when a cabin monoplane crashed into a mountainside three miles from here. Witnesses said the plane, flying through rain and fog, power dived from a height of between 1,000 and 2,000 feet.

The dead were Ted Leader, 34 years old, pilot and owner of the plane and a Charleston lumber and coal broker, and Del Macon, about 25, manager of a Charleston hotel. The injured man is Homer Davis, about 35, an airplane mechanic from Elkins, W. Va. One of his legs was fractured. The plane crashed in one of the wildest and most inaccessible sections of southern West Virginia. The wings of the plane lodged in a tree, but the fuselage crashed to earth.

One Killed; Three Land.

El Paso, Tex., April 8.—(AP)—Wreckage of the coast guard plane which crashed with the loss of one life Thursday night in a snowstorm thirteen miles southeast of Alpine was tonight located from the air. The plane and the pilot, Lieut. Robert L. Grantham, 31 years old, were burned. Ground parties will bring out the body tomorrow.

Three other members of the crew, all enlisted men, escaped by parachute. Grantham also bailed out, but his chute became entangled in the plane. They made their way to a ranch thirty miles south of Alpine and reported the accident. The survivors are Radioman James A. Dinan, 36, El Paso; Electrician's Mate Robert A. Paddon, 30, Mobile, Ala.; and Machinist's Mate Clifford J. Hudder, Gloucester, Mass.

Paddon suffered internal injuries and Hudder is ill from exposure. Dinan credited Grantham with dying a hero, holding the plane steady in the storm until his companions bailed out.

FOUND HANGING IN BASEMENT.

Thomas Murray, 63 years old, assistant janitor of the police building at 11th and State streets, was found hanging last night, partly strangled, from a rafter in the basement of his home at 3726 West 61st place. He was taken to the Holy Cross hospital.

FRANK J. LOESCH, VETERAN FOE OF CRIME, 87 TODAY

Frank J. Loesch, president emeritus of the Chicago Crime commission and original sponsor of the Ward Schnackenberg parole reform law, will be 87 years old today. Honors and celebrations have been numerous in his life, but for this occasion nothing has been planned.

Frank J. Loesch.

"I am feeling very well and thankful," he said yesterday in his apartment in the Drake hotel. "I expect to attend Easter services tomorrow morning and then spend the day at home. I shall go to the Fourth Presbyterian church, of which I have been an elder for twenty-five years. If a few kind friends drop in to visit me after that they will be welcome, but no special celebration has been arranged."

The veteran crime fighter, who has been a special state's attorney, a special assistant attorney general, and a first assistant state's attorney in charge of important prosecutions of election crooks, gangsters, and boodlers, retired last year from active leadership of the crime commission. He served also on President Hoover's law enforcement commission.

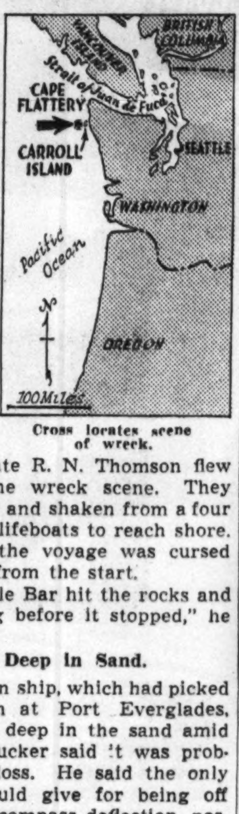
ANTI-BOOKIE LAW HELD ILLEGAL BY KANSAS JUDGE

Wichita, Kas., April 8. — (AP) — The 45 year old Kansas statute outlawing horse race "bookies" was held unconstitutional today by District Judge I. N. Williams. Dismissing state gambling charges against four men, Judge Williams ruled the law attempts to differentiate between race bookmakers inside and outside enclosed race tracks, banning the latter, and therefore is "class legislation."

SHIP HITS ROCKS; 37 SAVED AFTER 4 HOURS IN BOATS

Abandon Freighter Laden with Iron for Japs.

Seattle, Wash., April 8.—(AP)—The British freighter Temple Bar, bound for Japan with a cargo of scrap iron was wrecked today on the rocks near Carroll Island, thirty-five miles south of Cape Flattery. Capt. L. W. Tucker and his crew of thirty-six safely abandoned the ship.



Cross locates scene of wreck.

Tucker and First Mate R. N. Thomson flew here from the wreck scene. They were still wet and shaken from a four hour fight in lifeboats to reach shore. Tucker said the voyage was cursed with ill luck from the start.

"The Temple Bar hit the rocks and bumped along before it stopped," he said.

Ship Deep in Sand.

The 4,291 ton ship, which had picked up scrap iron at Port Everglades, Fla., was left deep in the sand amid the rocks. Tucker said it was probably a total loss. He said the only reason he could give for being off course was a compass deflection, possibly caused by the iron cargo.

Capt. Tucker, in one lifeboat with twenty-four men, and Thomson, in another boat with the remainder, cleared ship safely in ten minutes with the decks already awash in the early morning darkness.

Coast Guard Tows Boat.

They rode the heavy seas until daybreak. Thomson's boat found a way through the heavy surf, but a coast guard power boat towed the other to Quillayute.

"I'm not superstitious," said Tucker, "but a few more voyages like this one would make me feel that way. We were thirty-two days crossing the Atlantic. We had to go into drydock at Newport News."

GOV. HORNER BREAKS CAMP AT MIAMI, FLA., AND HEADS FOR HOME

Miami, Fla., April 8.—[Special.]—Gov. Henry Horner ended his four months' rest in Florida today and boarded a C. & E. I. train for Chicago, where he will arrive tomorrow evening.

A drizzling rain was falling when Mr. Horner, accompanied by a nurse, Miss Anne Lou Boozer, and John T. Casey, the governor's traveling secretary, left the Miami Beach home where he has been in virtual seclusion seeking to regain his health following a heart attack.

Physicians have permitted the governor to return to Illinois on condition that he does not attempt to take over all of his duties immediately. They ordered him to devote not more than an hour or two each day to state business until he has gained more strength.

State Highway Employe Is Killed at Grade Crossing

Morris, Ill., April 8.—[Special.]—Charles Lesch, 45 years old, a state highway employé of Kankakee, was killed today when the Rocky Mountain Limited on the Rock Island railroad struck a road grader which Lesch was driving over the Division street crossing here.

Accept No More Personal Checks for Tax Payments

Personal checks, no matter how good, will be accepted no longer by County Treasurer John Toman. He said yesterday that all tax payments must be made hereafter in cash, certified check, or money order. Toman said that when he took office last December he found that over $150,000 in personal checks had bounced back from the banks. June 1 is the tax deadline.

MORE THAN MORTALS

By CALEB

NOT even Christmas holds for "humanity, with all its hopes and all its fears," so many and inspiring significances as those which underlie the present day. For while Christmas communicates to innumerable millions remembrance of a unique Birth—the arrival of Easter in our midst reminds us that the once-accepted finality of Death has always been a myth . . . that regardless of individual creed or ritual, immortality is forever inherent in the mundane scheme.

As with Christmas, however, so the beginnings of this climax occasion in the world's calendar go a long way back into pagan times and places. In Ostara, or Eastre, the Norwegians hailed the divinity whose magic returned warmth, growth and light to the world after its protracted winter sleep. Authorities likewise trace our rabbit and egg symbols to the reappearance of fecundity and life which those objects innately represent in men's minds. The earliest Easter eggs' vivid colors are said to typify rays of the aurora borealis and spring dawns. Conflicting dates for the day were long observed—until ecclesiastical fiat finally established its current status.

Modernly, the phases of celebration most associated with Easter are threefold: festive, fashionable and philosophic. Egg-rolling on the White House lawn, frolicsome searching of mysterious nooks for many-hued ovals, extra egg-servings on the breakfast platter, and the delights—climate permitting—of sunshiny, open-air strolls . . . all are festive notes, amplified to the "fashionable" as promenaders parade their finery along Sunday boulevards to stately church portals.

But down underneath all superficial observances of the day abides its deeper and truer import. For Easter's miracle message to mortals is the reassurance that they are something more than mortals; children of Destiny—not mere fretful, doubting, futureless spirits prisoned in an unfeeling universe. For Easter—when its meaning is read aright—peculiarly reminds, or should remind, every human being of the potential for still finer things inherent in his most glaring imperfections . . . of the "resurrectibility" latent in man's buried hopes and aims, and their realization, often to a surprising degree, amid even the brevity of this present life.

With such a philosophy renewed in his consciousness, Easter imparts to every mortal the immortal rightness of existence—and gives a new glory to the reawakening of the world around him.

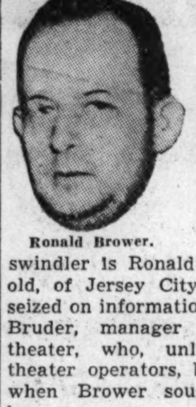
MOVIE MANAGER'S HUNCH JAILS A MASTER CON MAN

Crime Trail Criscrosses Entire Nation.

The suspicions of a Chicago theater manager early Wednesday ended the amazing criminal career of a de luxe con man, it became known last night. Hundreds of complaints had been registered against the man from many parts of the United States.



Ronald Brower.

The arrested swindler is Ronald Brower, 34 years old, of Jersey City, N. J. He was seized on information supplied by Roy Bruder, manager of the Chicago theater, who, unlike many other theater operators, became suspicious when Brower sought to rent the house.

Trail Crosses Nation.

The strange trail of Brower's crimes criscrosses the nation from Boston to Hollywood and from Seattle to Miami. It started when he became Pacific sales manager for the Philco Radio company and stayed long enough to learn the radio production and broadcasting business from A to Z.

For the last year he has been passing himself off as a factory representative of Philco, Howard, Zenith, Stewart-Warner, or any other radio maker whose name happened to come handy. One of his pet victims was the radio broadcasting studio. He would make it appear that he would sign a $100,000 contract for time on the air or agree to sponsor a fifty-two week program.

Then, in the flush of studio excitement over a big customer, he would let it be known that if any of the studio folk wanted a real radio at about a tenth of its actual value, he could fix that up, too. He would accept $6 to $10 from half a dozen of the employés and vanish. Sometimes he gave bad checks when the studio demanded a deposit on the contract.

Even Chartered Trains.

Once Brower went to the Union Pacific railroad and chartered two trains to take Philco talent on a cross-country tour. Another time he ordered $1,700 worth of hats for Philco. Again he bought $25,000 worth of toilet preparations from the Mennen company and had the goods sent to Philco. He chartered a boat to Bermuda for a radio company. He rented the Joseph Urban room of the Congress hotel. And each time he sold radios to employés and pocketed the cash.

But Manager Bruder had a hunch. He called the Philco company on the phone. "Hold him, please!" came the plea in return. So Detectives Edward Donovan and Albert Mallder of the confidence detail hurried to the theater. Brower had gone across the street for a sandwich. The detectives seized him as he left the restaurant. Hundreds of complaints have poured in to police since the arrest. The federal bureau of identification has been looking him over.

And Francis V. Healy, Chicago attorney for the Philco company, said last night was his first happy evening in a year.

Sues Ex-Grain King

(Story in adjoining column.)

Mrs. Pauline E. Howell in Superior court yesterday. She is asking separate maintenance from Thomas M. Howell, multimillionaire and former grain plunger.

THOMAS HOWELL, WIZARD OF GRAIN PIT, SUED BY WIFE

Support Money Asked for Self and Son.

Separate maintenance from Thomas M. Howell, multimillionaire capitalist and sportsman, was asked yesterday in Superior court by Mrs. Pauline E. Howell, 2708 Lakeview avenue. Mrs. Howell's bill also demanded an injunction against a number of large corporations and banks to prevent dispersion and concealment of Howell's assets.

Thomas M. Howell.

The bill placed these assets at more than 10 million dollars, but they were privately estimated at about 25 million. Howell made his fortune as a grain trader. On the Chicago Board of Trade his reputation as a plunger made him almost a legendary figure for many years.

Charges Desertion in 1934.

Mrs. Howell's bill, filed by Attorneys J. Frederick Reeve and J. B. Martineau of Kirkland, Fleming, Green, Martin & Ellis, does not ask any specific amount for the support of herself and a son, Thomas M. Jr., 18 years old. It asks, however, that there be proper and suitable provision, and charges that for the last few months Howell has failed to contribute anything to their support.

The bill charges that Howell deserted his wife in December, 1934, after seventeen years of married life. It asserts that he spends about a quarter of a million dollars a year on his home and his yacht, Thalia, on which he is now living off Miami Beach, Fla.

Stockholder in Two Banks.

Mrs. Howell's bill says that her husband is a stockholder in the First National Bank of Chicago, the Keeley Brewing company, the Texas Oil company, the Union Carbide Sales company, the Continental Illinois National Bank and Trust company, and in Canadian gold mining properties.

Howell lives lavishly on his half million dollar yacht, manned by a crew of twenty-two, according to the bill, and entertains many guests, some of whom are practically permanent. "The upkeep of the yacht and the continuous revelry and wassail aboard it costs more than $150,000 a year," the bill says.

GIRL, 19, SEIZED WITH BOGUS CHECK OUTFIT, ADMITS $1,500 FRAUDS

A comely young woman, 19 years old, confessed to Detectives Fred Sack and George Murphy of the Hudson avenue station yesterday that she cashed approximately ninety fraudulent checks in the city during the last eight months. She estimated that the proceeds totaled nearly $1,500. She said she spent this money for living expenses and parties.

Mary Baker.

She said she is Miss Mary Baker and that she formerly lived at 2728 Sheffield avenue. She took a book of checks from a former employer's office and made the checks out for between $15 and $20 each, she confessed.

When seized Friday, Miss Baker was carrying a suitcase with a stamping machine for filling in checks, spurious letters of identification, and seven blank checks. She said she had planned to quit when she cashed the seven checks.

PRESIDENT AGAIN DEMANDS EXTRA FUNDS FOR WPA

Shifts Responsibility for Any Cut to Congress.

BY WILLARD EDWARDS.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., April 8.—[Special.]—The senate heard today from President Roosevelt that the chief executive still is insistent upon an extra $150,000,000 for the Works Progress administration. Mr. Roosevelt again warned that the responsibility for a slash to $100,000,000 will rest upon congress.

Instead of choosing one of his congressional leaders to carry this message the President chose to transmit his latest demand for the full WPA appropriation through David Lasser, president of the Workers Alliance of America, an organization dominated by the communist party of America.

The senate was forced into consideration of the WPA appropriation on its first Saturday session of the year because of the refusal of Republican Minority Leader Charles L. McNary of Oregon to agree to a recess over the week-end.

Senator Reads Demand.

A telegram to Lasser from a presidential secretary at Warm Springs, Ga., where the President is vacationing, was read upon the senate floor by Senator James E. Murray [Dem., Mont.]. It was in the form of a Presidential notation to a secretary, transmitted verbatim, and read:

"Please tell Mr. David Lasser that the President has received his telegram in Georgia and feels as strongly as ever that the full amount should be appropriated and that the responsibility for any cut whatsoever must rest upon congress."

"Is there any reason now why congress should not appropriate the full amount?" inquired Murray, one of the bloc opposing the cut to $100,000,000.

There was no answer, but inquiry failed to reveal any change of sentiment on the part of two-thirds of the senate that the additional 100 million fund is sufficient for WPA needs until June 30.

500 Millions Balance.

The work relief agency now has an unexpended balance of more than 500 million dollars from previous appropriations.

The Roosevelt telegram was in response to a telegram from Lasser to the President, which stated that the senate administration leadership had agreed to the $100,000,000 figure and pleaded with the President to use his "great voice and influence" in a final effort to prevent the cut.

Majority Leader Alben W. Barkley [D., Ky.], who ordinarily reveals informal messages from the President, made no comment upon Mr. Roosevelt's choice of a medium for an expression of his opinion.

Filibuster Blocks Vote.

A filibuster by the group of senators in favor of the higher figure prevented a senate vote today. They stalled in the hope that President Roosevelt's return to Washington Monday morning from Warm Springs might have some effect upon the line-up in the senate.

Barkley finally obtained unanimous consent that the senate should vote on the Pepper amendment, calling for a $150,000,000 appropriation, at 2:0 p. m. Monday.

Senator Alva B. Adams [D., Colo.], floor manager for the bill, said: "This stalling is for the purpose of bringing the usual pressure to bear, but the 150 million dollar amendment will be beaten by a 2 to 1 vote."

Strange coincidences in the lives of two women were revealed yesterday when County Judge Edmund K. Jarecki signed adoption papers for nine children. The women were Mrs. Anna Urban Schmitz, 32 years old, of 14910 Lincoln street, and Mrs. Gracie Allen Adams Bradford, 36, of 50 West 159th street, both in Harvey.

The women had never met before but yesterday each learned that the other had lost her first husband in a factory fire in Harvey last year. Both have remarried and both had their children by their first marriages adopted by their second husbands.

Joseph Schmitz adopted the three children of his wife by her first husband, John Urban. The children are Lorraine Urban, 8 year old; Joan, 6, and Barbara Jean, 4. Mrs. Schmitz also adopted Claude, 4, and Richard, 8, Schmitz's children by his first wife.

Fernando H. Bradford adopted the four children of his wife by her former marriage to George Adams. They are James Adams, 13; Helen, 12; Vernon, 10, and Ralph, 4.

SLAYER SERVING LIFE SENTENCE ASKS FREEDOM

Makes His Third Appeal to Pardon Board.

Several Chicago murderers are among convicts in Illinois prisons whose applications for executive clemency were filed with the pardon board yesterday for hearing during the April term. Most prominent of the slayers is Samuel Howard Dorr, former insurance man, who was sentenced to life imprisonment in 1930 for the murder of William J. O'Brien, a street car conductor.

Mrs. Genevieve O'Brien, wife of the slain man, was accused with Dorr, but was given a separate trial and was acquitted. She admitted a clandestine romance with Dorr. His present petition to the pardon board is his third attempt to gain a commutation and be freed.

Vinci Seeks Freedom.

Another seeking release through pardon or commutation is Salvatore [Sam] Vinci, one of several brothers who achieved notoriety as bootleggers in the early days of prohibition. He was sentenced to twenty-six years' imprisonment for the murder of John Minatti, whom he shot to death as Minatti sat on the witness stand at an inquest into the murder of Vinci's brother, Mike.

Vinci went to prison March 1, 1926. With time off for good behavior he would be released July 1, 1940.

Another applicant was Russell McAtee, sentenced to sixty years for murder in 1933. He was convicted, with Kenneth Rucker, of the murder of a colored garage attendant during an attempted robbery. Rucker, who fired the fatal shot, was sentenced to 199 years.

Judge Opposes Clemency.

Judge Benjamin P. Epstein, who sentenced the two, wrote the pardon board opposing any clemency for McAtee. Judge Epstein said the two young men had committed many robberies while armed with sawed-off shotguns.

John L. Mizner, convicted in 1933 of strangling his sweetheart, Miss Amelia Sailly, is asking clemency. He was sentenced to twenty years.

Other petitioners are Ray Bullard, sentenced in 1928 to thirty years for killing a policeman; Joseph Cross, sentenced to nine months for malicious mischief, and John Faber, who was granted probation on a charge of contributing to the delinquency of a minor. Faber is seeking to clear his record, it was explained.

3 ADMIT KILLING GROCER IN HUNT FOR HIDDEN CASH

Three young colored men yesterday confessed to the fatal shooting and robbery last Tuesday of Samuel Rochman, 47 years old, a grocer at 3720 South State street. Rochman, who lived at 6117 Eberhart avenue, died yesterday in the Michael Reese hospital. In custody are Clarence Cook, 19 years old, 3638 South Dearborn street, formerly employed by Rochman; Cortell Samson, 20, of 3131 Calumet avenue, and James Roberts, 19, of 3702 South State street. They told Sergt. Edward Johnson they shot Rochman when he refused to disclose where he supposedly had hidden $300 in the store.

One of the performing Pallenberg bears which will appear with the Greater European circus at Chicago Stadium beginning April 14.

Tomorrow rehersals for the Greater European Olympia circus start in the Chicago Stadium, where its Chicago engagement opens Friday night. This European type circus goes in more heavily for human performers than animal acts. However, animal acts which will be seen in the two and a half hour program include elephants, horses, bears, dogs, and ponies.

Among the headliners of the show are the famous Wallenda troupe of high wire artists; Zacchini, the human cannon ball;, Fearless Florescue, the Helkivist fire divers from Sweden, Argentine gauchos, the Wong troupe from Shanghai, the Anteleks, and the Loyal Repenski troupe of equestrians from France. And there will be thirty-nine clowns.

FOUND DEAD ON SIDEWALK.

Austin Frazier, 65 years old, 4149 North Ashland avenue, was found dead of a heart attack early yesterday on a sidewalk next to the building at 3831 Clark street.

CALL COMMITTEE TO HALT ESCAPES AT ST. CHARLES

May Seek Legislature's Aid This Week.

State Senator Thomas P. Gunning [R., Princeton] yesterday summoned the committee investigating the St. Charles Training School for Boys to meet tomorrow afternoon in Springfield to consider bills to end easy escapes from the institution.

Thirty-three inmates have escaped since Jan. 1, the last four on Thursday night. They were recaptured after they had stolen an automobile and damaged several others.

"I realize that there will be a rebellion among residents in the St. Charles region unless something is done about the institution," Senator Gunning said. "Our committee will meet to discuss some measures. It is my hope they can be introduced in the legislature later in the week.

Tells Need for Haste.

"No one more than I realizes the seriousness of the St. Charles situation, nor the absolute necessity of the committee moving as rapidly as possible," Senator Gunning continued.

"I am going to Springfield Monday to confer with Attorney General Cassidy on several suggestions for legislation that the committee has considered. I hope to be able to advise the committee later in the day concerning any legal objections that may stand in our way.

"The citizens of the Fox River valley are terribly concerned with these frequent escapes and it is the duty of the legislature to help them as soon as it can.

"One thing we should do is to halt the courts from sending criminally inclined boys to St. Charles, which is not walled. They are the ones who cause the trouble and they should not be sent to the school.

"We have a choice of two actions in dealing with the objectionable type already in St. Charles—wall a part of that institution or follow the plan of A. L. Bowen, director of welfare, and construct a new cell house at Pontiac prison for the exclusive incarceration of criminally inclined boys.

"One legal difficulty confronts the second plan. If a new cell house is built for these boys at Pontiac, the problem is how to legally transfer them to it when they were sentenced to St. Charles."

William T. Harmon, superintendent of St. Charles, was considering yesterday whether to turn the four latest escapees over to Kane county authorities for their Thursday night depredations. Three of the boys may be charged with stealing an automobile, and the fourth with attempted theft.

Flee to Chicago.

The three who stole a car and fled to Chicago, where they were arrested, were Talbert Jennings, sentenced from Chicago, and Sylvester Taylor and Hobart Lambert, both of Cairo. The fourth, Anthony Guidry of Chicago, was caught as he attempted to steal the automobile of Mayor I. G. Langum of St. Charles. All of the boys are in their late 'teens and all are colored.

The four broke out of the school hospital, where they supposedly were suffering from colds. Taylor clubbed the night watchman with a cleaning brush, then he and his companions stole the guard's keys.

The Gunning committe has held several meetings at the school during the last few weeks.

U. S. BRINGS OUT HIDDEN FIGURES IN TORRIO TRIAL

New York, April 8.—[Special.]—The government broke away from traditional courtroom procedure today and demonstrated to the John Torrio jury how its treasury agents discovered alleged incriminating entries in the books of the Prendergast-Davies liquor company.

The books were shown to the jury. Then James W. Sullivan, special internal revenue agent, leaned across the rail and daubed a solution of ammonium sulphide on page after page.

After each daubing letters and figures appeared. They showed credits to "J. T." The government contends that "J. T." is Torrio and that he covered up his profits in Prendergast-Davies deals from 1933 to 1935 in order to avoid payment of $86,000 in income taxes.

Torrio's lawyer, Max D. Steuer, objected to the demonstration, but was overruled by Judge John W. Clancy.

On cross-examination. Steuer sought to bring out that the eradicated items were for checks which "bounced" after being credited in the books.

BARBARA HUTTON AND SON, 3, SAIL FOR NEW YORK

SOUTHAMPTON, England, April 8.—(AP)—Countess Haugwitz-Reventlow, dime store heiress, and her 3 year old son Lance sailed today for New York aboard the liner Aquitania.

The former Barbara Hutton secretly boarded the ship with her son and instructed a steward to inform all callers that she would not receive them.

In London it was understood the countess would visit her father Franklyn L. Hutton.

WOOD, SLATED TO DIE FRIDAY, ASKS CLEMENCY

Springfield, Ill., April 8.—(AP)—Elvin Wood, 36 years old, a farmer of Morris, Ill., under sentence to die Friday in the electric chair in Joliet prison for slaying his lifelong friend and neighbor, Abner Nelson, will ask clemency at a hearing of the state pardon board Tuesday.

Wood shot his bachelor neighbor and threw his body into the Illinois river Feb. 19 in a ransom plot. He pleaded guilty to the crime. In sentencing Wood at Morris Judge Hay likened the crime to that of Macbeth.

COUNTY SCHOOL DISTRICTS ELECT BOARD MEMBERS

Spirited Races in Many of 221 Areas.

School board officials were elected in 221 school and township districts in Cook county yesterday. The districts include 173 grade schools and 48 high schools.

Contests, some of them spirited, were waged in almost half the 221 districts, mostly in the western and southern areas of the county. There were few contests on the north shore.

Hot Contest in Cicero.

One of the hottest contests took place in the J. Sterling Morton High school district in Cicero and Berwyn. Richard W. Hoffman, a former board president, and Charles J. Nowack were elected to vacancies, defeating three rival candidates, one an independent. The main issue was the recent threat of the North Central association to drop the school from the accredited list. Only last week the association allowed the school another year of grace.

Clifford L. Aulwurm was elected to a vacancy on the board of the Blue Island Community High school, which was recently closed for lack of funds. Aulwurm has promised to campaign for a high school tax rate to reopen the school.

Mixup in Evanston.

A curious problem developed in the election to fill three board vacancies at Evanston grade school No. 75. There were three regular candidates, but 445 voters wrote in the name of a fourth, Dr. Thornton Merrian. Officials ruled that 124 ballots were not marked clearly and accordingly classed them as doubtful. Only 78 votes separated the lowest and highest candidates. The school officials will try to decide the three winners next week. Hugh W. McCulloch, unopposed for the board presidency, was elected.

The results:

SCHOOLS INSTALL FAILURE INDEX TO CURB 'FLUNKING'

Plan to Aid All Pupils as Load Increases.

From now on parents of high school pupils will have no difficulty determining why their young offspring are failing in Latin or history or chemistry.

No longer will teachers be forced to recall from memory the shortcomings of individual pupils as irate parents demand to know why their child is flunking—or has flunked.

For detailed data on the reasons for each student's failure will be posted in black and white on a card in the office of the principal of each school. And, if supplementary information is necessary, a conference will be arranged between the parents, the principal, and the teacher, with the pupil as exhibit A and the card as exhibit B.

Aim Is to Help Pupils.

Superintendent of Schools William H. Johnson announced yesterday that this new "high school report on subject failure" card index system is now in use in all high schools.

"We have restored the four major subjects requirement in the schools, starting next September," Johnson said. "Pupils previously carried three major subjects. Now, if pupils fail, we want to help them as much as possible so they can carry the additional load and stay in school. To help the pupil, a proper record must be kept of the reason the pupil is failing and an effort made to correct that difficulty."

Cards Go Into Details.

The failure card provides a space for the name of the pupil and subject. It then lists several possible reasons for the pupil's poor progress. The proper reason, or reasons, is to be checked by the teachers.

Possible reasons for failure, according to the card, are: Too many outside activities; does not do required work; emotional maladjustment; physical maladjustment; employed after school; lack of coöperation; excessive absence; home conditions; poor reader; lack of initiative, and indifferent attitude.

A space is also provided for the teacher to tell what she did to help the student. Above that space the card reads, "Be specific." Space for the principal's disposition of the case is on the back of the card.

A Better Deal for New Car Buyers

Preferred Buyers Plan

TRADE-MARK REGISTERED

Lowest in Cost Highest in Value

NOTHING LIKE THIS BEFORE! Up to now, finance sources have not given proper recognition to the fact that the chance for loss decreases as the down payment on a new car increases. PREFERRED BUYERS PLAN rewards the buyer who makes a larger down payment by giving him a lower rate.

Thus, the larger the down payment, the less the risk, and the lower the finance cost. This effects savings of 33-1/3% to 50% for many buyers. Yet with even the smallest down payment, the rate is no higher than the former, lowest cost. Each buyer pays a rate proper for his own case. That's fair to everyone!

Conserves Your Credit

Under the PREFERRED BUYERS PLAN you do business with your regular car dealer. You do not borrow the unpaid balance. Instead you buy your car under an installment contract. Thus you conserve your bank credit and borrowing power for unforeseen personal emergencies.

And another feature — you get everything at one place, at one time, at one low cost: The car of your selection, complete insurance protection at established rates for this area, plus lowest cost financing — all in one "package." And you see what you are getting — know what you are paying for it. Everything is above-board and clear.

Liberal Policies Protect You

General Finance Corporation's treatment of customers is frank, generous and considerate in all respects. These points summarize its liberal attitude: (1) Generous extension of payment dates in time of stress; (2) Finance charge rebate if contract is paid before maturity; (3) In the event of accident, repair bills below minimum insurance coverage (deductible type policy) financed without charge; (4) Special consideration in the case of illness or unemployment — real cooperation before repossession.

Available at ANY Dealer's

Remember, you can buy any make of car under PREFERRED BUYERS PLAN. And you can do business with any dealer.

Study the table of cost savings. See what PREFERRED BUYERS PLAN means to you in dollars and cents saved. Then ask your dealer for it — and, to receive all its benefits, be sure it is PREFERRED BUYERS PLAN that you are getting.

ALD. KELLS GETS COUNCIL'S TRAFIC COMMITTEE POST

Awarded Chairmanship at French Lick Parley.

BY WILLIAM STRAND.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Frenck Lick Springs, Ind., April 8.—[Special.]—The first of six committee chairmanship vacancies caused by defeats of aldermen in the recent city election was filled tonight by the committee on committees meeting here to organize the new Chicago city council. The chairmanship was the prized post at the head of the trafic committee, and it went to Ald. George D. Kells of the 28th ward.

But before Kells' selection was assured, members of the council organizing committee battled through two turbulent sessions. Each of the five aldermen on the organization committee here had a candidate and for several hours none was willing to accept a compromise.

Ald. Arthur G. Lindell [9th], who has served as vice chairman of the trafic committee, claimed the post as his because of his experience. Ald. James R. Quinn [50th] asserted that the post should go to a north sider.

Massen a North Sider.

Quinn pointed out that the chairmanship formerly was held by Ald. John A. Massen [48th], who was eliminated in the election. Ald. J. P. Rostenkowski [32d] wanted some one from the northwest side to get it.

Ald. J. M. Arvey [24th], chairman, insisted that because of the recognized trafic needs of the west side, the vacancy should be filled by a representative from that section. After angry debate with the other aldermen, he succeeded in obtaining unanimous consent to the Kells appointment.

Ald. Massen took over the trafic committee when it was a relatively unimportant assignment. In ten years he developed it into one of the key committees. Now with bills pending before the legislature which would enable the city to build 100 million dollars' worth of super highways, it has become one of the choice opportunities for a council member to make a showing.

It has other attractions, too, including a $31,000 appropriation, a spacious office and jobs to fill on a technical staf.

Bow to School Vote.

Earlier the committee on committees took official notice of the part that the public schools played in the recent campaign. The aldermen made several changes in the council committee on schools, fire, and civil service designed to prod it out of its lethargy. Six of the newly elected aldermen were assigned to it, including Ald. Paul H. Douglas [5th] economics professor at the University of Chicago.

The new members, besides Prof. Douglas, who were slated to go on the committee are: Alds. A. H. Cohen [4th], R. E. Olin [8th], P. S. Smith [6th], B. J. O'Halloran [18th], and Vincent Zwiefka [33d]. Cohen, Olin, and Smith are Republicans, thus giving the reorganization the appearance of being nonpartisan.

SEES A BODY PUT INTO TRUNK, BUT PASTOR EXPLAINS

Francis Smith, 2729 Hirsch street, burst into the West North avenue police station yesterday and exclaimed, "I just saw some people stuffing the body of a woman in an automobile trunk at Sacramento boulevard and Chicago avenue."

Sergt. Joseph Murrin traced the automobile license number to the Rev. Paul Allen, pastor of the Judson Baptist church in Oak Park. True enough, explained the minister over the telephone, but it was just a bit of high spirited fun by some of his young people, returning from a meeting.

The young woman in question was Miss Eleanor Peters, 17 years old, 5959 Augusta avenue, and quite alive. Her fellow church friends threatened jokingly to put her in the trunk if she continued to blow the automobile horn. She continued. They carried out their threat, but let her out after a mile ride, the Rev. Mr. Allen said.

Police to Launch Auto License Drive Tomorrow

Police will start a drive tomorrow on motorists who have failed to get state and city auto licenses for 1939, Police Commissioner Allman said yesterday. At first, he said, officers will merely urge motorists to get their licenses immediately. In the near future, however, they will begin to arrest those without licenses. Yesterday 3,063 city licenses were issued, making a total of 406,050 so far this year, compared with 511,985 on the same date last year.

POLICE ANSWER PROTEST IN GIRL'S DEATH AT CORNER

Tell Precautions Taken in Shifting Patrolman.

Capt. James Fleming of the Gresham police station told at an inquest yesterday what precautions he had taken to protect school children at a crossing near the Foster Park Elementary school.

The inquest was into the death of Joan Peterson, 8 years old, 8811 South Wood street, who was injured fatally by an automobile last Monday at the crossing, 87th and Wood streets. The driver, Frank Finley of 8636 Union avenue, was present at the hearing.

Explains Police Transfer.

Capt. Fleming said he had only twenty-four uniformed men to guard thirty-four school crossings in his district and that on March 15, to serve both the Foster Park school and St. Ethelreda's, a parochial school two blocks away at 88th and Paulina streets, he stationed a policeman midway, at 87th street and Hermitage avenue. The policeman previously had been stationed at 87th and Wood. Capt. Fleming said officials of both schools agreed after the transfer to instruct the children to go to the Hermitage avenue crossing, which is a short block from each school.

Mrs. H. A. Andreson, president of the Foster Park Parent-Teacher association, said she learned that the pupils were not notified of the change until two days after the fatal accident. Mrs. Andreson declared that all mothers wanted better protection for the children at the crossings. Deputy Coroner Lawrence P. Rasmussen asked police to find more witnesses and the inquest was continued until Thursday.

Killed on Visit to Minnesota.

Loren Brandhagen, 11 years old, son of Mr. and Mrs. Arley C. Brandhagen of 668 May street, Elgin, was killed by an automobile in Minneapolis, Minn., Friday night, while on a visit there.

Ollie O'Neill, 37 years old, 7139 South Park avenue, was fatally injured last night when he was run down by an automobile in front of 8846 Buffalo avenue. He died in the South Chicago hospital early today. Police held the driver, Walter Warzynski, 23, of 8330 Manistee avenue.

Frank Elgin, 32 years old, a steel inspector, was critically injured last night when he was run down by a motor truck at Madison street and Western avenue. He became unconscious before he could give police his address. He was taken to the County hospital. The truck driver was Robert Ozgena, 24, of 400 East 130th street.

Up to 2 p. m. yesterday 240 persons had been killed by automobiles in Cook county since Jan. 1. Of these, 188 were killed in Chicago, where 4,916 were injured in the same period.

URGE CHEMICAL TESTS FOR DRUNK DRIVING SUSPECTS

Ability to walk a chalk line and to speak clearly will be of no help to drunken drivers if a bill to be introduced in the general assembly next week, becomes law. The bill would make chemical tests for sobriety admissable as trial evidence.

Chief Justice Harry H. Porter of the Evanston Municipal court, who drew the bill, said yesterday that it will be taken before the legislature by Representative George H. Smith [D., Chicago]. Judge Porter is chairman of the chemical tests committee of the National Safety council. A similar measure was passed in Indiana last month.

If the chemical test of saliva, breath, or other body substance showed the presence of .15 of 1 per cent of alcohol in a driver's blood, it would be considered evidence that the defendant was sufficiently intoxicated to impair his driving ability. Between .05 and .15 of 1 per cent would be considered as not conclusive proof of drunkenness.

Sees Wife Fall to Death as He Struggles with Door

As James Hauser struggled yesterday to force open a latched door, he saw his wife, Margaret, 55 years old, fall to her death from their apartment on the fourth floor of the Montrose Beach hotel, 925 Montrose avenue. The door was chained. Mrs. Hauser had been suffering from anemia. A coroner's jury was unable to decide whether her death was an accident or suicide.

WESTERN EUROPE UNITES.

Belgium, the Netherlands, and Switzerland are taking steps to defend themselves. Belgium has canceled the leaves of soldiers on frontier duty. Holland has done likewise. The Swiss are strengthening their army and are watching the German and Italian borders with more than ordinary alertness.

Ominous as all this sounds, it will be read with satisfaction by American-Americans. Here is the first evidence that the western powers in Europe are at last awakening to their own responsibility for their own safety. After screaming for Americans to do their fighting for them, as we did in the last war, which Holland and Switzerland avoided and from which England and France seized the spoils, provoking the present war crisis, western Europe is at last preparing to fight its own battles.

America is not directly threatened by Germany and Italy and only the deceitful pretend to think it is. The German and Italian navies combined cannot touch us and their air fleets are not designed to fly the ocean. Without command of the sea and the air, the axis powers cannot even dream of attacking us and, of course, they are not dreaming of doing so. A deliberate attempt has been made by American citizen agents of foreign powers to frighten the American people into an alliance with the so-called democracies. The campaign of fear has served the purposes of England and France, of course, and it has been most useful, also, to Mr. Roosevelt, who has done much to whip it up in the hope that the war scare would take attention from the corruption, incompetence, and failures of his administration.

America is not directly threatened, but Holland, Belgium, and Switzerland are not equally fortunate. If Germany and Italy move to the west the buffer countries will be in the line of fire. They have an immediate and real interest in allying themselves with Britain and France for purposes of defense.

The German and Italian planes can bomb Antwerp, Brussels, The Hague, Amsterdam, Rotterdam, Geneva, and Basel. The German submarines can attack Belgium and Dutch shipping and seek to blockade the Rhine ports. The Germans do envy Belgium and Holland their great colonial empires and their gold reserves, and no doubt Herr Hitler has often thought how much better it would be if Germany owned the oil which Holland owns in the far east and the rich African territories which Belgium rules.

For all of these reasons it is only common sense for the western powers, great and small, to combine if they believe themselves imperiled and really wish to save themselves and their empires. In such a war America has no place. And American help is not needed. The combined strength in men, in money, in industrial power, of the countries which live in the shadow of the Berlin-Rome axis is ample to ward off any blow which may be delivered at them. It has been reckoned that the western powers and their allies to the east of Germany outnumber the potential enemy three to one, and their economic and military predominance is even greater.

The news that Holland, Belgium, and Switzerland are preparing to resist is welcome in America. It means that the great drive of British and French propaganda conducted by Americans of foreign loyalties for American support may be dropped in favor of a more realistic dependence upon European men and money to fight a European war.

THE CIVILIAN TRAINING CAMPS.

While congress is dealing with the President's large proposals for the expansion and improvement of national armament, it will be interesting to observe the fate of less spectacular elements of our military system, as for example the system of partial civilian training through the military training camps.

The camps have been an unquestioned success. They have in successive summers provided not only rudimentary military instruction to thousands of our youth but also wholesome and interesting vacations. They have fostered patriotism among young Americans and provided an experience which will benefit them morally and physically. They have demonstrated their usefulness to the individual and the nation.

It is encouraging to note that each year an increasing number of young Americans apply for the privilege of attending the camps. If congress appreciated their value to youth and to the nation, no fit applicant would ever be turned away. There always have been more applicants than had been provided for. Now that we are being exhorted to approve enormous expenditures for armament, congress should revise the policy which has denied the camps to so many deserving youths and make provisions for an enrollment at least as large as past experience has shown to be necessary.

As a factor in civilian preparedness the camps deserve liberal support. They are even more useful for their service to youth and the nation in fostering manly ideals.

EASTER.

Never within this generation has the message which Easter brings to troubled humanity come with deeper meaning and greater urgency than it carries today—peace and good will among men. Yet black clouds of impending destroying war hang over great nations and threaten the end of what we call civilization. Persecution, intolerance, hatreds, and ruthless ambitions wrack the spirit of men. Everywhere the peoples stagger under ever heavier burdens and despair darkens the hope which spring's renewal has through the ages brought to troubled mankind.

Yet the hope of the heart will not die. An unconquerable truth is in the wisdom of Christ's message given from the mountainside 2,000 years ago, living through the generations of men's neglect and bitter tribulation.

THE DEGENERATION OF GOVERNMENT.

The Nazis have what would be properly called an idiotology of national and racial fanaticism. Hitler believes that masses are more easily moved and managed by appeals to prejudice and hatred than by any other influence. The purposes served by this cool headed development of passion are becoming increasingly apparent. The objective of the calculated frenzy is simply robbery.

When Hitler took Austria he, of course, grabbed the Austrian gold reserve. He also repudiated the Austrian obligations. He needed the gold more than he needed the additional Germans. The money alone would have been sufficient reason for the Nazi action, if there had been no other. The taking of Czecho-Slovakian resources was covered by political reasons, but here again the taking of the property was sufficient itself.

The racial fury against the Jews is directed to the robbery of them. The 400 million dollar fine was only the beginning of the looting which will take all their goods before they are thrown out upon the world to seek refuge provided for them by other nations.

Probably the most startling phenomenon of modern times has been the progressive degeneracy of government. It has been revealed most clearly and strikingly in the autocratic states which sprang up on the ruins of the hopeless post-war democracies. Unfortunately, it is not limited to them, but nowhere else has it had such a vivid illustration. In Russia Stalin revived the terror after nearly twenty years of soviet administration in such a fashion as to indicate that he had only waited to grow bold enough to commit the murders which were instinctive with him. The evolution of a tyrant is charted in his life between 1927 and the present time. The despot of 1927 was wavering and experimental. The despot of 1938 has absolute power, is unrestrained, and holds every man's life at his whim and pleasure.

Mussolini, a little over ten years ago, was considerate of public opinion. It will be remembered that the murder of the Socialist deputy, Matteotti, alarmed him. There was a time when it was far from certain that it would not overthrow him. His probable complicity in it was a grave political issue in Italy. He would be indifferent to such a situation now. There are no restraints in his domestic or foreign outgivings. When he had gained courage to be what absolutism requires he could take Ethiopia, send submarines to commit piracy in the Mediterranean, troops to fight in Spain, and airplanes to gain technical experience in bombing Spanish cities.

As the world looks back at Hitler it can hardly criticize itself for not seeing in 1933 the course of evolution to be taken by the despot who is now loose as a murderous despoiler of the weak and unprotected. The degeneration of Stalin, Mussolini, and Hitler by various stages of absolutism from pretenses of civilization to the candid savagery of primitive ferocity is a shocking challenge of the status of modern man. But, unfortunately, Russia, Italy, and Germany do not tell the whole story of the corruption of modern times. This hemisphere has not escaped.

Governments which are supposed to represent the sovereign power of the people are supposed also to be guided by the highest principles to which the people are committed. Because they have supreme power they are supposed to act in the highest justice and morality. Power without justice becomes intolerable. The governments of the Americas, in many instances—our own not excepted—have reëstablished the doctrin that might makes right and that the individual has no cause in law or equity against the determination of governments once set in motion.

We protest the action of Mexico in disposing of property rights without consideration for the victims, but we do not know how to explain the same acts when they are committed by our own government. It may be, indeed, that everywhere autocratic or would-be autocratic governments agree that the way to despoil is first to besmirch. First the victims are to be deprived of reputation and character and then they are to be robbed.

If our government could make a better plea of innocence, could better prove its lack of resemblance to the notoriously immoral rulers, Americans would feel better satisfied with their position in the society of nations.

Governments, corrupted at the top, descend with accelerated pace into disgrace and immorality where power gives the possessor of it the right to rob and enrich himself with the goods of people who cannot resist him.

Nazi Germany is at present in the unenviable position of chiefly exemplifying this modern corruption of power and force, but there are many emulators, and the faith of man gropes for a sign that all this is ephemeral and that humanity will emerge into an era not dominated by fanaticism turned to self-aggrandizement and enrichment.

THE MAGIC CITY OF RIO

BY CAPT. M. M. CORPENING.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

RIO DE JANEIRO.—[By Mail.]—The plane trip from Buenos Aires offers a view of the famous Iguassu falls, but arriving here one sees the most fascinating sight in South America, the harbor and city of Rio de Janeiro.

Two planes a week make the 1,250 mile trip from Buenos Aires to Rio. One flies direct and the other makes a stop half way at Asuncion, Paraguay.

Flying east from Asuncion the Iguassu falls are sighted just after crossing the Brazilian border. Many persons have said they eclipse Niagara. That is absurd. Iguassu falls are beautiful and well worth the effort to see. In their hairpin formation and divisions of water, they do have a certain charm. They are in the "wilds" and have the advantage of not being commercialized, but they lack the mighty majesty of Niagara.

Another unique sight on the flight is the view of two rivers, running almost parallel, one very muddy and the other clear.

Sao Paulo, Brazil's second largest city, also is a stop on the route. The airport, to the west and on a higher elevation than the port city, is a model of efficiency with a restaurant and lounges. A beautiful garden surrounds the building and a swimming pool is nearby. From the air above Sao Paulo one sees a modernistic thirty story skyscraper beside an old English style castle. The variations continue throughout.

Leaving Sao Paulo, the course goes up over a rugged mountain pass to the northeast. The Atlantic appears through heavy fog banks. Then suddenly, set in the rocky shoreline, the romantic city of Rio comes into view.

In the harbor are an uncanny assortment of rocky islets. Flanking the water are queerly contoured mountains. Variegated colors blend into each other both on land and sea.

The harbor is landlocked, fifteen miles long and two to seven miles wide. The city, or rather the main part of it, is situated on the southern slopes of a narrow alluvial strip between the mountains and sea. The rich vegetation of the hillsides contrasts with the expanses of gray rock.

Dominating the scene are the famous granite cone, "Sugar Loaf" mountain, rising up 1,230 feet above the bay, and big Corcorado, a jagged peak going up from the middle of the city 2,300 feet. There are other eminences, including Tijuca, the highest point in the foreground, and, thirty miles away, rise the almost fantastic shapes of Organ mountains with the "Five Fingers of God."

The promenade facing the sea is of white marble and five miles long. We land and take a look at the city. Many of the buildings are palatial, and there are many beautiful skyscrapers. Large statues and fountains are numerous everywhere. Palm trees and flowers are abundant.

Some of the broader avenues have five rows of sizable trees—on both sides of the walks and in the center of the driveway. They add much to the atmosphere and beauty of the city. Open air cafés are numerous. The quality of food is above the average of South American cities.

Much building activity is seen, both private and public. Apparently the city continues in a constant state of remodeling and beautifying.

With a population of 1,800,000, Rio is the second largest city in South America and is one of the healthiest cities in the tropics. Everything is spotlessly clean. It does get pretty hot here during the summer months [December to March] but the nights are comfortable and many nice wide beaches take care of the day.

The main thoroughfare is the Avenida Rio Branco, which is 108 feet wide. Boulevards are numerous and trafic is well handled. Motorists go fast on the open streets and, of course, follow the usual Spanish custom of driving with their horns.

Lottery and gambling operate by consent of the government and flourish. The many gambling places remind one of Reno. Some of the casinos are elaborately furnished and decorated. Endless rows of tables offer every conceivable game of chance. Brazilians are the chief players rather than visitors.

The National theater and botanical gardens are places of popular interest. Another is an incline railway.

The most interesting side trip is to Petropolis, fifty miles to the northwest, in mountains of 3,000 feet altitude. It is reached by a concrete highway forty feet wide which is the last word in road building. It has good curbs, drains and guard rails.

Winding up the mountain on an easy grade is delightful. One sees deep purple vegetation and bright yellow trees.

Artificial terrace after terrace, some of rock and some of dirt, add to the panorama. The curves are gentle. The white outline of the concrete guard rails makes an interesting picture, zigzagging up the green mountainside.

Petropolis is the summer resort of Rio. The president lives here during the hot weather. The temperature is from 12 to 15 degrees cooler than in Rio. Old fashioned two horse phaetons predominate in the streets. Little pack mule trains serve for merchant transportation.

If a visitor is fortunate enough to be welcomed by the president, a treat is in store. A courteous aid ushers one through to the inner sanctuary where the president's delightful daughter and private secretary greets one cordially in perfect English. [She spent several years touring the United States.]

One immediately senses the atmosphere of cordiality and hospitality that permeates the place. The business efficiency and easy, gentle poise of the hostess is impressive. Soon a buzzer sounds and the young lady leads you through several other doors to the president. The stack of papers in front of him is about eight inches thick. Upon being told through his daughter, as interpreter, that the hospitality of Brazil made one feel at home, the president immediately responded:

"You ARE at home in Brazil."

Editorial of the Day

DANGER OF WHOLESALE ALCATRAZ ESCAPE.

[San Francisco Chronicle.]

Since Alcatraz Island is right in San Francisco's front yard, the fear of wholesale escape expressed by James V. Bennett, director of federal prisons, is not reassuring to this community.

Mr. Bennett told a congressional committee that he is not greatly worried about individual escapes. But he said that there is constant danger of the convict population seizing the island, holding the personnel as hostages and using violent methods to effect a general delivery. "There is no telling what might happen," Mr. Bennett said.

Mr. Bennett's remedy is to strengthen the prison. To San Francisco it seems more feasible to put the prison for desperate characters in a more appropriate location. The Farallone Islands would be preferable to having the grim reminder in the middle of San Francisco bay. Even better would be Fort Jefferson, an impregnable stone fortress on the Dry Tortugas Island, sixty-five miles off Key West, Florida. No escaper ever tried to swim through the shark and barracuda infested waters that surround this old military prison. It would be a much better location than San Francisco for the institution Mr. Bennett specifies, "to segregate desperate, long term offenders, problem cases who destroy the morale of other institutions." We do not enjoy the possibility of being suddenly invaded by a band of human tigers from Alcatraz.

How to Keep Well By Dr. Irving S. Cutter

HEALTH IS WEALTH

DOES CHEST PAIN ALWAYS MEAN THE HEART?

THERE are numerous conditions—in which pain occurs in the region of the heart—that have nothing whatever to do with the "pump" itself or with its blood supply. In fact, it has been aptly said that this symptom, as a rule, is not due to heart disease. For instance, intercostal neuralgia or twinges incident to chronic arthritis are not related to cardiac trouble. Some of those who experience occasional shooting or stabbing distress in the chest or the left shoulder may make a self-diagnosis of angina pectoris. In such individuals angina becomes a phobia which may prove fully as disabling as if the heart were really affected.

True angina is an indication that the heart muscle is fatigued. It is the red signal of danger and means STOP! This discomfort may be due to overexertion or to inadequate nourishment to the tissues. Any disturbance of the channels feeding the heart [coronary vessels] that has the effect of decreasing the quantity of blood that reaches this organ may give rise to pangs. Arteriosclerosis—which develops slowly but surely—may narrow the conduits to the muscle and hence cause a real deficiency in the circulation.

Pain actually arising in the heart is excruciating in character and is reflected to the left shoulder and down the left arm. Sometimes it may be noted in both shoulders and be felt along both arms. Now and then it is complained of in the lower end of the sternum or breastbone, and is frequently misinterpreted as of stomach origin. It may not be of long duration, although in certain cases the attacks may last for two or three hours, or even longer. The acute seizure, however, usually subsides after a short period, though it may be followed by a dull, steady ache that continues for some time. If there is a definite shutting off or plugging of some of the nutrient vessels, such as occurs in coronary occlusion, the soreness will continue much longer.

Angina pectoris and coronary disease differ in that the patient with the former rarely wants to stir; in fact, he fears to make the slightest movement. The victim of the latter, on the other hand, may alter his position frequently or even walk about in the hope that some change will afford relief.

It has been shown experimentally that a reduced blood flow through the muscle will cause pain. In these studies it was found that the annoyance varied with the amount of tissue that had been deprived of sustenance. In other words, the greater the interference with the circulation, the greater the difficulty. The conclusion is that the episodes are the result of insufficient nutrition to the muscle and may ensue whenever the heart is called upon for unusual exertion and fails to receive enough blood to meet the emergency. The short, sharp spasm felt sometimes by athletes subsequent to extraordinary muscular effort may be thus explained.

Sufferers from actual heart pain should shun muscular activity, increase the hours of rest in bed, avoid overeating and emotional stress, give strict attention to the alleviation of any infection that will increase the progress of arteriosclerosis or cause degeneration of the muscle, and lessen the mental and physical load.

Nitroglycerin and amyl nitrite are considered to be our best remedies, as they are easy of administration. Many afflicted persons carry "nitro" tablets in their pockets. When a sense of constriction arises one is placed under the tongue. The object, of course, is to dilate blood pathways.

"SLEEPY HEAD."

B. F. writes: I am in good health and of average intelligence. I am handicapped in my career [artist and actor] by an inability to get up early. I don't know whether it is habit or a physical condition, but I cannot rise before noon. If I do make myself get up I cannot function—my eyes are heavy, my body tired, and my will power nil. This happens no matter how early I go to bed.

REPLY.

What an ideal state of affairs for a night watchman. This is probably a habit. Rearrange your hours so that you go to bed earlier regularly. A cold shower will chase away all ideas of returning to your downy couch. A physical examination will reveal whether or not your glands are sleepy, too.

CARRIERS.

Mrs. F. writes: I would like some information about germ carriers. A woman who has lost two husbands from tuberculosis now has full charge of her grandchild, who seems to be very delicate. Is there such a thing as a germ carrier?

REPLY.

There are many persons who are carriers, which means that—while healthy themselves—they are able to infect others. This is not the case with tuberculosis, however. If an individual has a positive sputum he has an active case of the disease.

MAKE IT A BIG ONE.

P. M. writes:

1. I am flatchested and a shallow breather. Would playing a wind instrument develop my chest and lungs?

2. Also, would it strengthen sagging facial muscles?

REPLY.

1. It should help you to acquire the deep breathing habit.

2. This depends upon the type of instrument; a piccolo, no.

NONE EVER.

A. P. W. writes: If a person is subject to attacks of gout periodically, how much meat may safely be eaten daily?

REPLY.

If you are subject to frequent attacks, meat cannot be taken with safety in any appreciable quantity. The foods to avoid particularly are the so-called purines—those that contain nuclei—such as meat extracts, liver, sweetbreads, brains, and kidneys.

IT'S NORMAL.

A. H. writes: Has diet anything to do with acid urine? If so, what foods should be omitted from the diet?

REPLY.

The normal urine is acid. Most foods have either an alkaline or acid reaction after digestion. Whether urine is acid or alkaline is, as a rule, of no great significance.

FRIEND OF THE PEOPLE

The volume of Legal Friend mail necessitates printed statements on common questions. No copies or records of the letters or answers are kept. Hence follow-up letters should be complete in themselves. If questions are based on some previously printed problem a clipping of the article should accompany. Most of the replies are mailed. Letters bearing no name and address are disregarded. A self-addressed envelope will expedite handling.

HANDLING ESTATE.

Chicago, March 30.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—My mother died in 1933.

1. She appointed an administrator for the estate, which is in Indiana, and he is spending the rent money as fast as he takes it in on the building. [2] the heirs would like to change the administrator.

3. Can you give me any advice regarding Indiana laws?

4. Can you tell me what procedure we would have to take to have the administrator removed and turned over to one of the family who lives in Illinois?

5. Would we have to petition the court with all signatures signed to petition, or the biggest majority? W. P.

1. A personal representative named in a will is called an executor rather than an administrator.

2. The powers of the executor would depend on the wording of the will. In order to displace the executor, you would have to make a strong showing to the judge of the Probate court. We do not have the facts before us to determine the propriety of his expenditures.

3. See 1 and 2.

4. Employ an attorney.

5. Leave such details to the attorney whom you employ.

TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

FACTS NOT CLEAR.

Chicago, March 30.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—1. A, as administrator of an estate, sold at administrator's sale on Jan. 1 several different pieces of real estate. B bought one piece of the property. Two years later A took the bankruptcy law and A's creditors got 30 cents on the dollar. I see by the county records that B has deeded this same property back to A.

2. This looks fishy to me.

3. Is there any way that I could claim that this was A's all the time?

4. The Bankruptcy court tried that but failed. There is nothing to show except the two deeds which are on record.

J. B.

1. Are we to assume that A had a beneficial interest in the property as distinguished from being merely the administrator?

2. We agree with you if A originally had a beneficial interest.

3. We suggest that you go over your facts in a personal interview with an attorney.

4. Some individual must have acted. It is not clear to us just what has been done. If it is true that the issue has been tried in court then it seems possible that the adjudication may be conclusive against you.

PROPERTY DIVISION.

Chicago, March 30.—[Legal Friend of the People.—1. Is it possible for the wife to assign her share of a real estate property to her child?

2. The husband and wife are separated and the divorce case is now pending in court. They have a two-story building in [3] joint tenancy. The child is 16 years of age; there are five other children who are of age. M. J.

1. Yes, if you mean a fee simple interest that she has inherited. No, if you mean the mere dower interest that she would have in her husband's real estate during his lifetime.

2. Presumably she has employed an attorney for these proceedings, and if so, he is in a better position to advise than we are.

3. She could convey her one-half of the joint tenancy property without his signature if it is not a homestead.

WIFE'S CITIZENSHIP.

Chicago, March 29.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—I was born in the old country. I was married in this country in 1908 to a girl born in the United States. I received my final naturalization papers in 1918. Is my wife an American citizen? O. M.

If the marriage took place between March 2, 1907, and Sept. 2, 1922, the wife lost her citizenship thereby, but if the husband was naturalized prior to Sept. 22, 1922, she regained her citizenship by such naturalization, under the laws then in effect.

RIGHT TO PROPERTY.

Chicago, March 30.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—Do the statutes of Illinois permit the widow of a man to take possession of all his personal property upon his death, without administration, when there are no children? D. D.

Yes, as far as the facts stated are concerned. The necessity for probate would depend on the nature of the assets and whether they can be reduced to possession without court proceedings.

FROM ACROSS THE SEA

BY HARRY LEVIN.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

JERUSALEM.—The first 200 miles of the Haifa-Bagdad highway from the Iraq end, a great project ultimately destined to link the Mediterranean with India by a direct land route, has been completed.

First discussed soon after the world war, the prospects of the 700 mile trans-desert road grew brighter as the prospects of the long projected Haifa-Bagdad railway grew dimmer. In 1932, when the $100,000,000 Mosul-Haifa oil pipeline began to operate, the construction of the highway was definitly agreed upon. The plans were ready in 1937 and the work launched in March, 1938.

The cost of laying this broad ribbon through the deserts and over the hills and rivers of three countries, Palestine, Transjordan, and Iraq, will be $10,000,000. The bill will be paid by the governments of the three countries concerned, with the assistance of the British treasury. The work, which is to be completed in September, 1940, is under the supervision of the British war office.

As far as Rutbah Wells the road will run alongside the oil pipeline, linking up six British controled aerodromes en route. Thence it will branch off to the east in a straight line to Bagdad, while the pipeline continues its northeastern course to Kirkuk.

The Palestine section of the road, via Nazareth and Tiberias to the Jordan river, the shortest portion, no more than sixty miles long, was begun simultaneously with the Iraq end and has been in use for some time. The middle section, traversing Transjordan, is also being constructed independently.

Maj. R. Briggs of the British Royal Engineers, who is in charge of the work, is confident that continuation of this road through Iran [Persia] to link up with the Indian routes is now a matter of only a very short time.

THE CORNISH RACE.

Chicago, April 4.—From an ethnological standpoint, F. G. W.'s criticism anent "An Englishman Puts His O. K. on American Lingo," is well taken. The press almost invariably places the wrong accent on nationality. The British empire, for instance, is composed of many races. One could not, therefore, correctly call a Brahmin or a French-Canadian, even though British subjects, Englishmen. The same argument holds for the Celtic family within the confines of the British Isles, the Irish, Welsh, Cornish, Gaels, and Manx.

Having been born in the duchy of Cornwall of Cornish parents I am, therefore, Celtic racially, even though I have long since become an American citizen and am jolly proud of it. However, I am often questioned as to my nationality, but make no hesitation in saying that I am Cornish, for I could not reply otherwise.

It is now conceded, however, that the Cornish race is pre-Celtic, which theory is based on recent discoveries made by The Royal Institution of Cornwall through excavations which have brought to light a type of architecture closely allied with that of ancient Babylon. Then, too, ages ago the Phœnicians and other peoples of the east came to Cornwall and traded with the natives for tin. It is the opinion of historians that many, finding the climate similar to that of their native lands, remained there and intermarried, which accounts, doubtless, for the Semitic features and swarthy complexions common among many Cornish.

I might add that the Royal Institution of Cornwall is doing much not only in its research work but toward reviving the use of the ancient language of the Cornish race, a branch of the Cymric and closely related to that of the Welsh and Bretagne.

I have cited the above facts simply to show how easily the average American can go astray even in defining the peoples of the British Isles, comprised of Celt and Teuton, the Celts for the most part inhabiting the highlands of Scotland, Ireland, the Isle of Man, Wales, and Cornwall, with a smattering of Celt in Devonshire, Somersetshire, and the Lake region, and the Teutonic element scattered throughout the midlands and eastern coast line.

A SECURITY OWNERS' UNION.

Hamilton, O., April 3.—Your editorial of April 1, "If Organized They Could Stop It," should awaken from lethargy every stock and bond holder in the country before it is too late. I for one would gladly pay a percentage of my income derived from stock dividends for membership in a stock and bond holders' union large enough to make its power felt at election time. The millions of investors who depend upon dividends should welcome the opportunity to become a member of such a union. E. J. S.

CAMPAIGN SONGS.

Chicago, March 28.—In this day of theme songs and political ballyhoo, may I suggest for the Democratic 1940 theme song, not "Happy Days are Here Again," but "The Yanks are Coming," or "The Boy Friends of the Whirling Dervish." And for the 1940 Republican theme song, not "Suzanna," but "The Merry-Go-Round Broke Down."

JEEPERS CREEPERS.

THE PHALANGIST PLATFORM.

Chicago, April 3.—Reports are now being published about the new Spanish régime. Mention is made therein of the Falangistas and their party, the Falange Traditionalista Española. It is untrue, however, that Falangistas means Fascists, or that their Falange is the so-called Spanish Fascist party. Falange means Phalanx; Falangista means Phalanxist, a member of that party. There is, of course, no such thing as Falangismo or Phalanxism, or political doctrin by that name, as there is communism and Fascism.

Some of the highest authorities, impartial observers of present political developments, have brought to our United States sufficient factual evidence of the truth about the Falange Tradicionalista Española and its Falangistas. This party and its members have been fighting and now have defeated the efforts that were being made by the now called Republicans, "to take the governemnt apart and substitute in its place an absorbent state which annihilates individuality." The sixth, seventh, and eighth points of the program of the Falange Tradicionalista Española stress, and the Falangistas [not Fascists] are seeing to it that the new state is an instrument "at the service of the integrity of the nation," yes, but provided that "human dignity, the integrity of man and his liberty are eternal and intangible values." Above all, the Falange is Christian, therefore anti-Marxist, and with its founder, José Antonio Primo de Rivera, it stands for fewer liberal promises and more "respect for the profound liberty of man."

A SEER, NO LESS.

Albuquerque, N. M., March 30.—As a student of international affairs for the last thirty years I have proofs in black and white that my expectations as to the future have come true in the past.

For instance, as early as the spring of 1925 I foresaw that a great depression was coming to this country.

In the fall of 1928 I wrote an article in which I stated that the German republic wouldn't last.

What I see now is this: That the republic in France is about to be replaced by a monarchy. That the territorial demands put forward by Italy against France are in my opinion the reward which has already been promised Italy by the future king of France for aid in helping him to the throne. That the change will be brought about amidst a civil war in France. France has not had her riots lately. An ominous quiet.

FRANK KOVATCH.

EXPECTING A LOT FROM A COW.

Chicago, April 3.—Not a quart of good milk is sold in Chicago. We buy only skimmed milk. The farmer sells whole milk for 3 cents a quart or thereabouts. When I purchase a quart of milk I also buy for 21 cents a half-pint of whipping cream and mix the two. This gives us one and a quarter quarts for 30c. The result is a milk almost as rich as that sold by the farmer. You can prove my contention by getting a quart of fresh farm milk and placing the bottle alongside of the quart you buy at the store, or from the wagon, in Chicago. The cream line should be four and one-half inches below the top of the bottle.

THE KNIGHT ERRANT

[The Tribune, London.]

MILK DISTRIBUTOR IS LOSING MONEY; WANTS PRICE CUT

Opposes Political Control by State Board.

The following article is the third in a series on the milk industry and the proposal for a state board to control prices. Today's article discusses the distributor; middleman of the industry.

BY HAL FOUST.

Trucks and trailers of maximum legal dimensions took turns in docking at an unloading platform of a west side milk receiving station. They carried 250,000 quarts in eight and ten gallon cans, the produce of evening and morning milkings at 450 farms within a radius of fifty miles of Chicago.

The milk was from farmers who complain they are losing money at present prices. It was about to be prepared for market by a distributor who has been reporting financial losses. The following morning it was to be delivered by a wagon drivers' union with a shrinking membership. It was destined to be bought by housewives who are rebelling against a 12 cent doorstep price.

Producers Favor Price Cut.

In previous articles, herd owners visited in their barns have said they profited from milk they sold for fluid consumption but that they lost money on the surplus sold at lower prices for manufacturing. They said they needed a bigger premium market, such as might be created by a retail price reduction, and that they would suffer from an increase in the retail price, such as might be expected from a state control board as proposed before the Illinois legislature at Springfield.

What does the middleman in the milk industry, the distributor, do to earn his share of the housewives' 12 cents? What are his complaints against costs and prices? What does he fear as the economic consequence of a political agency boosting prices?

How Milk Is Processed.

Let's get back to the trucks. Ten gallon cans are rolled onto a conveyor which carries them single file into the bottling plant. Inside the building the lid of the can is lifted by a white uniformed expert. He sniffs. The smell of milk is a quick test of its purity. He takes a three ounce sample for a butter fat measurement and bacteria count. This is the beginning of the nice and neat process of preparing milk for home delivery.

The milk, after being weighed, flows in stainless steel pipes to sterile glass lined tanks where it is cooled to 40 degrees to await pasteurization. There are one and one-half miles of these pipes in this $1,250,000 plant, one of thirty-eight such bottling houses in Chicago and suburbs. The pipes are cleaned with live steam daily.

The fluid eventually is piped into huge tanks where it is kept at a temperature of exactly 144 degrees for exactly thirty minutes before being cooled to 40 degrees again in other tanks which feed the bottle fillers.

The bottles file to the fillers on a covered conveyor from a washing machine as big as a van. They leave the filler properly capped, and an attendant places them in cases for the delivery wagons.

Bottling Costs 2.5c.

Economists calculate that this quart of milk on the delivery platform of the bottling works has cost 6.25 cents. The farmer has been paid 3.75 cents. [The farmer sometimes says he's getting only 3 cents because the price of his surplus is only 2.2 cents.] The distributor, with his investment, his inspections, supervision, bookkeeping, and labor costs, has added 2.5 cents to the farmer's 3.75 cents for each quart of milk. But the 6.25 cent evaluation on his platform is still a long way from the 12 cents paid for doorstep delivery.

The cost of getting this bottle from the bottling plant to the home is 6 cents, according to economists. It's a figure that irritates farmers. They believe union labor is getting too large a portion of the consumer's dollar. Milk delivery will be discussed in a future article.

The distributors' accountants, adding the 6 cent delivery charges to the 6.25 cent cost of bottled milk, say that the cost of a quart is 12.25 cents. They are getting an average of only 10.9 cents because an increasing part of their output is sold to stores at 8.5 cents for resale at 10 cents. They are losing, they say, 1.3 cents a quart. This concurs with the financial statements issued to their stockholders.

"To boost prices, as can be expected from political control," said one of the big operators, "would reduce the volume of sales, hurting us and the farmers as well. We must cut costs so sales volume can be increased, benefiting us and benefiting the farmer by giving him a bigger premium market."

DAIRIES, DRIVERS TO RESUME WAGE TALKS TOMORROW

Discussion of proposed wage cuts for milk wagon drivers will be resumed tomorrow by committees representing their union and the dairies. The conference will be held in the office of the Associated Milk Dealers, 309 Jackson boulevard.

Approximately 5,000 working drivers have been assessed $1.50 by the union for the support of drivers laid off in the last few months. The employers seek a reduction in the present $48 weekly wage of drivers.

"Not merely wages, but all the costs of operating a milk company are being reviewed," said Dr. Raleigh W. Stone, University of Chicago economist, who is a member of the dairies' committee.

MRS. C. E. MALLERS ASKS DIVORCE ON DESERTION COUNT

Mrs. Catherine A. Mallers, 510 Lee street, Evanston, yesterday filed a suit for divorce in the Superior court against Charles E. Mallers, grandson of the late John E. Mallers, pioneer Chicago real estate dealer. The bill charged desertion. Mrs. Mallers asked custody of their children—Catherine Jane, 13; Patricia Ann, 11, and Charles J., 9. Her bill alleges that Mallers had an interest amounting to $350,000 in his grandfather's estate. Attorney Benjamin B. Davis, representing Mallers, filed an answer denying the charges. It was indicated a settlement had been reached. Mallers has offices in the Mallers building, 5 South Wabash avenue.

FAITH 'THAT HE ROSE AGAIN' IS AFFIRMED TODAY

Thousands to Hear Story in Chicago Churches.

cally none of its traditional customs is of Christian origin. Its name is derived from that of Eostre, the Anglo-Saxons' pagan goddess of spring.

Many of its customs have been taken over from the Jews. In addition the North American Indians and the ancient Druids with their shocking human sacrifices have had their influence upon celebration of the day.

From remotest times, long before the Christian era, Easter has been the festival of spring and was, to some peoples, the start of the new year. The church finally adopted the name of the ancient goddess at the insistence of the northern European races.

Goddess Personifies East.

The goddess was the personification of the east—hence the rising sun, the morning. April was dedicated to her and was known to the Anglo-Saxons as Eastermonth. [In German, Ostermonat. Most non-Teutonic nations, however, use the Semitic word, Pesach, or derivatives. It means pass or pass by. The Spanish say Pascua and the Italians Pasqua.]

The early clergy fought bitterly to rout out all pagan customs, but this proved impossible, so the church did the next best thing and gave Christian interpretations to many of the pagan customs. Thus pagan joy at the coming of spring was made to mean Christian joy over the Resurrection.

The pagans' eight day spring festival was shortened to three days, then to two and finally to one, to correspond to the Jewish observance of the Passover, which falls at about the same time.

Celebration a Time of Joy.

The celebration was a time of great joy in all the cities. Clergymen told sidesplitting stories from their pulpits, to bring out the "risus paschalis" or Easter smile. In Britain the monks played handball in the church ailes, the winning team being rewarded with cakes.

Every one who wanted an Easter kiss was entitled to it from the girl of his choosing. Clergymen and members of religious orders who walked abroad between this day and Pentecost were seized by jovial bands who forced them to purchase freedom by treating their captors to food and drink. This custom was symbolic of the seizure of the apostles after the crucifixion.

There was a strong belief—a relic of which exists today—that on Easter morning the sun rose with three gigantic bounds, then danced in joy above the horizon. In vain did learned scholars roar and rave at this. It was impossible for the sun to dance, they declared.

How the People Proved It.

Nevertheless, the people continued to watch "the sun dance." They proved this phenomenon to their own satisfaction by viewing the sun's reflection in a pan of water. When the pan was jiggled the ripples made the sun's reflection perform to the satisfaction of every one—except the scholars.

So heated did the controversy over this matter become in 1708 that a London publication printed a jesting bit of verse in which the sun, upon being asked if he really danced, replied:

"The old wives get merry
With spiced wine and sherry
On Easter, which makes them romance.
And whilst in a rout
Their brains whirl about
So they fancy I caper and dance."

Moon Determines Date.

It is the moon, however, that really does exert an influence upon Easter day, for it determines the date on which Easter day falls. These lunar calculations once were exceedingly trying and difficult. As an example:

In the beginning Easter was made to fall on the first Sunday after the fourteenth day of the moon that happened to be reigning at the time of the spring equinox. Then the equinox was permanently set on March 21, though it is sometimes earlier and sometimes later.

As a result, Easter was celebrated on the wrong day in 1818. All too late some one woke up to the fact that the equinoctial moon had been fourteen days old on March 21. Because this had been a Saturday, the day following had been Easter Sunday! March 22 is the earliest day on which Easter can fall and April 25 is the latest. It will fall on April 25 in 1943.

Many Protestant churches were slow to observe the day. They regarded it as a Catholic festival. The Presbyterians led the movement that resulted in many others taking up the celebration of Easter about the time of the American civil war. But stern New England banned Easter for many years. Only in Virginia and in Louisiana was Easter celebrated before the war.

How Easter Bunny Started.

But back to the day's relation to the moon. It is this association that has given it one of its best known hallmarks—the Easter bunny. Since ancient times the hare has been a symbol of the moon. For one thing, both the moon and the hare were believed able to change their sex. [The new moon is looked upon as feminine, the old moon as masculine.]

In America the hare's kinsman, the rabbit, does duty as the Easter bunny. One British writer blames the confectioners for this, commenting rather bitterly that American confectioners rarely are authorities on natural history.

It was in Germany that the belief developed among children that the bunny brings the brilliantly colored eggs that since ancient times have been a part of the Easter observance. And as to the eggs: they were considered to be a symbol of life, because within them was the germ of life. This belief was shared by the Romans and the Gauls, and runs back in history to the Greeks, Persians, and Egyptians.

Symbolic Colors Adopted.

The Jews were the first to color eggs, generally allowing green to predominate in keeping with the advance of spring. When taken over by the Christians the egg custom was made symbolic of the Resurrection, the shell signifying the tomb. Red predominated in memory of the Crucifixion.

The pagans rolled one another down a chosen hill to express their joy at the coming of spring. The church changed this to represent joy at the Resurrection. It may have been that the race grew less hardy or tumbling down hills grew tiresome. And then some one discovered it would be simpler to roll eggs instead of people.

Egg rolling now is chiefly a diversion of children. In Washington at Easter time eggs are rolled on the White House lawn, usually with the first lady conducting the affair and the President looking on. Dolly Madison started this custom in 1814 when some crochety custodians chased the children off the capitol lawn, complaining that they damaged the grass.

English Feast at Easter.

However, the heartiest of all the Easter customs, as far as eating is concerned, are to be found in England. The British usually do themselves well in observing feast days and Easter is no exception. There are beef and ham and fowl. There are spiced ale and sherry. There are pastries and the festive tansy cake, which is made of flour, butter, sugar, cream, and sherry and baked in a shallow dish.

The tansy is an herb used in the Jewish Passover ritual. To disguise its bitterness, Jewish housewives learned to pickle the herb so that it had a tart and mintlike taste and was an ideal relish for the paschal lamb. From this grew the custom of using a mint sauce or jelly with mutton.

Ale and mutton pies figure in one of the most robust of the British Easter customs. This is the great Hallaton pie scramble and bottle kicking, which the village still observes. Many years ago the parish was presented with a tract of land, the understanding being that on each Easter Monday the rector should provide a number of meat pies, two wooden bottles [casks] of ale and several loaves.

Pie Tossing's the Thing.

These are carried in procession, and with music, to the scrambling ground where the pies are tossed to the crowd. It is considered jolly—on catching a pie—to squash it in the face of the nearest person.

Then comes the bottle kicking. One of the heavy wooden ale bottles is placed in a depression to be kicked out. The Hallaton men vie with the men of other villages, each group trying to kick the ale out on the other's side of the pit. Battered feet and shins, fractured toes and cracked heads are usually the result of this merry shindig. And to the victors goes the ale. There is another contest for the second bottle, but teams share in it, no matter who wins.

Another Easter Monday and Tuesday practice is a bit more gentle, but is just as uproarious. It is known as heaving or lifting. On Monday the women lift the men three times into the air. This symbolizes the Resurrection. The lifters, usually two, clasp each other's wrists to form a chair or seat. When the lifting has been done the victim is kissed resoundingly. He purchases his freedom with a sixpence or so. If he doesn't he is lifted and kissed until giddy. On Easter Tuesday the men lift the women.

An Historical Lifting.

Often the money collected is used to finance a party for lifters and liftees. In the year 1290, when Edward Longshanks was king of England, he got a lifting that has gone down in history.

Several ladies in waiting to Queen Eleonora burst into his majesty's bedchamber, tumbled him about and lifted and kissed him until Longshanks bellowed for mercy. Finally they collected fourteen pounds from him.

And now for that universal Easter custom that puts furrows in the brow and wrinkles in the pocketbook. The custom of dressing up, of donning new clothes dates to antiquity. The pagans and even the North American Indians observed this rite.

For those who were starting a new year the clothing was symbolic of a new life. There still is a superstition that if a girl has a new bonnet at Easter she will have good luck in love all the year. The clothing industry, which might well be suspected of having something to do with this custom, can now be exonerated.

EASTER WORSHIPERS CROWD MOSCOW'S FEW REMAINING CHURCHES

MOSCOW, April 9. [Sunday.]—(AP)—Moscow's few remaining churches were crowded with worshipers at the midnight Easter service.

One neighborhood church, built to accommodate about 400, was surrounded by a throng eager to get near enough to hear the Easter music and light their candles from other candles passed out from the altar.

Elderly women who must have remembered many a pre-war Easter, clung to a high iron picket fence, trying to glimpse a faint reflection of the ceremony through side windows. Soviet policemen passed occasionally without molesting worshipers waiting intently for the announcement: "Christ is risen."

Freddy, 9, Goes to the Zoo and Stays There, the Chimp

Floyd S. Young, director of the Lincoln park zoo, received an Easter gift yesterday. It was Freddy, a 9 year old, 120 pound chimpanzee. The donor, Rodman Vahle, owner of a pet shop at 315 Madison street, said he got Freddy six years ago from a man who told him to give Freddy to the zoo if he ever tired of him.

JUDGE WARNS A PAIR OF TRAFIC STOPPERS: NO MORE STREET NAPS

Two men were lying on the street car tracks. A crowd was gathered. So, when Policeman Victor Eck arrived at Fullerton and Greenview avenue, he was sure there had been a terrible accident.

He arranged to have the two men, Samuel Disso, owner of a tavern at 3701 North Ashland avenue, and Paul Tresco, 6259 Peterson avenue, picked up and taken away. Yesterday the two appeared in Racine avenue court.

Policeman Eck said he discovered that Disso merely was suffering from too many drinks and an attendant stubbornness. Disso, who weighs 250 pounds, said he wanted to see how long he could tie up the street cars. Tresco said he had never seen Disso before, but it seemed a good idea to join him at the time. Both got off with a warning to watch out for street cars.

JEWISH PATRIOT OF REVOLUTION TO BE HONORED

Haym Salomon, the Jew who helped finance Washington's army during the revolution, will receive posthumously on May 21 what he never enjoyed when he was alive 154 years ago. He will be the guest of honor at a dinner in the Stevens hotel arranged by the Patriotic Foundation of Chicago.

A flag draped vacant chair, in Salomon's memory, will be at the head of the speakers' table. Barnet Hodes, co-chairman of the foundation, said speakers will stress the theme that peoples of all races and creeds participated in founding the United States.

Portions of the Lorado Taft monument depicting Salomon, George Washington, and Robert Morris will be shown for the first time publicly. The foundation was formed to complete the Taft monument.

CHURCHES UNITE IN PEACE PRAYER AT CHRIST'S TOMB

World Waits for Pope's Words at Rome.

JERUSALEM, April 8.—(AP)—Christendom will celebrate the resurrection tomorrow in joint Easter services by ecclesiastics of both eastern and western churches at Christ's tomb.

For the eastern church, tomorrow is Palm Sunday. The Greek Orthodox patriarch agreed, however, to a joint Easter celebration in which prayers will be said for world peace at this time of international tension.

"Despite setbacks, we cannot but feel that the Easter message will not go unheeded among the world powers," said a leading clergyman attached to the Latin patriarchate.

Jewish-Arab disorders, which have caused 970 deaths in six months, considerably curtailed the Holy Land's Easter celebration.

Pope to Speak of Peace.

VATICAN CITY, April 8.—(AP)—Pius XII. will deliver a message of peace tomorrow as part of the celebration of the resurrection on his first Easter as pontiff.

Interest was heightened because of the possibility the pontiff would raise his voice against war at a critical moment in European history, but Vatican prelates declined to prophesy what lines his message would follow.

The pontiff's speech will be in Latin from St. Peter's loggia. Loud speakers will carry his voice to the crowd in the piazza below, and immediately afterward translations will be broadcast.

To dignify the service in every way possible, Vatican prelates said Pius had asked that shouts of "Viva Il Papa," which greeted popes entering the hall of St. Peter's, be omitted. He wished instead that the people join in a "Hallelujah."

Sacred Garment Ready.

The pope first will be invested in the hall of vestments with the pluviale, which Romans call Piviale, the garment symbolizing protection of a priest from evil. Then he will proceed to Sistine chapel for a part of the service. From there he will be carried on his portable throne to the basilica below. Music by the Julian choir will accompany his entrance. A student choir will sing liturgical melodies, in which the crowd may join.

The choir will precede the pontiff in the procession toward the altar, announced by the notes of silver trumpets and the singing of Easter hallelujah music.

The pope will be carried down the central aile of the church between rows of uniformed guards. Then he will ascend the pontifical throne and the mass will be celebrated by Cardiral Federico Tedeschini, arch-priest of St. Peter's.

KNIGHTS TEMPLAR TO MARCH TODAY IN EASTER PARADE

More than 1,200 Knights Templar, in full uniform, will march up Michigan avenue this afternoon in their annual Easter parade. Four bands—including one of 100 pieces—and three drum and bugle corps will participate.

Under the command of Frank Ingram Hooper, grand commander for Illinois, and the direction of Russell H. Sherwood, marshal, the plumed knights will form a living cross in front of Tribune Tower at about 2:30 p. m.

Seventeen commanderies from Chicago and the suburban area, two more than last year, will participate. They are Chicago, St. Cecilia, Montjoie, Austin, Lincoln Park, Apollo, St. Elmo, St. Bernard, Evanston, Chevalier Bayard, Illinois, Trinity, Maywood, Calvary, Mizpah, Calumet, and Columbia.

The parade will start at 2 p. m. from Medinah Temple, 14 East Ohio street. Its route will be south in Wabash avenue to Wacker drive, west to La Salle street, south to Randolph street, east to Michigan avenue, north in Michigan avenue to Tribune Tower, thence on north to Ohio street and west in Ohio to the temple.

Elaborate services, starting at 3 p. m. will be held in the temple.

12 VETS ATTEND 73D BIRTHDAY FETE FOR G. A. R.

Last night, seventy-three years after the organization of the Grand Army of the Republic, twelve white-haired veterans of the civil war gathered in the Hotel Sherman and heard themselves lauded as the greatest symbols of American unity and peace. They were the guests of 300 members of the Sons and Daughters of Union Veterans from Chicago and nearby cities who met for their annual Army day celebration.

John Lee Andrew, 90 years old, state department commander of the G. A. R., journeyed to Chicago Friday from Quincy to represent his comrades. He made no comment on European war clouds, except to observe, succinctly, that he was too old to worry. "If they mix," he said, "it'll be a rich man's war, and a poor man's fight." John R. Mayhew of Kankakee was the principal speaker.

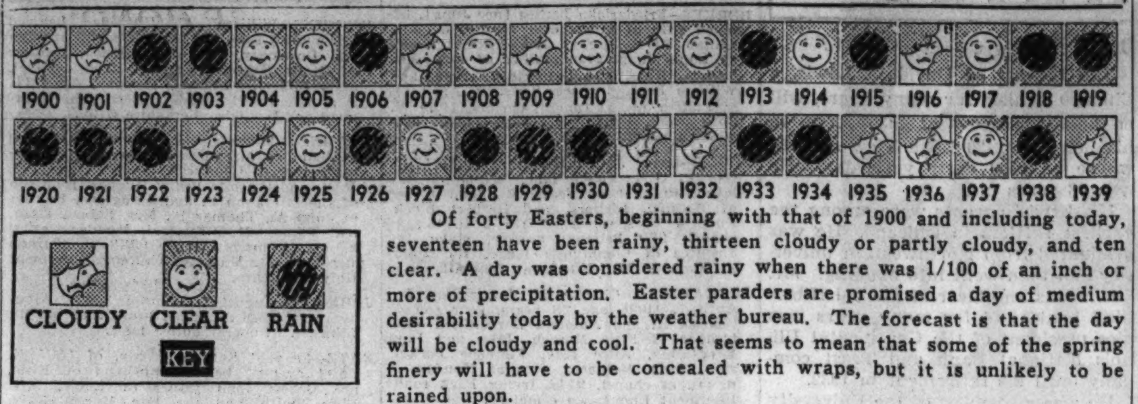
Weather Rivals Bonnets as Easter Topic



Of forty Easters, beginning with that of 1900 and including today, seventeen have been rainy, thirteen cloudy or partly cloudy, and ten clear. A day was considered rainy when there was 1/100 of an inch or more of precipitation. Easter paraders are promised a day of medium desirability today by the weather bureau. The forecast is that the day will be cloudy and cool. That seems to mean that some of the spring finery will have to be concealed with wraps, but it is unlikely to be rained upon.

PEACEFUL SPAIN PUTS A VICTORY NOTE IN EASTER

Whole Country Joins in Festivities.

BY SAM BREWER.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BURGOS, Spain, April 8.—This is a special Easter for the Spanish. A sort of festival of victory to be celebrated more brilliantly and more enthusiastically than ever.

It is the "year of victory"—all official documents have been so dated since April 1—and Easter celebrations are being made the occasion for a victory celebration as well.

Seville's famous Holy week processions, which lost some of their traditional magnificence under the republic, were brought to new splendor by the Nationalists, and Seville's people outdid themselves.

All Spain Celebrates.

Over all Spain processions were held this week. On Holy Thursday and Good Friday there were processions in every town of any importance, with the entire population turned out to watch them.

Easter has always been the occasion for gala bullfights and nearly every town in Spain is reviving that custom this year.

Many holy vessels, regalia and other objects used in this week's religious ceremonies were recovered from warehouses where they were stored by Republicans, or from hiding places where they were put by Nationalists to save them from destruction.

$1,000,000 Treasure.

In a church that was used as a workshop and warehouse by the Republicans, a treasure valued at about $1,000,000 was recovered. In it was a painting of Christ by El Greco [Domenico Theotocopuli] slashed but restorable; a cape of St. Theresa of Jesus, thirteen marble statues of Christ, a nativity done in marble, gold and mother of pearl, 700 sets of sacred vessels and 302 other statues.

Also among the statues was one of the infant Jesus that had been decked out by the Republicans in a pistol belt and with a pistol lashed to its hand. The bishop of Madrid ordered this statue restored to its former place in the church with the pistol belt and pistol still attached. He said this will serve as a reminder of war excesses.

Hundreds of thousands of Spaniards are not taking part in the Easter celebrations for the reason that they are in concentration camps. Nearly half a million former Republican soldiers are interned pending investigation of their records. Thousands are in prison.

CHILD'S EASTER GIFT TO GRANDMA HELD UP TO JAIL POSTAL THIEF

Mrs. E. A. Goff of Louisville, Ky., will not receive the Easter handkerchief sent her by her granddaughter, Patsy Alms of 703 North Lotus avenue. But Mrs. Goff knows at least that Patsy, who is 6 years old, sent her the gift and an Easter card. The government is holding both as evidence. They were found Friday in the pocket of John Dusatko, 3110 South 53d avenue, Cicero, a postal employé at the Austin substation, who has been in the government service for 16 years. Postal Inspector A. A. Imus said Dusatko admitted taking the letter in the hope it held currency. Yesterday Dusatko was held to the federal grand jury.

LEAPS TO DEATH; NOTE GIVES HIS BODY TO SCIENCE

Frank W. Swift, 48 years old, formerly employed as an assistant engineer for the federal power commission in Denver, Colo., leaped to his death yesterday from a washroom window on the fifth floor of the Y. M. C. A. hotel at 1000 Grove street, Evanston. His body landed on the concrete base of a ventilating shaft.

In his room he left a note which said he was despondent because his son had died and his wife, who lives in Bartlesville, Okla., had separated from him. Because of a nervous ailment he lost his job, he added. He directed that his body be turned over to the Northwestern university medical school for dissection. Swift was a second lieutenant in the air corps during the world war.

DEFENDS EFFORT TO KEEP SECRET HUTCHINS' VISIT

Warm Springs, Ga., April 8.—[Special.]—President Roosevelt today defended his unsuccessful attempt to keep secret the visit last Thursday of Robert M. Hutchins, president of the University of Chicago, who has been asked to accept the chairmanship of the Securities and Exchange commission.

Mr. Roosevelt said he had merely carried out the obligation of a good host and tried to protect his guest from publicity.

One of the newspaper men brushed aside the explanation with the blunt question: "Did Hutchins decide to accept the SEC chairmanship?" The President curtly remarked that the visit was social, and turned away.

Dr. Hutchins came to the Little White House late Wednesday with Mrs. Hutchins on their way from Florida to Chicago. Hutchins is the candidate of William O. Douglas, who was elevated to the Supreme court. Douglas was a member of the Yale law school faculty when Hutchins was chancellor of the university.

CHICAGO JEWISH GROUP TO HOLD ANNUAL PARLEY

The fifth annual conference of the Chicago division of the American Jewish congress will be held April 23 in the Hotel Sherman. Membership represents 400 Jewish organizations. Reports on the status of the Jewish people in totalitarian lands will be presented. Among the speakers will be Dr. Jacob Lestschinsky, Polish author and economist; Rabbi J. X. Cohen of New York, and United States Senator William H. King. Max A. Kopstein, chairman of the Chicago conference, said 1,500 persons are expected to attend.

CLAIM 2 MILLIONS IN CAFE REPAIRS HALTED BY UNION

Restaurant Owners Seek Building Trades Aid.

Members of the Chicago Restaurant Owners' association charged yesterday that a union drive to organize employés has tied up or prevented the start of nearly 2 million dollars' worth of remodeling and redecorating work in their places of business. Representatives of the association will meet tomorrow with officials of the Chicago Building Trades council in an attempt to iron out the difficulties.

Protest Unionization Tactics.

One owner, it was said, has been forced to close his restaurant and others have lost much business because the unions called off painters and decorators on jobs that were only half finished. Other owners were described as afraid to begin remodeling because of the union tactics.

During the last few months the Hotel and Restaurant Employés' union, local 563, has been conducting a campaign to unionize all city restaurants. Restaurant owners have complained that windows in their places have been broken, pickets have been stationed at restaurants where not a single employé was on strike, and that in one case a proprietor was slugged.

Two organizers have been indicted on charges of malicious mischief and are now awaiting trial. They are Andrew Vavares and James Crowley. They were arrested Feb. 24 after four bottles had been thrown through the windows of the County café at 1901 Harrison street. Nick Pangakos, part owner of the café, accused Vavares of slugging him previously.

Force Restaurant to Close.

The County café was forced to close Friday, its owners reported, because the unions prevented deliveries of food and the removal of garbage. William Chromes, one of the owners, said that $55,000 had been invested in the business.

Gus Terzakes, owner of several restaurants, reported that remodeling work in his G. T. restaurant at 22d street and Michigan avenue was halted because he refused to force his employés to join the union.

Attorney Bailey Stanton was retained by the Restaurant Owners' association yesterday to determine whether an injunction issued by Judge John Prystalski in the Circuit court had been violated. The injunction enjoined the restaurant employés union and six other unions and their officials from interfering with the business of association members.

STATE EXPENSES CAN BE REDUCED, SEARCY ASSERTS

Economy Committee Will Meet Tuesday.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Springfield, Ill., April 8.—[Special.]—State appropriation requests—save those for relief, education, welfare institutions, health, and the retirement of obligations—could stand a 15 per cent slash, Senator Earl B. Searcy [R., Springfield], chairman of the legislative economy committee, declared today.

Although no subpenas were issued for Tuesday's meeting, Searcy wrote all of the ten code department heads asking them to attend. They will be asked to make the 15 per cent cut the chairman believes can be made. Later subpenas are expected to be issued for other persons.

"The pace for departmental economy," Searcy said, in discussing plans for the committee's next meeting Tuesday night, "has been set by Acting Governor John Stelle, who voluntarily reduced his office appropriation request by 15 per cent. It was $29,000 for the current biennium and he is asking only $24,600 for the next two years.

Recoil from Spending.

"Without any desire to inject partisanship into our joint Republican-Democratic committee's deliberations," Searcy continued, "events of the last few months in Illinois, including election expressions last fall and this spring, shout a recoil from the governmental spending policies of the last six years.

"The Republican or Democrat who doesn't harken and respect these expressions won't survive any future elections. In other words, tax payers finally are becoming tax conscious. Even the fellow on relief is beginning to realize that one-fourth of the meager dollars he gets for his family, when spent for necessities, goes to taxes—a 25 per cent he, the relief client, could well save for his family.

Spending Chief Problem.

"These and other factors enter into the background of the joint committee which must face Illinois spending, help bring about its reduction, and correct any abuses of public trust that it may find. An abuse of public trust is a theft of public funds."

Senator Searcy said he had asked each of the thirteen other committee members to present any subject matter for investigation that they possess at the Tuesday meeting.

Senator R. Wallace Karraker [D., Jonesboro], who in a letter a few weeks ago to a committee member, Senator Nicholas L. Hubbard [D., Mount Pulaski] cast reflection upon F. Lynden Smith, director of public works, and other state officials, has been asked to appear at the meeting.

WM. G. RATTRAY RITES TOMORROW; PIONEER JEWELER

Funeral services for William G. Rattray, a Chicago jeweler for sixty years, will be held tomorrow, at 2 p. m., in the chapel at 124 Madison street, Oak Park, with burial in Waldheim cemetery. Mr. Rattray died Friday in his home, 40 North Mason avenue, at the age of 81.

Mr. Rattray was the son of James Rattray, an early Chicago printer and founder of Typographical union No. 6. Trained as a printer, Mr. Rattray obtained his first work with the old B. F. Norris & Co., jewelers, later becoming a clerk. He remained during the rest of his business career with the firm under its later name of the Norris-Alister-Ball company. In 1888 he traveled through the northwest as a diamond salesman, and in 1895 was placed in charge of the diamond department.

Surviving are a son, William E., and three daughters, Mrs. Julia Schalk, Mrs. Jean Tuscher, and Mrs. Minna Larson.

FORT SHERIDAN HOLDS ITS ARMY DAY OBSERVANCE

Army day was celebrated yesterday at Fort Sheridan with parades, demonstrations, and the awarding of medals to two soldiers who saved the lives of two civilians last fall. Other posts celebrated Army day on April 6, the anniversary of America's entry into the world war, but Fort Sheridan officials held their observance yesterday to give thousands in the Chicago area a chance to attend.

More than 2,500 soldiers and sailors passed in review before Maj. Gen. Stanley H. Ford, commander of the 6th corps area; Brig. Gen. Karl Truesdell, commandant of the army post, and Rear Admiral Hayne Ellis, commandant of the Great Lakes naval training station.

Private First Class Richard Gieras of the 2d infantry, whose home is at 3040 North Racine avenue, and Private John Gimson, 14th cavalry, of Detroit, Mich., were awarded the Soldier's medal, the only army peace time award. They saved the lives of Frank Mennell and Donald B. Clark of Deerfield last Aug. 20 in a rain squall. The soldiers were on life guard duty at Fort Sheridan beach, and rowed a mile and a half through a terrific storm to bring the two civilians in.

David Julian Block, director of the Block laboratories and inventor of numerous chemical processes, died yesterday in his home, 194 Fuller lane, Winnetka, after a long illness. He was 64 years old.

Mr. Block achieved prominence by developing processes for making artificial sugar and gum arabic, and by designing a number of American chemical plants during the world war. Among his inventions was a process for printing radium dials on watches, eliminating the dangerous hand painting. He was a member of the American Association for the Advancement of Science and other national societies.

Funeral services will be held Tuesday at 2 p. m. in the chapel at 929 Belmont avenue, with burial in Rosehill cemetery. The widow, Tessie, and three sons, William, Richard, and Herbert, survive.

F. X. BUSHMAN TRIUMPHS IN HIS RETURN TO STAGE

Deft Portrayal of Bishop Praised by Critic.

BY CECIL SMITH.

Francis X. Bushman, once a young stage actor, later an idolized star of the silent movies, and now a featured performer on radio programs of W-G-N and other stations, returned to the flesh and blood stage in the Woman's Club theater last night. Under the auspices of the Chicago Mummers Theater, he played the central rôle in Frederick Jackson's comedy, "The Bishop Misbehaves."

It was high time that Mr. Bushman found his way back to a contemporary theater that can gratefully make use of his mellow experience and his deft craftsmanship. His part last night was that of an elderly, portly English bishop whose avid interest in detective fiction leads him to take a muddling, if ultimately efficacious, hand in the solution of a robbery.

A Personal Triumph.

With a good script to aid him, he discovered and mixed together in his characterization just the right proportions of fatuousness, shrewdness, high humor, and ecclesiastical sanctimoniousness. Out of it all he won a personal triumph. At the same time he did the Mummers a good turn by sharing in their endeavor.

The excellently directed, well produced work of the Chicago Mummers Theater—an organization partly professional and partly amateur—needs to be brought into the open and accorded hearty appreciation. It was not necessary for last night's audience to make concessions, or to remind itself that this was not, after all, a wholly professional Broadway production.

Cast Well Schooled.

The cast contained several well schooled and imaginative character actors, and a personable, suave couple for what little romantic interest the play musters.

Kay Miller, as the bishop's sheltered spinster sister, made an excellent old lady, all a-twitter with the excitement of her first acquaintance with thieves and law-breakers. John Goldsworthy and Lucy Lancaster, despite a mutual tendency to overact, gave a pungent account of the parvenu couple from whom the thieves extracted their loot.

The swift, easy pace of the production was a reflection of the wisdom and force of Sherman Marks' direction.

PHYSICIANS MAP STATE MEDICAL INSURANCE PLAN

hicago Society to Offer Voluntary System.

The Chicago Medical society soon ill offer the public a statewide plan r voluntary medical care insurance a substitute for the compulsory stem advocated by the administra on in Washington.

This was predicted last night by r. William H. Walsh, director of e society's committee for the study medical care needs, at a forum on ospital and medical insurance in e Vassar House restaurant.

Survey to Carry Proposal.

Dr. Walsh said a recommendation r careful consideration of voluntary surance will be made in the Cook unty section of the American Medi l association's national medical care rvey. About 300 such plans are in eration in other states with the proval of organized medicine. They pplement the widely popular low st, non-profit plans for hospital re.

"This plan," he explained, "con mplates non-profit incorporation of edical groups for the purpose of abling beneficiary members to pay eir physicians either on a cash in mnity or a unit basis for services ndered."

He named limitation of member ip to lower income groups, enroll ent by industrial groups, public care the indigent, free choice of phy cian, and complete control by the edical profession as advantages of e voluntary plan.

Tells Peril of Burocracy.

Dr. Nathan S. Davis, III., president the Chicago Medical society, said e administration's proposed national alth program was an attempt of edical social service workers to minate medical care through the tablishment of a burocracy.

Perry Addleman, director of the icago Plan for Hospital Care, hich now has 120,000 members, said e ability of wage earners to afford spital and medical care had been eatly underestimated. The basic ed, he said, is a budgeting of in me for health. Such budgeting is present being taken care of by an for Hospital Care through small yments for non-profit insurance.

20,000 Search

Nearly 20,000 eager children conducted a grand search yesterday through nine community parks in the Chicago park district's annual Easter egg hunt.

The largest turnout was at Marquette park, where nearly 10,000 boys and girls participated in the search. Only half that number had been expected. Fifty prizes, donated by neighborhood merchants, were awarded to the youngsters who found the most eggs or lucky eggs.

More than 5,000 boys and girls searched at Cornell park and nearly 1,500 at Armour square. Stanton park, Christ Jensen park, Sauganash park, Shabbona park, and Mayfair park entertained sizable armies of searchers. The egg hunt will be continued today and tomorrow at different parks.

FINDS BOWLING AN OPEN AND SHUT CASE OF BOREDOM

Thomas V. Jarman, a truck driver of Perrine, Fla., was watching a bowling game in the loop early yesterday. And he was deeply bored. He yawned cavernously. Then he looked pained and astonished.

He sped next door to a restaurant at 27 West Randolph street. He signaled for a pencil and paper. Attendant E. C. Lane looked amazedly at the wide open expanse before him and handed over the required materials. "My jaw's stuck," wrote Jarman. "Call a doctor."

Central police took Jarman to St. Luke's hospital, where the offending joint was made to articulate once more.

RIGNEY YIELDS ONLY FOUR HITS IN SEVEN INNINGS

Feller Leaves in 6th with Score Tied.

BY IRVING VAUGHAN.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New Orleans, La., April 8.—Johnny Rigney, youthful member of the White Sox pitching staf, made a bid today for the honor of hurling the season's opener against Detroit. Johnny's bid was so emphatic that he figuratively blew the head feathers off the Cleveland Indians while the White Sox were winning an exhibition game in which the sensational Bob Feller participated. The score was 6-2.

Rigney started with the idea that he would go the customary five innings, if possible. At the conclusion of five innings, Cleveland had made only three hits, two of which were bunched for two runs in the fourth. At the end of the sixth, one inning more than any man has been permitted to work under Manager James Dykes' spring plans, the hit total was unchanged. So Rigney took another turn and there was only one more hit. Thereafter Clint Brown served and held his former mates to one safe drive in two innings.

Feller Tempts Boys.

The Sox were good and bad against the blinding Feller, but there might have been less of the latter if they hadn't shown their usual inclination to swing instead of waiting on the youngster to prove his control. Their impatience was partly responsible for the fact that he achieved six strikeouts on as many different batters in six innings. But he also walked four, one of whom became the Sox's second and tying run just before Feller retired. The earlier run was 100 per cent clean, being started on its way by Eric McNair, the litle guy who keeps right on getting his one hit or more per afternoon.

What the Sox couldn't accomplish in Feller's presence, they did with trimmings against his successor, John Humphries. The latter was good enough to escape without serious damage in the seventh, but in the eighth he got himself all tangled up in passes and base hits, particularly a single by Mike Kreevich with the bases filled. This display enabled the Sox to break the tie and nail down the verdict with three runs. They also scored one in the ninth, this jarring being absorbed by Humphries and Al [Lefty] Milnar.

Sox Take Lead.

It didn't take Feller long to swing into his strikeout routine. Owen opened the game with a single which almost removed the famed Iowan's nose. Steinbacher flied to Heath and Owen died in an attempted steal, after which Walker became the initial strikeout victim. Weatherly was the only Indian to reach base in the first. He singled with one out and was expunged in an attempted steal.

The Sox second was featured by the placing of Appling's name in the strikeout column, but the third resulted in run production. McNair led off with a line single to left. Tresh flied to Chapman, but Rigney came up with an unexpected single into center, McNair racing to third. Owen lifted a sacrifice fly to left and McNair sprinted home. Feller slipped a third strike past Steinbacher to conclude the incident.

Indians Go Ahead.

The Sox made another threat in the fourth, but didn't carry it through. Walker walked and was forced by Appling. A fly ball disposed of Kreevich, then Kuhel singled past Trosky, putting Appling on third, but McNair forced Kuhel.

The Indians touched Rigney for two hits in the fourth, enough to ac-

IT'S EVERY MAN FOR HIMSELF WHEN THE SMELT RUN!

Night fishing scene on the Boyne river, Boyne City, Mich., where the annual smelt run is under way. The Boyne City Rod and Gun club reports more fish in the river than at any time in the ten year history of the smelt run in Boyne City. Most of the smelt caught have been males, indicating that the real run is only starting. The club prohibited dipping until smelt were well up in the stream. Scenes such as this are general at this time in many Wisconsin and northern Michigan cities situated on creeks and rivers.

BOSTON SEEKS 2D CUP VICTORY OVER TORONTO

Boston, Mass., April 8.—[Special.]—The Boston Bruins, in sight of the coveted Stanley cup of professional hocky supremacy which has eluded them for ten years, tomorrow night will try to continue their successful start at burying their most persistent jinx, the Toronto Maple Leafs.

Although never appearing to be in real danger, the Bruins just managed to squeeze by the Leafs, 2 to 1, Thursday night, in the opening game of the final series with a goal less than five minutes before the end of the game. The encounter was rather a drab affair.

Toronto No Easy Foe.

After coasting in at the head of the league during the regular season, the Bruins have encountered the stiffest kind of battle in the playoffs. They won three straight from the second place New York Rangers in the first playoff round after some fierce overtime struggles, only to have the Rangers draw up even before gaining victory in four out of seven games.

The Leafs, who had their troubles during the regular season, in the meantime, fought their way to the final playoff by winning best two out of three game series with the New York Americans and Detroit Red Wings.

Next Game in Toronto.

The presence of the Leafs in the finals, however, did not make the Bruins feel particularly good after hurdling the stubborn Rangers. They recalled vividly that Toronto had knocked them out in the first round of four previous Stanley cup playoffs.

The lull between games has produced little more, in public, than an exchange of sneers between the rival teams. Behind scenes, however, it is reported that much planning has been done.

The playoff finals moved to Toronto for the third and fourth games of the series on Tuesday and Thursday.

Chicago Bowlers Clean Up in Day of Thrills at A.B.C. Meet

Cleveland, O., April 8.—[Special.]—Joe Wilman, star of the Randolph league Budweisers, led a group of Chicago bowlers in one of the most spectacular exhibitions in A. B. C. tournament history today. The Chicagoans took over first and fifth places in the all-events, third and fourth in the singles, fourth in the doubles, and fourth and eighth in the five men. Wilman, the Budweiser anchor, using a powerful hook, totaled 2,028 for nine games, the fourth highest all-events score in the thirty-nine year record of the A. B. C.

The figure was fifty pins ahead of last year's 1,978, turned in by Don Beatty of Jackson, Mich., and gave Wilman an average of 225 for the route. His 627 count helped the Budweisers to second place in the five-man standings with 3,040. His 693 in the doubles with George Theel's 638 carried the pair into fourth place with 1,331.

Joe Starts Hitting.

With 1,320 to his credit as he came up to the singles, Wilman, a 31 year old salesman, started modestly with 183, and Theel led off with 214. Then Wilman electrified the crowd with a string of seven straight strikes.

The No. 10 pin refused to fall in the eighth frame, but he smashed strikes the rest of the way for a 279 count. Needing 190 in the third game for the all-events leadership, he pounded out 246 for 708 and third place in the singles. Theel collected 246 in his second game and eased off to 183 for a 643 series. He had 640 in the five man effort, and with his 638 in the doubles he took over fifth place in the all-events with 1,921.

Strouse Does All Right.

At the same time on adjoining alleys Lloyd Strouse of the Joseph L. Gills quintet was rolling up a 705 series in the singles. Without a single favorable break, he hit for 246 in his first game, 224 in the second, and 235 in the third.

Wallie Freitag, Gill anchor, got a 656 count on games of 236, 203, 217. Leonard Straub of the Eden Insurance team hit 650 on the nose with 213, 206, 231. Joe Aurveck and Augie Caponi of the Postoffice team joined in the raid on prize money with 1,203 in the doubles.

The Birk Brothers, defending team champion, wound up the spectacular Chicago showing by totaling 3,006 late tonight to take fourth place. The Randolph league team, which posted 3,234 last year, opened with 973 and then added 1,025 and 1,008. The Windy City Bowling Association took eighth place with 2,990, starting with 1,021 and 1,034 and then falling away to 935.

Wilman's brilliant 2,028 should stand up for the diamond medal and title award.

Jack Burke of Detroit slipped into tenth place in the all-events with 1,913 for the only other change of the day among the leaders.

MISSOURI GIVES IRISH PERMISSION TO CANCEL ENTRY

Notre Dame, Ind., April 8.—[Special.]—Notre Dame today withdrew from the track meet with the University of Missouri at Columbia, Mo., scheduled for April 15. Announcement of the cancelation came from Director of Athletics Elmer F. Layden following action by the faculty board in control of athletics.

Removal of the original purpose of the meet, which was to have been a triangular affair, by the previous withdrawal of Wisconsin was given by Layden as cause for his action.

Wisconsin Pulls Out.

"Our faculty board sanctioned the triangular meet, in which we were to join with Missouri and Wisconsin in honoring Tom Jones of Wisconsin, former Missouri coach, on the occasion of the University of Missouri centennial," Layden said.

"The withdrawal of Wisconsin's team by Jones changes the purpose of the meet," he said, "and with the permission of the University of Missouri, which has released us from our contract, Notre Dame withdraws."

Wisconsin declined to compete when Missouri asked the withdrawal of its hurdle star, Ed. Smith, a Negro.

Coaches are Alumni.

Coach C. G. Simpson of Missouri and Coach John P. Nicholson of Notre Dame were pupils of Jones at Missouri in 1911 when Missouri won the Western conference championship. The Big Ten meet was an open event at that time.

Notre Dame's outdoor season will open with the Drake and Penn relays April 28 and 29. The squad will be split for the two meets.

Athletics Release Barna and Bartling

Atlanta, Ga., April 8.—(AP)—Connie Mack released two rookies to minor league clubs today. The players and their destinations are: Babe Barna, outfielder, to Chattanooga of the Southern league; Irving Bartling, infielder, to Atlanta of the Southern league.

Smelt Runs Heavy

Boyne City, Mich., April 8.—[Special.]—Smelt fishers in this section are taking advantage of the heaviest run of the silvery fish in ten years. The run opened at 10 o'clock Thursday night, with hundreds of dippers on hand. The run still is not at its peak, members of the Boyne City Rod and Gun club report, as most of the fish caught have been males, indicating the real run has only started. Across Lake Michigan at Escanaba, in the upper Michigan peninsula, the smelt also are running heavily in the Ford and Fishdam rivers. An average of twenty fish per dip with an 18 inch net is reported from the Ford river. Wisconsin smelt centers also report excellent runs.

NOTRE DAME NINE BEATS ILLINOIS IN OPENER, 4-2

Champaign, Ill., April 8.—[Special.]—Two singles, both by John Drish, were all the hits Illinois made off Norvall Hunthausen as Notre Dame won its opening baseball game from Illinois today, 4 to 2. Hunthausen struck out eight and walked three.

Capt. Joe Nardone of the Irish singled in the first and was driven in by Sullivan. Scovic, who led the Irish batters with three hits, singled in the fourth and sixth to score runners. Hunthausen's single in the ninth scored Scovic. In the sixth Drish's hit and Irish misplays brought in two runs for the Illini. Score:

TEDDY WEED IS WINNER OF RICH TROPICAL STAKE

Coral Gables, Fla., April 8.—(AP)—Teddy Weed, Tomara stable's 4 year old colt, drove to victory in the $10,000 added Tropical handicap today, winning by a head in a three horse blanket finish.

The favorite, paying $7 to win, Teddy Weed came up between horses to beat Superior farm's Bob's Boy, with J. B. Partridge's Our Ketcham another neck back.

Today's program closed the regular fifty day Tropical Park meeting, during which a track pari-mutuel record was set. An extra day of races will be run off Monday, proceeds going to the Florida exhibit at the New York World's Fair.

Foul Not Allowed.

Jocky Ira Hanford rated Teddy Weed well. Off fourth, the Tomara colt stayed among the leaders and was third going into the stretch. There Teddy Weed moved up beside Bert Friend's Co-Sport, the early leader, forged ahead and withstood challenges of Bob's Boys and Our Ketcham.

The winner's share of the purse was $7,950. Teddy Weed ran the mile and one-sixteenth in 1:44 2-5, paying $5.10 to place and $3.70 to show. Bob's Boys returned $12.40 and $6.70 and Our Ketcham $5.40.

Jocky A. Schmidl, up on the long shot Bob's Boys, charged interference in the last 70 yards, but the stewards disallowed his foul claim.

Hialeah Figures Down.

Tropical park showed a considerable gain in mutuel play, its estimated total of $12,799,260 for the 50 days comparing with $12,175,779 last season. The attendance, however, was slightly lower, 306,660 to 308,443.

Hialeah park handled $21,786,411 during its 46 day meeting and attracted 494,659 patrons as compared with $22,076,243 and 514,395 spectators last year.

The total pari-mutuel play for the three tracks was $35,026,723 as compared with $34,252,022 for the previous 96 day thoroughbred season at Hialeah and Tropical. The total attendance this season was 823,956.

BROWNS SCORE 2 IN 9TH TO TIE; TRIUMPH IN 10TH

Hartnett in Season's Catching Debut.

BY EDWARD BURNS.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

San Antonio, Tex., April 8.—Ten runs and twenty hits, including an eight run, nine hit fifth inning, weren't enough to make a success of Gabby Hartnett's 1939 catching debut this afternoon against the St. Louis Browns. The American leaguers made two runs off Newell Kimball after two were out in the ninth to tie the score at 10-all and, after Stan Hack had been thrown out at the plate in the first of the tenth, scored against Walter Higbe with two out in their tenth for an 11 to 10 victory.

Until George McQuinn wrecked the show by knocking his second triple of the afternoon with two out and two on in the ninth to give the Browns their tie, the high spot of the ceremonies was that big eight run Cub fifth inning, featuring a triple and a homer by Clay Bryant.

Clay's Quite a Hitter.

Bryant was a better slugger than pitcher. In the second inning Clay walked Beau Bell and pitched a homer to Harland Clift. Then he walked Red Kress and pitched a homer to Johnny Berardino. After the big fifth had brought the Cubs' advantage to 9 to 4, Bryant again engaged in serving walks and extra base hits. McQuinn knocked a triple for his third straight hit and Clift boomed his second homer of the game and his ninth of the exhibition season.

Kimball replaced Bryant at the start of the sixth and, after pitching a single to the first batsman he faced, retired the next nine in order. With the Browns trailing 10 to 8 going into the ninth, Billy Sullivan got the excitement under way with a single. Myril Hoag forgot his Yankee training and while pinch batting popped to Stan Hack for the second out. Pinch Batter Mel Mazzera was called out on strikes and a Cub victory seemed imminent. Sam Harshany batted for Grace and walked, whereupon Roy Hughes was sent to first to run for him. McQuinn then socked an enormous triple to right center, scoring Sullivan and Hughes with the tying runs.

Higbe Has Trouble.

After the Cub tenth had ended with Hack's aforesaid out at the plate, Higbe undertook to pitch. He started by walking Clift. Sig Gryska sacrificed, but Berardino popped to Mesner and Sullivan was given an intentional pass. Then Hoag's Yankee heritage came to him. He banged a single past Mesner and Clift got home with the winning run.

Here's the detail of the manner in which the Cubs terminated their scoreless status in the fourth to make the score Browns, 4; Cubs, 1. After Gleeson had fanned, Leiber reached first on Clift's fumble and stopped at second on Marty's single to left. Cavarretta fouled to Sullivan, but Hartnett singled to right, scoring Leiber

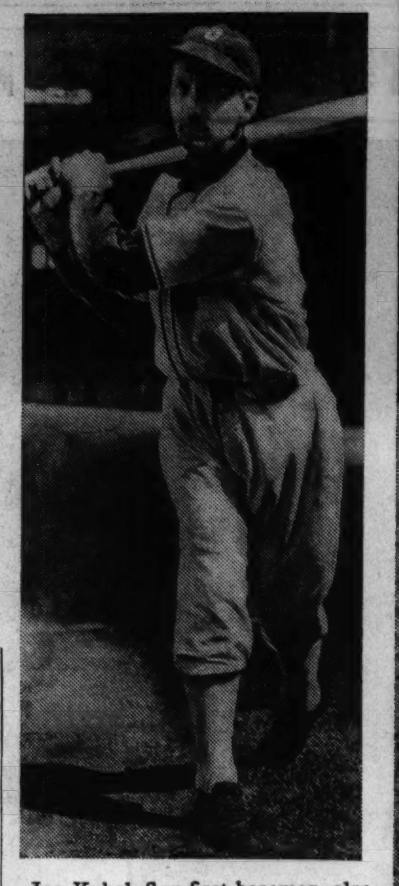
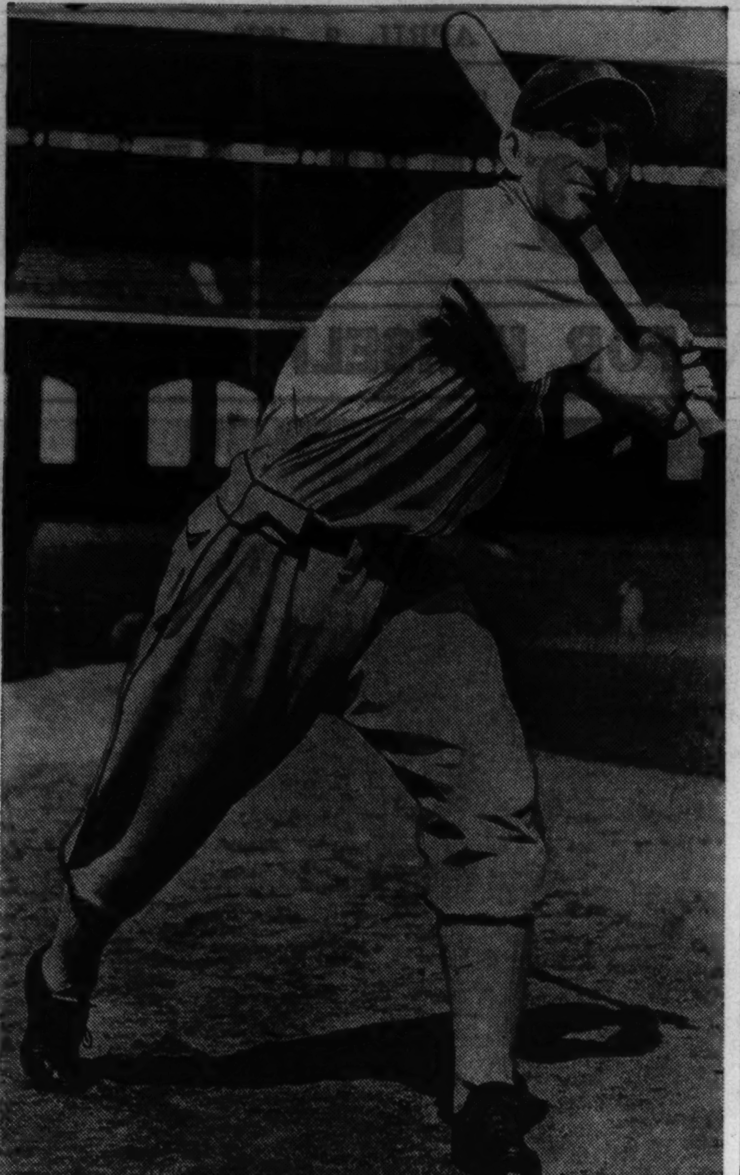
FANS WILL WATCH THESE HITTERS AS CUBS, SOX COME HOME

The Cubs and Sox come home Friday to finish their spring series in four games in Wrigley field and Comiskey park. South side fans who have been checking spring batting averages are wondering if Eric McNair, Sox second baseman acquired from the Red Sox, will keep up his .500 pace.



Joe Kuhel, Sox first baseman, also has occupied a prominent place in the south siders' attack. His spring average is .364.

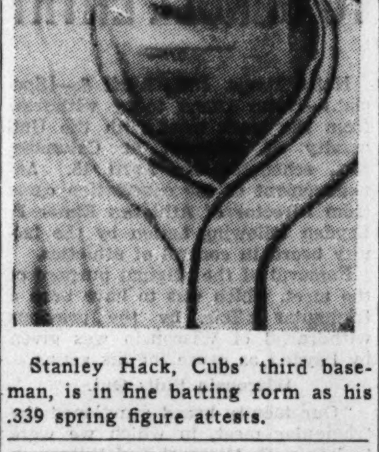


Luke Appling, Sox shortstop, has been smacking the ball at a .354 clip in spring training games, and appears ready to better his .303 mark of 1938.

Joe Marty is assuring himself a regular spot in the Cub outfield by his consistent hitting in exhibition games. Marty has a .435 average to date.

A fellow expected to help the Cubs along as the spring series comes to Wrigley field Friday is Hank Leiber. This center fielder, acquired from the Giants, is hitting .379 in spring games.

Right up there with the leading Cub hitters in spring games is Billy Herman, second baseman. His .353 average looks good to Cub boosters.



Stanley Hack, Cubs' third baseman, is in fine batting form as his .339 spring figure attests.

WALTERS STARS AS REDS DEFEAT RED SOX, 13 TO 5

Bucky Yields Six Hits; Drives In Four Runs.

Greensboro, N. C., April 8.—(AP)—Doubling in the second to score three runs and singling in the fourth for another, Bucky Walters helped win his own ball game today as the Cincinnati Reds pounded out a 13 to 5 victory over the Boston Red Sox.

A home run by Billy Myers in the fifth, with two aboard—both walked by Freddie Ostermueller—also helped the ex-Philly in his six hit performance through six innings before giving way to Gene Thompson.

Vander Meer Is Back.

Doc Cramer and Manager Joe Cronin got to Walters for doubles in the first, good for one tally, but, except for a home run ball to Jim Tabor in the fourth with Williams aboard and a two run, three hit splurge in the fifth, he escaped serious trouble, despite a gratuity of five passes.

Johnny Vander Meer, the Reds' double no hit star, returned to the team today, reporting complete recovery from an illness that forced him to remain in Florida.

The Reds also will leave here with Harry Wolf of the Durham, N. C., club, a 6 foot 3 inch hurler weighing 195 pounds. Score:

MUNGO TAMES TIGERS.

Augusta, Ga., April 8.—[Special.]—The combination of Van Lingle Mungo's pitching in the pinches and home runs by Goody Rosen and Dolf Camilli, enabled the Dodgers to win their seventh spring contest today. They beat the Detroit Tigers, 5 to 2.

Mungo, who hurled five innings for the first time since he made his unconditional surrender to the Brooklyn club's take it or leave it offer of $5,000, became the winning pitcher when Camilli's long homer off Alton Benton in the fourth was followed by Ernie Koy's and Cookie Lavagetto's singles and Ray Hayworth's sacrifice fly. Rosen had fired his homer over the right field fence on his first time at bat in the opening inning.

Mungo threw not more than a half dozen really fast balls, but he shot in a sharp breaking curve. He walked seven. Hugh Casey held Mungo's lead safely in the last four innings by pitching to only twelve men.

Mungo wasn't parsimonious with his pitches, throwing 109 balls in his five innings—approximately enough for an entire nine inning game. Considering that he had previously pitched only four innings in two games and is only now getting back to his effective overhand delivery of three years ago, he showed promise. Score:

Detroit	100	100	000—2	6	1
Brooklyn	100	200	11*—5	7	0

PIRATES, 1; GIANTS, 0.

Baton Rouge, La., April 8.—(AP)—The Pittsburgh Pirates scored their sixth straight exhibition victory today by defeating the New York Giants' "A" team, 1 to 0, on a ninth inning error by Left Fielder Joe Moore. With one down in the ninth, Pep Young and Lee Handley cracked out singles. Moore let the second hit go through him and it rolled to the fence while Young scored the only run.

The Bucs made only six hits off Harry Gumbert and Bill Lohrman, while the Giants collected eight from Bob Klinger and Ken Heintzleman. Half the Giant hits were made by Johnny McCarthy and Tom Hafey.

Joe Medwick hit two home runs and Mickey Owen and Stu Martin got one each to lead the Cardinal attack. Score:

A'S WHIP ATLANTA.

Atlanta, Ga., April 8.—(AP)—A four run rally in the eighth inning gave the Philadelphia Athletics a 5 to 4 victory over Atlanta of the Southern association today.

A two base muff by Emil Mailho of Bill Nagel's long fly to center permitted Phillips and Chapman to score the tying and winning runs. Bill Lillard, rookie shortstop, slammed out three hits in five trips to the plate for the Athletics. Score:

Birmingham, Ala., April 8.—(AP)—Led by Wally Moses, who hit four consecutive singles, Earl Mack's squad of the Philadelphia Athletics slammed out 22 hits today to score a 15 to 1 triumph over Birmingham of the Southern association. Nick Etten drove in four runs with three singles and a long fly while Gantenbein hit a triple and a 425 foot home run. George Caster and Edgar Smith divided the pitching for the A's, each yielding four hits. Score:

A SQUEEZE PLAY CAUSES YANKEES' 1ST DEFEAT, 5-4

Little Rock, Ark., April 8.—(AP)—The shock of facing a right handed pitcher for the first time since leaving Florida was too much for the New York Yankees today and they crumbled, losing to the Little Rock Travelers, 5 to 4, in ten innings.

As embarrassing as the result, the world champion's first loss in eight games, was the fact that it came on a squeeze play, a strategem virtually obsolete in the American league.

Held to five hits for the ten innings, the Yanks nevertheless led, 4 to 0, at the start of the eighth. One of the hits was a homer by Joe Gordon. Then Red Ruffing's shutout chances collapsed under a three run barrage in the eighth, and another run in the ninth tied the score.

Marvin Breuer, the right handed rookie from Kansas City, was called to the mound for the Yanks in the tenth and had to take the rap—which in this case was a bunt scoring the winning run. Score:

New York [A.]	000	220	000	0—4	5	2

PHILS, 10; LOOKOUTS, 8.

Chattanooga, Tenn., April 8.—(AP)—Scoring four runs in the ninth inning after two were out, the Phillies today again beat the Chattanooga Lookouts of the Southern association, 10 to 8. A triple by Catcher Spud Davis with two on base accounted for the winning runs.

Before the game, the Phils announced the conditional purchase for $25,000 of First Baseman Sam Gabrielson from Seattle of the Pacific Coast league. Pitcher Pete Sivess was sent to Newark of the International league in part payment as Gabrielson was owned by the New York Yankees. Gabrielson, a six foot, 190 pounder, played with Binghamton in the Eastern league in 1937. Score:

Spencer Coals Open Semi-Pro Drills Today

Candidates for regular places on the Spencer Coals baseball team will work out today in Spencer field, 4200 North Central avenue. Manager Nate Shyer will order a two hour drill for the 100 aspiring youngsters and veterans expected to report. It will begin at 1:30 o'clock.

Nate Shyer.

Chicago's other semi-pro team, the Mills, will get their training season under way next Sunday in Mills stadium, Lake street and Kilpatrick avenue. Manager William G. Harley has been busy lining up his veterans and fixing his summer's schedule. The Mills and the Spencer Coals will hold their official openings on May 7.

Improvements in Spencer field and Mills stadium are planned by Managers Shyer and Harley. Both teams are expected to rejoin the Tri-State Baseball league. The Mills last year finished third in the league standing and the Spencer Coals fourth.

One of the big problems confronting Manager Shyer is the absence of Bill [Lefty] Stevens from his roster. Stevens, winner of twenty games in 1937, is seeking a better financial agreement with the club. Stevens had a trial with the Pittsburgh Pirates last spring. The National leaguers ordered him to Knoxville, but he chose to return to Chicago rather than report to the Southern association club.

Manager Harley expects to have several new faces in his 1939 lineup. Weather permitting, Harley plans workouts almost daily after next Sunday.

count for the same number of runs. Chapman opened with a single, which eluded Appling. He was forced on Heath's tap to McNair. Trosky invariably hits to right, but this time he aimed into left and Walker was so surprised that he couldn't locate the ball. Trosky made three bases on the smack, scoring Heath. Trosky went home while Appling was throwing out Hale from deep short.

The fifth was most embarrassing for the Sox. Tresh, Rigney, and Owen fanned in order, but in the sixth Feller went to the other extreme and the Chicago lads picked up the tying run. Steinbacher and Walker walked. Steinbacher went to third while Walker was being forced at second on Appling's bounder to Webb. Steinbacher then scored on Kreevich's sacrifice fly. Kuhel followed with a single to deep short, but McNair forced him.

Rigney Wriggles Out.

Rigney got himself into a very ticklish spot in the seventh. Trosky led off and again hit to left. The drive was good for three bases, but the ball happened to roll among some loose boards used in a temporary bleacher job, so Hal was automatically held to two bases. He went to third on Shilling's bunt and stayed there while Owen was throwing out Pytlak. Grimes walked, this being a more or less intentional maneuver. Rigney then struck out Humphries.

The happy doings in the Sox eighth began with a pass to Steinbacher. Walker bunted and the ball was permitted to roll to short for a hit. The bases were packed on a walk to Appling. Kreevich bounced a single into center to score Steinbacher and Walker and put Appling on third and dashed to second on the throw in. Kuhel struck out by making a half-hearted swing at a bad pitch, but McNair came through with a long fly to Heath and Appling scored. Tresh lofted to Chapman for the third out.

Oscar Gets Mad.

Brown was the first Sox to hang out his bat in the ninth and he walked. Owen bounced a ball directly at Humphries, but the youngster turned his back and let it go on its way for a single. Mr. Oscar Vitt, the Indian manager, was so enraged by Humphries' fielding that he immediately yanked the young man and substituted Lefty Milnar. Steinbacher's intended sacrifice bunt resulted in forcing Brown at third. Walker singled through short to score Owen, but Jerry was flagged down trying to go to second on the throw in.

The Indians' only hit off Brown was Trosky's double into center field with one out in the ninth. The next two guys couldn't push the ball out of the infield.

The Sox returned to their Pullman special tonight and rode over to Baton Rouge for battle tomorrow with Bill Terry's Giants. Thornton Lee and Bill Dietrich will tackle the National leaguers. Cliff Melton will start for the latter.

WILDCATS LOSE TO MISSISSIPPI STATE, 7 TO 2

State College, Miss., April 8.—[Special.]—Mississippi State today made it two straight over the Northwestern U. baseball team, 7 to 2. John Goldak pitched all the way for Northwestern.

Fred Slimberick got four hits to maintain his record as leading hitter of the six game trip. The four runs scored off Goldak in the first inning were made on scratchy infield hits. The game was the last of the southern training trip. The Wildcats divided four games with Louisiana and Alabama and lost two to Mississippi State. Score:

Browns Rally in 10th; Beat Cubs, 11 to 10 and putting Marty on third. Mesner fanned to end the inning.

This is the way the Cubs grabbed a 9 to 4 lead in the fifth. Bryant tripled off the left field fence. Hack popped to Berardino, but Herman tripled to left center, Bryant scoring. Gleeson doubled, Leiber and Marty singled, Cavarretta doubled, Hartnett popped to McQuinn, Mesner singled, and Bryant knocked a homer. All this smacking was good for eight runs and a bath for Johnny Marcum. Cole was called in to pitch for St. Louis. Hack singled to center for the ninth hit of the inning but was out trying to reach second.

Then They Stopped Scoring.

The Cubs couldn't produce at Cole's expense until the eighth. In that session Hack beat out an infield bouncer, took second on Herman's out, and scored on Gleeson's single to right. This wound up Cub production for the day.

Hartnett's debut came as a result of the return of hot weather after having been postponed a day because of a sudden cold snap. Gabby has been feeling fine all spring, according to general belief, despite the Cub tendency to illuminate and embellish clinical reports. He simply had chosen to wait until today to conserve his physical resources and cut down the dangers of a scourge of finger injuries such as beset him late last season. Gabby caught five innings, threw out two ambitious base runners by many feet, and singled to drive in the first Cub run of the afternoon. Gabby said he felt no ill effects from his experience and refused to be X-rayed.

Augie Faces Operation.

An infinitly more serious clinical item has to do with the shipping of Augie Galan to Chicago for a cartilage operation on his left knee. Augie said before departing he had desired an operation in the off season but that Cub advisers did not think it necessary. He now wants a cartilage growth corrected through surgery.

Galan will reach the La Salle street station in Chicago at 1:58 tomorrow afternoon and probably will enter a hospital Monday.

The Cubs and Browns will play the third game of their six game series here tomorrow afternoon, after which they move up to Dallas.

Goldberg, claimed by the Cardinals in the National Football league draft last fall, conferred with Owner Charles Bidwill and Coach Ernie Evers at length and then left for home with the promise to consider the club's salary offer.

Bidwill said satisfactory progress has been made and that he expects Goldberg to come to terms within a week.

Strafaci Wins in Pinehurst Amateur, 1 Up

Pinehurst, N. C., April 8.—(AP)—Frank Strafaci of Brooklyn, N. Y., retained his north and south amateur title today by beating Bobby Dunkelberger of High Point, N. C., the 1937 winner, 1 up in the 36 hole final round of the 39th annual tournament.

Dunkelberger, who won the French amateur title last summer, kept in the game by holing out long putts at the 34th and 35th greens, and the players were even when they teed off at the final hole of the match.

Bobby Has Trouble.

The Carolinian pulled his iron into a bunker and Strafaci played a four iron to within four feet of the hole. Dunkelberger exploded out of the bunker and his ball ran over the green.

Strafaci had a lead of three holes after the 18 hole morning round, which he did in 70, two under par. He was 4 up at the first hole in the afternoon when he holed a birdie 3. Then he eased up and lost five consecutive holes and found himself 1 down.

Frank Squares It.

The next three holes were halved and Dunkelberger was 1 up going into the final nine. Strafaci squared the match at the 29th, where Dunkelberger was bunkered. Both players missed the 30th green and halved in 5s. Strafaci went 1 up at the 31st, where he dropped a 25 foot putt for a birdie 3.

The former public links champion held this lead until the 35th. Here he hit a fine iron on the green and Dunkelberger bunkered his tee shot. Strafaci three putted from 25 feet and Dunkelberger, after exploding 20 feet beyond the hole, sank the putt. Strafaci then missed a five footer and the match was all even as the players went to the 36th tee.

BOYS' TOWN HEAD IS NOTRE DAME NIGHT SPEAKER

The Very Rev. E. J. Flanagan, director of Boys' Town, will be the principal speaker at the annual banquet of Universal Notre Dame night at the Knickerbocker hotel, April 17. The Chicago program, which is part of a national hookup, will include talks by Harry Stuhldreher, football coach and athletic director at the University of Wisconsin, and the Rev. Vincent E. Mooney, C. S. C., of Washington, D. C. Arch Ward, sports editor of THE TRIBUNE, will be toastmaster.

Among the honored guests will be Edward Doyle, president of the Commonwealth Edison company; Walter E. Botthof, president of the Standard Rate and Data company; John C. Tully, president of the La Grange National bank, and Byron Kanaley, chairman of the board of trustees of the university.

Baer and Day to See Coliseum Boxing Program

Max Baer, former heavyweight champion, and Davey Day, Chicago lightweight challenger, will attend Thursday's boxing show in the Coliseum.

Baer will watch with interest two possible future opponents who appear in two of three bouts of ten rounds—Tony Musto, Blue Island slugger, who has a record of twenty-five victories in twenty-seven starts, and Paul Hartnek, 1936 and 1937 Chicago Golden Gloves title holder, who has won eleven of his fourteen professional contests.

Musto clashes with Lem Franklin, 1937 international Golden Gloves heavyweight winner, and Hartnek with Henry Wacker, Taylorville, Ill., battler, who has registered eight knockouts in ten fights.

Day will be on hand to view the ten rounder involving Milt Aron and Milo Theodrescu, welterweight of Rumania. This move on the part of Day will tend to revive rumors that Davey may meet the survivor, but Sam Pian, manager of Davey, squelched this possibility at its source.

"Day may have battled Henry Armstrong for the welterweight title," Pian explained, "but he remains a legitimate lightweight as testified by the 136 pounds he carried against Armstrong. If Aron or Theodrescu want to fight Day he'll have to weigh in at 142 pounds."

In previous attempts to arrange a Day-Aron match Milt's handlers have maintained that Aron can't weigh less than 147 pounds and retain his strength. F. M.

KUNES LEADS IN ASHEVILLE, N. C., GOLF WITH 138

Metz and Bulla 3 Strokes Back on 141s.

Asheville, N. C., April 8.—(AP)—While galleries trailed around with more familiar golfing figures, Gene Kunes of Pennsylvania traveled quietly over Beaver Lake's hilly fairways today to establish a course record and assume command of the $5,000 Land of the Sky open tournament.

The 30 year old Kunes, a native of Erie, Pa., who was Canadian open champion of 1935, breezed through the second round with a 67, five shots under par, and a 36 hole total of 138 that put him out in front of his fellow professionals by three shots.

Overhauls Metz and Bulla.

In overhauling the opening leaders, Dick Metz and Johnny Bulla, Chicago professionals, Kunes played precision golf down the fairways and fired his irons dead to the pins. His longest putt was a 15 footer at the 17th for one of his five birdies. Kunes' other putts were six feet and under, so true were his irons.

Metz and Bulla played exceptional golf to post 71s, one under par, but three strokes back of the front-running Kunes with 141s.

Thomson, Hines Have 143.

Two shots back of Metz and Bulla with 143s were Jimmy Thomson of Shawnee-on-Delaware, Pa., and Jimmy Hines, metropolitan open champion from Lakeville, L. I., whose second round scoring was par 72 and one under 71, respectively.

Bracketed with 144s were Jack Toomer, professional from Reidsville, N. C.; Johnny Revolta, and Ky Laffoon. These three golfers had rounds of 72—72.

Espensen and Kist Will End Drills Today

Don Espensen, clever Minneapolis welterweight, and Dick Kist of Danville, Ill., will finish training today for their return contest of eight rounds in Marigold Gardens tomorrow.

In a previous meeting in Marigold March 27 Kist held Espensen to a six round draw. This achievement kept Kist's record clear of defeats in eighteen starts. His only other draw fight was scored against Verne Patterson last Nov. 14. Among Kist's sixteen victims are Eddie Carroll, Bobby La Monte, Wilbur Dunn, Steve Padon, Johnny Panek, and Johnny Rock.

In the two additional matches at eight rounds Buddy Scott, Dallas, Tex., light heavyweight, is paired with Al Reiss of Detroit, and Al Globe, Los Angeles 175 pounder, with Ernie Valente of Milwaukee. Scott is a capable boxer. Last March 17 he whipped Jack Marshall in Dallas. Jack Kearns, former manager of Jack Dempsey, recommends Reiss.

Tommy Pallatin, South Bend 145 pounder, meets Fernie Bacca of El Passo, Tex., in a six round event.

Wladyslaw Talun, giant wrestler from Poland, opposes Jim McMillen in White City tomorrow and John [Bull] Doehring in Cicero stadium Wednesday.

Supporting matches in White City:

Matty Matsura vs. Jack Claybourn; Dick Sampson vs. Ray Clements; Young Hackenschmidt vs. Stan Novak.

Preliminary encounters in the Cicero arena:

Wladek Zbyszko vs. John Evko; Joe Dvorak vs. Leo [Cowboy] Ackley; Art Fiflis vs. Jackie Root; Jack Zeravitch vs. Jack Ross.

Nate Bolden and Oscar Rankin will work out in Sonny Wallace's Savoy gymnasium on the south side this afternoon in preparation for a headliner in White City Friday. Chester Rutecki, Catholic Youth organization middleweight, and Johnny Shaw are principals in a five round semi-final. Two preliminary bouts at four rounds will show Jimmy Diamico, Henry Fuscaldo's 142 pound protegé, and Pete Ferrand, South Chicago lightweight. . . . After a workout this afternoon Max Baer will leave for Des Moines where he will serve as referee tomorrow. He'll return to the loop on Tuesday.

Leo Rodak, only boxer to win three Golden Gloves championships, left yesterday for Providence, R. I., where he will meet Joey Archibald, recognized as featherweight titleholder by the New York boxing commission, in a fifteen round bout for the world 126 pound title April 18. Rodak, who is rated No. 1 challenger by the National Boxing association, was accompanied by his manager, Nate Lewis. If Rodak wins he will be the first fighter to win a championship under the direction of Lewis. Lewis, who has been connected with boxing for forty years, has piloted several boxers to within reach of titles but they never could attain the coveted goal. Among these are Kid Herman, Charley White, and Joe Welling, lightweights; Pal Moore, bantamweight, and Harry Thomas, heavyweight.

Johnny Forte, flyweight, and William Speary, bantamweight, New York intercity Golden Gloves champions, and Trainer Art Thomas stopped off in Chicago yesterday en route to San Francisco to participate in the National A. A. U. tournament opening there Wednesday. F. M.

RACING OPENS THURSDAY AT KEENELAND OVAL

Meet Gives Kentuckians Line on Juveniles.

BY HOWARD BARRY.

The Kentucky racing season will open Thursday at the Keeneland course near Lexington. Featuring the inaugural program will be a $2,500 stake—the Phoenix handicap.

Keeneland racing will continue until April 27, when the horses will move to Louisville for the Churchill Downs meeting that will be headed by the Kentucky Derby.

Hal Price Headley's 7 year old Preëminent was assigned top weight of 122 pounds yesterday for the Phoenix. W. F. Morgan's The Fighter was given 120 pounds. The weights for the other fourteen eligibles ranged down to 100 pounds, assigned to R. A. Firestone's Court Counsel.

Honor Diamond Saturday.

On Saturday the feature will be the John Morris Diamond Anniversary handicap, in honor of Kentucky's oldest thoroughbred horseman. Veteran horsemen will be special guests, and a trophy will be presented to the winning owner.

The outstanding event of the second week will be Keeneland's annual yearling judging contest. Bluegrass breeders have entered many outstanding youngsters. The event took on an international aspect when Louis Lee Haggin II. entered a French yearling which he imported to his Kentucky farm several months ago.

In addition to the Phoenix, which is for 3 year olds and up, there will be three stakes run during the Keeneland meeting. These will be the $2,500 Ben Ali handicap, also for 3 year olds and up, the $2,500 Lafayette stakes for 2 year olds, and the $5,000 Blue Grass stakes for 3 year olds.

Test for Derby Prospects.

The last named event will be run on the closing day of the meeting and will test the Derby prospects of some likely 3 year olds.

The Keeneland meeting will offer many Kentuckians their first opportunity to get a line on the capabilities of their 2 year olds. Twenty-two events are scheduled for horses of that age. All of these races will be run over the Headley course, which is about 40 feet less than a half mile. The Lafayette stakes, which will headline the program for juveniles, is scheduled for April 26.

Average $7,000 in Purses.

Keeneland will distribute a daily average of a little more than $7,000 during its eleven day meeting. The condition book shows a total of $77,800. The minimum purse has been increased from $600 to $700.

So great has been the demand for stall reservations that President Hal Price Headley and Track Superintendent W. T. Bishop were forced to turn back many requests for space. The late opening of Chicago's racing season sent more horses than ever to Keeneland this year.

There is room for 600 horses at the Keeneland course and for 150 more at the trotting track. With only eleven days of racing, this is considered an ample number.

Honey Cloud (No. 3) seems to have lost to Challephen (No. 1) in the feature race at Bowie yesterday, but when they developed official pictures it was Honey Cloud by a nose.

Honey Cloud Sets Record in Bowie Stake

Bowie, Md., April 8.—[Special.]—In one of the closest finishes of the Bowie meeting, and in time that set a new record for the stake, Honey Cloud and Challephen came to the line here today so closely locked that 12,000 persons were in doubt of the result.

After scrutiny of photoprints the judges finally decided that Mrs. A. J. Abel's Honey Cloud had finished first in this $5,650 revival of the Southern Maryland handicap.

Honey Cloud was timed in 1:47 3-5 for the mile and a sixteenth over a track that had become fast under the sun's rays. This performance reduced by a fifth of a second the record made by Challephen a year ago. On that occasion Challephen shouldered 108, as against 121 for Honey Cloud this afternoon.

His Victory Is Important.

A chestnut gelding by High Cloud, the winner is the main reliance of the Abel family in their racing venture. Mrs. A. J. Abel is the owner and her husband is the trainer. Abel is known as Whitey Abel and formerly was a jocky.

The field of five required only a half minute at the post, and was off in good order. Jocky George Seabo permitted Challephen to go away in leisurely fashion. Honey Cloud, the joint favorite with Hypocrite, who won last Saturday's stake here, set the pace.

When the field had swung around the first two turns Seabo moved Challephen up to third position on the outside. At the far turn he was laying second, and Hypocrite was in third place, along the rail. Hypocrite's subsequent effort to get through along the fence was not good enough, although he had racing room. By this time Honey Cloud had reached the top of the stretch and Seabo circled him with Challephen.

Honey Cloud Keeps Pounding.

Gaining the lead, Challephen opened up, but he never could shake off the Abel color bearer. At the eighth pole Challephen faltered slightly while Honey Cloud drove on as gamely as ever. That decided the issue with the winner returning $6.40 for $2.

SET JULY 16 FOR CITY FEDERATION ALL-STAR GAMES

The annual All-Star double-header, highlight of the season for the hundreds of teams in the Chicago Baseball federation, will be played July 16 in Wrigley field. Sixty players and four managers, chosen from the ranks of the federation membership, will take part. In case of rain the games will be played on July 23.

The federation, sponsored by the Chicago park district, has grown since its organization in 1935 from 1,750 playground teams to more than 4,000. Two new leagues have been organized for this season. They are the East Suburban, with teams in Riverdale, Calumet City, Dolton, Phoenix, Chicago Heights, Hazel Crest, and Harvey, and the Grand Crossing Park league, with headquarters at 76th street and Ingleside avenue.

Teams or players who have not made connections for the season may do so by attending meetings at 127 North Dearborn street and Bessemer park, 89th street and Manistee avenue, at 8 o'clock any Monday evening.

Mystery Fish Is Identified as Rainbow Trout

BY BOB BECKER.

The mysterious fish that lives in Lake Michigan and appears every spring in the shallow water near Miller, Ind., finally has been identified. It's a rainbow trout. Dr. Carl L. Hubbs, curator of fish of the University of Michigan's Mueeum of Zoölogy and an accepted authority on fresh water fish, made the identification.

Dr. Hubbs says that this rainbow is a "lake run" fish which has undergone changes in conformation and color and it may be called a "steelhead" if you prefer that name. But fish raised from this species are true rainbow trout, so the name steelhead simply indicates that this particular type of rainbow lives in the big water instead of in a small stream, where anglers usually catch rainbows with bait or flies.

For years Chicago fishermen have heard about the "landlocked salmon," "steelheads, and "silver salmon" which come into the shallow water near Miller, Ind., and are caught there early in the spring. Many theories have been advanced regarding the identity of this game fish which does not strike either bait or artificial lures, according to commercial fishermen. Year after year rod and line fishermen have tried to catch this elusive fish, but they haven't been successful.

We have been trailing this Lake Michigan species for more than three weeks. We wanted two or three so-called salmon or steelheads in order to send them to Dr. Hubbs. Last week we were lucky in getting several specimens. Dr. Hubbs studied them in the museum and immediately wrote us as follows:

"The rainbow trout arrived in excellent condition and have been identified as Salmo gairdnerii irideus. It is now certain that these fish are not salmon."

Dr. Hubbs points out that when a rainbow trout leaves a stream and goes into the Great Lakes or goes to salt water [as it does on the west coast], it grows very fast and large and becomes streamlined and small headed. It also takes on a brilliant silver color that almost hides the black spots. This description fits the specimens taken near Miller perfectly. Anglers in the Great Lakes area may put this down as an interesting fact in the rainbow versus steelhead question: both are the same species, but when a rainbow goes into the Great Lakes it changes its color and conformation.

Pitching three innings each, Dolasinski, Byrne, and Schmiel of Lane Tech held Waukegan High hitless yesterday to win, 15 to 0, at Paul Revere park.

BEG YOUR PARDON

Tony Piet, former White Sox infielder, has no connection with plans for a Monty Stratton benefit dance scheduled for April 16, as stated in yesterday's TRIBUNE. Piet, now a south side automobile dealer, however, plans to present Stratton with a token of his personal appreciation.

End Reading of Depositions in Turf Suit

Reading of depositions defending Moses L. Annenberg and State Senator Daniel Serritella against charges that they engaged in monopolistic practices with their race information publications was completed yesterday before Federal Master in Chancery Charles A. McDonald.

McDonald is hearing testimony in connection with the suit of John and James Flanagan, publishers of the Chicago Turf Bulletin, for an injunction against Serritella and Annenberg. The brothers charge that the alleged monopoly has injured their business. Final decision will be made by Judge Philip L. Sullivan.

Rates Go Up.

Attorney Matthias Concannon, representing the defendants, read from a deposition made by Isadore Smuckler, manager of the Seaboard News Service, a New York subsidiary of Annenberg's racing information service. Smuckler testified that while he was manager of the National News company of New York from 1924 to 1929, his outfit supplied the Chicago Turf bulletin with racing news.

"At first we charged $100 a week, but this gradually went up to $200," Smuckler said. "In June, 1929, when Annenberg's General News bureau bought the company, the rate was raised to $250. But this was done only because the new combination had valuable additional services."

Smuckler also told of "wire-tapping" methods used by his old firm in pirating news from the General News bureau. He said telegraph operators were paid weekly sums to plug in his company on the General News wire. The defense attorneys claim Annenberg's purchase of Smuckler's firm and other racing services was to halt this piracy rather than to create any monopoly.

Jensen Defends Serritella.

After the completion of the depositions, Henry Jensen, manager of the Sporting Leader Publishing company, 440 South Dearborn street, testified in behalf of Serritella. The Flanagans charge that the term "Scratch Sheet" was usually applied to their Chicago Turf bulletin and that Serritella was unfair in having his publication known as the "National Scratch Sheet." Jensen testified that his company has been publishing Master's Clocker, also known as a scratch sheet since 1924, without any interference.

Master McDonald will resume hearing testimony Tuesday morning at 10 o'clock. The case is being heard in his offices in the Field building.

PLAN TO APPEAL ORDER TO GRANT MIKEL LICENSE

The Illinois racing commission, through its secretary, George Foster, yesterday announced that it would appeal a mandamus issued Friday by Judge Harry M. Fisher of the Circuit court.

The mandamus directed the commission to issue a trainer's license to John D. Mikel of Carlock, Ill., who was ruled off the turf in 1935. The disbarment had been based on the commission's belief that he had raced a 3 year old in an event for 2 year olds.

"The people of the state of Illinois should not be required to stand the expense of an appeal in an attempt to save the commission's face," Charles J. Michal, attorney for Mikel, said yesterday. "It will cost about $1,500 to bring the records up to date and carry the case through another court."

Has 20 Days to Appeal.

Foster stated that the only expense involved in an appeal would be court costs of about $20. He said that all the records of the case are on file with Judge Fisher.

The case has been pending in Judge Fisher's court since last year, the original petition having been for a 1938 license. This was amended to a request for a 1939 license.

The commission now has twenty days in which to file an appeal. If no action is taken by the end of that time the issuance of the license will be mandatory.

Ruled Off for Life.

The incident which started the case occurred on Aug. 15, 1935, when Mikel raced a horse named My Bane in an event for 2 year olds at Lincoln Fields. After examination of the horse, the stewards concluded that he was a 3 year old and barred Mikel from Lincoln Fields. The commission later sustained the track stewards and ruled Mikel off for life.

Mikel took the case to the Circuit court, the Appellate court and the state Supreme court, but each ruled that the commission had acted within the limits of its jurisdiction in ruling him off.

De Youngs Take Stevenson Lead; Aided by 767 Total

BY HOWARD MARTIN.

For most of the bowling season the De Young Fuels have been chasing the Eden Insurance and Budweisers teams in the Stevenson Major league. That's all changed now. The De Youngs are on top, the Edens second, and Budweisers third.

Led by William Smith, who totaled 767, the De Youngs rushed past the Edens by beating them three games. First they drubbed them, 1,023 to 855. Then they brushed them aside, 1,031 to 978, and with the result of the third game offering them an opportunity to climb into first place the De Youngs won, 1,034 to 987.

While the Edens were having their troubles the Budweisers had to wait until the third game to outscore the Underhill Plumbers, a team which is far down in the twenty team standing.

A thrilling race for the title remains in prospect as the De Youngs hold only a one game lead. They have 68 victories and 28 defeats. The Edens have 67 and 29 and the Budweisers 66 and 30. If any of these teams falter, the Bill Rands are ready to step up from their fourth place rung.

Incidentally, Smith's big game in his 767 series was 288, high for the season. His others were 225 and 254. The 767 was second high for the year, being two short of George Theel's league mark.

Classic League.

The Classic league will bowl in the Mayrose Recreation, 9th and Lake streets, Melrose Park tonight. This is the regular schedule and the teams are lined up as follows:

Power House vs. Ambrosia.
Schlitz vs. Baby Ruth.
Prager vs. Thompson Restaurants.
Pabst vs. Monarch.

On South Side Alleys.

Tom Crowe knocked off 694 while leading the Bruck Major league. Others with high scores were Adam Plunge, 679; Bill Buckley, 669; Frank Limberg, 642; Fred Berghaus, 636; Eddy Hannon, 633, and Leo Rollick, 630.

Windy City League.

Tony Logan set a new season record of 757 in the Windy City Major league as the Meister Bräus whipped the leading Budweisers two out of three. The Budweisers now have lost one more game than the second place Whitecaps, who were busy at the A. B. C. during the week's league session. The Mineralites now are in third place, four games behind the Budweisers, and the Congressman Maciejewski team is fourth on the strength of three victories while rolling 3,236, second high series for the season. During this big series Zeman hit 631, Hradek 611, Broderdorf 682, Drs 622, and Svoma 690. Tomorrow's schedule:

Whitecaps vs. Kralovecs; McKesson's Old Crow vs. Meister Bräu; G. & W. Five Star vs. Vogel Brothers; Budweisers vs. Quality Wet Wash; Burlington Zephyrs vs. O'Keefe Coals; Pickwick Cameras vs. Mineralites; Soper Brothers vs. Furman Funerals; Congressman Maciejewski vs. Blazek Tailors.

North End Traveling League.

Although the leading Fox De Luxe rollers lost two games to Samuelson's Kids in the North End Traveling league, they stretched their lead over the second place Birks to four games when the latter dropped their series to the Sid & Mikes. The Farwals had 3,096 for high series, which netted them a clean sweep over the Pepsi-Colas. The Joseph L. Gills and the Keeleys split a double-header. The schedule for tomorrow night:

Kruse Stations at Samuelson's Arcade, 7 p. m.; Farwals vs. Keeleys at Stack & Ryan, 7 p. m.; Pepsi-Colas vs. Gills at Gold Coast, 9 p. m.; Sid & Mikes vs. Fox De Luxe at Kaadland, 9 p. m.

The Birks-Michelob match will be rolled at the North Town Wednesday night.

On North Side Alleys.

The Joseph L. Gills added three more victories to their record at the expense of Fuller Press and just about clinched the Gold Coast Major league title. Joe Sinke rolled 728 on 248, 222, and 258 to help the Gills total 3,064 on games of 999, 1,066, and 999. The Triangles, who won two out of three from Neumann Tailors, are four games back of the Gills. . . . Ed Schuth's 677 and Herman Bohl's 665 led the Merit Cigars to three victories over the Neumann Tailors in the Greater Chicago Traveling league, and as a result Bennett's Arcade has a tighter grip on first place. In another series the Neumanns swept over Avondale Recreation, but those aforementioned three defeats really hurt, with the end of the season nearing.

Randolph League.

The Gills' lead over the Budweisers was cut to four games in the Randolph league, but the pace setters are not worried. They have only six more games to go before the race ends. Joe Puccinelli of the Gills, who beat the La Palinas twice, was high for the league with 708. The Budweisers rolled up 3,088 while beating the Pickwick Cameras three times.

About the Women.

Bee Hochstadter led the Bruck Major league with a 589 series, which included games of 227 and 202. Trailing her were: Tess Reardon, 578; Carrie Enders, 574; Flo Waterman, 559; Frieda Tanner, 556; Ann Unoch, 549, and Ethel Kelly, 540. . . . Honors in the West Ridge league went to Lucille Muno, whose 553 beat Elsie Hull by two pins. Josephine Consier had 537, and Eda Rose, 530. . . . The Budweiser Girls set a city record of 2,878 with games of 892, 1,034, and 952 in the Congress league. The league had one of its biggest sessions with Henrietta Wilman getting 643, Emma Freitag 628, Carrie Enders 627, and Madge Kass 626. Those not quite in the 600 class were: Mary Gordon, 592; Emma Munzel, 592; Mae Ebert, 587; Mary Fukal, 576, and Bess Fender, 576.

Entries received over the weekend will be accepted for the seventh annual Century of Progress women's handicap tournament, opening April 22 in Samuelson's Arcade. . . . Nina Van Camp's 560 led the Stevenson Major league. Hilda Vanderwaz was second with 557, and Anne Rost third with 552. . . . The Chicago Women Golfers team sweepstakes, which was held in the Congress Recreation, was won by the Tam o'Shanters with 2,497. The prize winners follow:

Tam o'Shanter Hookers, 2,497; Medinah Drivers, 2,430; Cog Hill, 2,386; Nordic, 2,376; Medinah Jiggers, 2,350; Medinah Brassies, 2,344; Mohawk Drivers, 2,307; Jackson Park, 2,272; Itasca Putters, 2,256; Medinah Spoons, 2,229.

Here and There.

Entries will close tomorrow night for the annual Cinderella Recreation handicap tournament. There will be five man, doubles, and singles competition. . . . RAMBLERS WHIP EVERGREEN, 14-8; WIN POLO TITLE

Artillery Shamrocks and Juniors Beaten.

New York, April 8.—[Special.]—The west, for the first time in history, won the national indoor polo championship tonight as the 124th Field Artillery Ramblers of Chicago whipped Evergreen Farms of Red Bank, N. J., 14 to 8, for their second straight victory in the best of three series.

The Ramblers beat Evergreen, 11 to 6, Wednesday night in the opening game of the set.

The Ramblers' victory was based on superior hitting and team play. The trio, composed of Bill Fergus, Bobby Nichoalds, and Jay Secor, was behind only once, and then because Evergreen had a one goal handicap at the start of the match. Nichoalds evened it up with a short shot, and the Chicagoans went ahead on two penalties called on Billy Nicholls and Cyril Harrison of Evergreen, each good for a goal. Secor added two goals to give the Chicagoans a 5 to 1 lead at the end of the first period.

Evergreen never recovered, although it did manage to hold the Ramblers nearly even in the second period, and entered the third trailing, 9 to 4. But the Chicago team scored four times in this chukker to put the game beyond reach. Lineups:

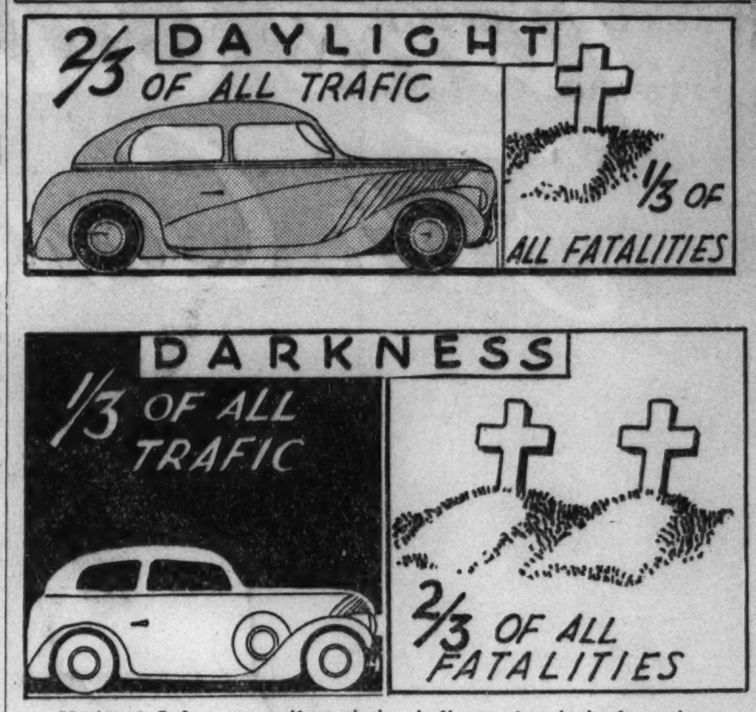
MOTORS—TRAFIC—HIGHWAYS

Risks Rise as Sun Sets



National Safety council statistics indicate that it is four times as dangerous to drive after dark as in daylight. The hours of darkness account for two-thirds of all trafic fatalities and only one-third of all motor travel.

SAFETY COUNCIL LISTS 157 CITIES ON HONOR ROLL

BY HAL FOUST.

The National Safety council last week published an honor roll of 157 cities with populations between 5,000 and 10,000. These cities were without a trafic fatality during 1938. They won this distinction in a safety contest by 1,163 communities in this population group.

Illinois and Pennsylvania tied at 19 for the highest number of cities to win these honors. They also were among those with the highest number entered in the contest, which partly explains the results.

Illinois Cities on Roll.

The Illinois cities on the safety roll are as follows:

Lombard	Monmouth
Murphysboro	Gillespie
Taylorville	Villa Park
Riverside	Wood River
Naperville	St. Charles
Lake Forest	Pontiac
Mt. Carmel	Glencoe
Normal	Venice
Downers Grove	Spring Valley
Clinton

Nine Wisconsin cities were also cited. They are:

Rice Lake	Antigo
Oconto	Fort Atkinson
Waupun	Neenah
Merrill	Portage
Monroe

Eight Indiana cities free of trafic deaths for twelve months are as follows:

Sullivan	Plymouth
Kendallville	Auburn
Columbus	Hartford City
Lebanon	Valparaiso

Eight Cities in Michigan.

Michigan also has eight cities without a 1938 trafic death. They are:

Grand Haven	Marshall
Hancock	Coldwater
St. Joseph	Manistee
Petoskey	Mt. Pleasant

The National Safety council's contest is conducted annually to stimulate interest and activity in accident reduction.

MIDGET PILOTS RACE FOR SILVER TROPHY TONIGHT

The Easter handicap will be the main event on the auto race program tonight in the 124th Field Artillery armory, 5200 Cottage Grove avenue, where spirited competition is anticipated in every event as the drivers continue their battle for the 1939 indoor title. The time trials start at 7 o'clock with the first race at 8:30.

Len Bernard, president of the Western Speedway, Inc., has donated a silver trophy as a prize for the winner of the handicap. Double title points will be awarded to money winners in the various events. The indoor title will be decided on points.

Pilots will qualify for the Easter feature in four elimination races in which they are lined up inversely to the speed of their time trials. Nonqualifiers will meet in a consolation race.

NEWS AND VIEWS

The Hudson Motor Car company has announced a new series of 1939 cars which it has named the Pacemaker Six line. Powered by a 96 horsepower motor and built on a 118 inch wheelbase, the Pacemaker fits into a price class between the Hudson 112 and the Hudson De Luxe Six. It gives Hudson a line of cars extending from the lowest price field through the moderate price field.

The Pacemaker contains all the basic 1939 Hudson features, including the dual braking system, the new auto-poise control, dash-locking safety hood and gear shift handle located at the steering wheel. The dual brakig system provides an auxiliary brake to take effect should the hydraulic brakes fail. Auto-poise control is a device which keeps the front wheels in alignment in the event of tire blowout or road trouble.

The Pacemaker is available in four body types — a 3 passenger coupe, touring brougham, victoria coupe, and touring sedan.

Ben T. Wright, head of Ben T. Wright, Inc., is to be one of the principal speakers at the twenty-second annual convention of the National Automobile Dealers association in San Francisco, April 17 to 20. He is to speak on "What is being done or could be done in the metropolitan areas." Wright, who is one of the leading Ford dealers in the Chicago area, is director and treasurer of the Chicago Automobile Trade association.

The Nash Motors division of the Nash-Kelvinator corporation in its spring sales campaign is emphasizing the "fun of driving," W. A. Blees, general sales manager, states. The company is dramatizing the pleasure and comfort developments in the modern automobile. "These developments are above and beyond the factors that have made the automobile the most efficient unit in world transportation, although it costs less per pound than hamburger," Blees said.

Safety features found in the 1939 Chevrolet, it is pointed out, include enlarged driver's field of vision, greater rear vision, rear and front fenders, door lock security, padding on rear of front seat, dash knobs, accessibility of handbrake lever and the design of the dome light.

Edson A. Smith, who has been driving a Dodge truck on a Good Will tour to Latin America, nominates the "Highway in the Skies"—far up in the Peruvian Andes—as "the ideal truck testing ground." In a letter to T. W. Moss, director of Dodge truck sales, Smith commented that the trip over the road was made during the rainy season and the car traveled alternately through snow, sleet and rain over roads that "reminded me of a washboard at a 45 degree angle." He said the roads are seldom wide enough to permit the driver even momentary relaxation. Trafic is controled by the calendar, moving in one direction one day and in the opposite the next.

JUNIOR CHAMBER BACKS BETTER STREET LIGHTING

Trafic Fatalities Trebled at Night on City Arteries

BY HAL FOUST.

Better street illumination for accident prevention will be promoted by the Chicago Junior Chamber of Commerce. C. Lowell Robling, chairman of the safety committee, last week said that a formal resolution announcing this objective is to be passed by the chamber at its meeting next Tuesday.

"Visibility, and therefore street lighting," reads the resolution, "has been proved to have a vital relation to trafic safety and to the automobile fatality experience in municipalities. Surveys conducted by such organizations as the National Safety council, the Illuminating Engineering society, Travelers Insurance company, and the National Bureau of Casualty and Surety Underwriters have shown the following facts:

"1. That main trafic arteries are America's fatal streets.

Below Visibility Standards.

"2. That, although they represent but 10 per cent of the mileage in cities and towns, they account for 41 per cent of all urban trafic fatalities and 50 per cent of all night trafic fatalities.

"3. That three times as many people are killed on them at night as in the daytime.

"4. That the average degree of visibility on these streets is less than half the minimum required for safety in the standards developed by the Illuminating Engineering society.

"The average estimates of the National Safety council, the National Bureau of Casualty and Surety Underwriters, and the Illuminating Engineering society is that 50 per cent of all night trafic fatalities are directly due to lack of adequate visibility.

Fatalities Can Be Cut.

"There is sufficient case history [Detroit, Syracuse, Los Angeles, and Cleveland] to prove that night trafic fatalities can be drastically cut through the economical modernization of lighting systems."

Earl J. Reeder, chief trafic engineer of the National Safety council, in speaking before a luncheon of the junior chamber of commerce last week said that two-thirds of the trafic fatalities occur between sunset and sunrise although less than one-third of the travel is during these hours.

"Lowered visibility is a major difference in the hazards of night and day driving," said Mr. Reeder. "It is true that the amount of driving after drinking is considerably higher at night. It is also true that the hours of greatest fatigue in driving are in darkness. Both of these factors, however, do not account for more than a half of the excess of night accident frequency over that of day time.

Reduce Night Fatalities.

"In Detroit, the improvement of lighting on 31 miles of busy thoroughfare, based on latest specifications for safety lighting, has shown a very marked reduction in night fatalities in proportion to those that have occurred in daytime.

"In this Detroit experience, before illumination the ratio of night to day fatalities was 6.9 to 1. Following installation, this was reduced to 1.5 to 1. Surveys showed clearly the value of street lighting for safety protection, particularly for pedestrians.

"As individual drivers and pedestrians let us recognize our responsibility to do our part in this attack on the night accident menace. As drivers let us make sure that our headlights are in the best of shape to give the best view of conditions ahead. As pedestrians let us not forget that just because we can see the driver's headlights we must not be sure that he can see us when we are in the street.

"As citizens let us support public officials in their efforts to provide the proper type of safety lighting where a preponderance of accidents at night demonstrate its need or where such a condition is anticipated in new design and construction."

VOICE OF THE TRAFIC

NEED GOOD EYES.

Dayton, O., March 27.—It has now been a month since the annual national "Save Your Vision Week" has come and gone and is fast approaching the time of the year when there will be more cars on our highways. With the approach of nice weather, the drivers of automobiles should be reminded about safety in driving.

In all discussions of safe driving it is remarkable how little attention is paid to the eyesight of drivers. Only eleven states and the District of Columbia have given the subject of visual efficiency of drivers the proper attention and their accident toll has been lowered by 25 per cent as a result. That speaks for itself!

When considering how well a driver can see, the acuity of vision or ability to see is only one part of the problem. It is necessary to know such things as: Whether the driver is color blind or not so he can see trafic lights; whether or not he has night blindness to tell whether he can see well to drive at night; whether he has good third dimension vision to tell how well he can gauge the speed of on-coming cars and gauge distance, and whether or not there is a wide angle of field of indirect vision so as to discern moving objects approaching from the side. L. E. PUETZ.

STREETS ARE TORN.

Chicago, April 6.—In getting a lot of men on the pay rolls at election time, the city had gangs tearing up pavement everywhere. Now that Mr. Kelly has been assured of another term, it would be nice if he returned some of this pavement so trafic might resume its normal course. G. O. P.

COMPULSORY INSURANCE.

Ridgeville, Ind., April 3.—Irene C. McLaughlin hit the nail squarely on the head in your column published last Sunday. Her statement proves that she has an exceptionally keen mind that sees right to the root of things.

Compulsory liability insurance is one of our greatest needs today. Not only would it be the means of righting many wrongs but the carrying of insurance in itself does make one drive more carefully. If one had too many accidents one would be unable to obtain insurance hence could no longer drive.

I have driven more than a million miles since 1901 and have never had an accident—and I have always carried insurance. That is, after auto liability insurance was inaugurated. I am saying nothing about the hundreds of close shaves I have had. However, my experience proves to me that, as stated, Irene C. McLaughlin is 100 per cent right in her statements in your Sunday paper. ARTHUR J. LAY.

COP IS VIOLATOR.

Chicago, April 3.—Just a big squawk from one who buys his city and state automobile licenses before the first of the year.

Driving south on State street this morning at 9:20 a. m., between 16th and 29th streets, was a Hudson sedan with 1938 city and state tags. A police officer, in uniform, was driving.

Maybe his job gives him special privileges but I would think he should be the first to have new plates each year and thereby set a good example for the rest of the chiselers. ARTHUR O. EICHLER.

LICENSE ENFORCEMENT ELSEWHERE.

Newark, O., April 1.—Yesterday hundreds of cars and trucks were on the streets of Newark, or highways leading into it with 1938 license tags which expired at midnight. Today all cars and trucks are equipped with 1939 license plates. Ohio motorists do not attempt to use old tags, as it is cheaper to buy new ones than pay a fine. They are convenient to buy; there were nine places in our county where tags were on sale so there is no delay. The price is reduced 25 per cent every three months. No one from Gov. Bricker down, drives with an old tag. O. E. COOPERRIDER.

TOURING INFORMATION.

Chicago, March 21.—Why don't you compile tips on eating and sleeping places that might be furnished by your readers? This year there will be hundreds of thousands driving to one of the world's fairs from hereabouts. They could certainly gather more practical and useful information than could any single reporter who might blaze the trails. S. T. THOMSON.

1938 PLATE ON ROLLS ROYCE.

Chicago, April 4.—The sight of a tax dodger still using last year's automobile license plate is familiar to Chicagoans. But it may be news that there is a Rolls Royce still using a 1938 plate. I saw it cross Wacker drive north bound at Dearborn street this afternoon. H. S.

SAFETY JINGLE.

Aurora, Ill., April 5.—Driver, as you take the wheel
Of this chariot of steel,
Why don't you say a silent prayer
For those entrusted to your care?
ANON.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, April 8.—Heavy liquidation on the New York Stock exchange today forced prices to their lowest levels in more than a year. Losses ranged from 1 to 5 points. All classes of stocks were dumped because of traders' fears over the threatening European situation.

Selling was concentrated on the New York market because all European markets were closed for the Easter holiday. Brokers reported that selling came from all sources, foreign and domestic. The volume was 1,640,-270 shares, the heaviest for a Saturday since March, 1937.

Selling was heavy from the opening gong. Italy's invasion of Albania when the market was closed yesterday had caused an overnight pileup of orders and initial blocks ran from 1,000 to 4,000 shares.

Selling Wave Rolls Over Market.

Shortly before noon a fresh selling wave rolled over the market driving prices to their lowest levels. Observers attributed this selling to the liquidation of impaired margin accounts and reports that military experts in Washington expected Germany to move against Poland next week, thereby precipitating a general European war. The Roosevelt administration's denunciation of the Italian conquest of Albania did not come until the market had closed.

There was little in the domestic news to provide support for stocks. The news included reports that next week would bring lower steel production at Pittsburgh. Disappointment also was expressed over auto sales figures and the failure of pre-Easter trade to measure up to expectations.

Industrials Lose Most.

Industrial stocks as usual suffered the most damage. As measured by the Dow-Jones averages, their loss amounted to 4.88 points. Only 25 stocks in the entire list of 918 issues that saw action finished with gains, while 785 declined and 108 closed unchanged.

Bethlehem lost 3⅜ points and United States Steel dropped 2⅞. Chrysler tumbled 5¾ and General Motors lost 1¾. American Telephone was hammered down 3 points.

Big losers were Eastman Kodak, down 5¾; Johns Manville, 5⅛; Philip Morris, 4¾; American Tobacco, 4⅜; Sears Roebuck, 3⅝; Westinghouse, 3½; U. S. Gypsum, 3⅜, and International Harvester, 3⅝.

CHICAGO STOCKS CLOSE LOWER IN HEAVY TRADING

Prices on the Chicago Stock exchange dropped fractionally to more than two points yesterday. Trading was comparatively heavy for a Saturday session. The Chicago Tribune average closed at 8.96 against 9.45 on Thursday.

Weakness was general throughout the list. Only four stocks of 161 issues traded closed with advances. There were 128 declining issues and 29 which remained unchanged.

Everyday Economics

Tin Cans.

The tin can industry is a giant among American businesses. It provides one of the largest outlets for the steel industry, keeping tin plate divisions of the steel companies active when the demand from the automobile and other lines slackens.

The tin can industry really began in 1810 when Peter Durand, an Englishman, obtained a patent of a tin plated container for preserved foods. His can—called a "tin canister"—was made of iron coated with tin. Steel was first used as the base about 1876. England at first was the world's largest producer. The United States, although late in starting, developed modern methods which put it in the lead and it now makes more than half the world's tin can supply.

In 1937, the latest year for which complete records are available, America produced more than 16 billion tin cans.

Tin cans come in two lines, packers and general. Packers' cans are cans containing food that is sterilized with heat. Cans containing products that require no heat treatment are called general line cans. Production of packers' cans in 1937 totaled more than 10 billions, and of general line cans 6 billions.

More than forty companies are now engaged in making cans for sale and many companies make their own cans. The manufacture of cans is highly specialized and the margin of profit is small, most users buy them.

SEC Potential Menace, Says Jerome Frank

The Securities and Exchange commission's powers of prosecution are a potential "menace" to citizens, Jerome Frank, a member of the commission, admitted yesterday. He said that abuse of such powers can be avoided solely by proper behavior on the part of those in charge of the SEC.

Jerome Frank.

Frank spoke at a luncheon meeting of the Chicago Bar association. He has been mentioned frequently as a possible choice for chairman of the SEC, a post recently vacated by William O. Douglas, new associate justice of the Supreme court.

"The way effectively to prevent the abuse of the important power to prosecute citizens," Frank said, "is to see that those intrusted with such power are decent and intelligent human beings, with a thorough sense of their great responsibilities.

Warns Against Bad Choices.

"You may begin to fear the SEC when its officers become bigoted, ignorant, careless or corrupt. The way to meet the possibilities of so called 'administrative absolutism' is to see to it that administrative officers are the right kind of God-fearing human beings, who detest absolutism."

Frank warmly defended the commission, as it is at present constituted, against criticism that it is arbitrary or unfair in its treatment of citizens. He declared that the responsibility involved in the power to prosecute "weighs at least as heavily upon the SEC as upon the most conscientious prosecuting attorney."

Sees Potential Threat.

While saying that a government of laws is essential, Frank added that government "is always, at any moment, administered by men. And to the extent that those men be weak, lazy, ignorant, careless or corrupt, government becomes a danger to the citizen."

Frank outlined the procedure taken by the SEC at the present time in carrying out its rules. He said that no proceedings are begun without "exacting scrutiny of facts painstakingly collected by our staf."

"Recurrently," he said, "we turn down recommendations by our staf that an order be entered by us charging that there is reasonable cause to proceed."

FOREIGN MONEYS STEADY DESPITE EUROPE'S CRISIS

Official stabilization funds went to the support of principal European currencies in the foreign exchange markets yesterday, enabling them to weather another barrage of war news. The French franc eased 0.001875 cent and the British pound remained unchanged. The Swiss franc advanced slightly and the Belgian belga and Dutch guilder were moderately lower.

Future rates were more vulnerable to fast moving events abroad, however. The pound due in ninety days could be purchased at a discount of 2⅝ cents, against 2¼ cents Thursday.

Gold totaling $1,693,000 was engaged in England for shipment to the United States, the New York Federal Reserve bank announced. The net gain in the United States monetary gold stock through imports during the week was $65,424,000. The liner Aquitania sailed yesterday from Cherbourg with more than $13,000,000 of gold bound for New York.

SUGAR CONTROL BILL IS OPPOSED BY ROOSEVELT

Warm Springs, Ga., April 8.—(AP)—President Roosevelt, at the final press conference of his ten-day stay here, today criticized the sugar quota bill of Senator Ellender [D., La.] as detrimental to the economy of American island possessions and Cuba. He also said he believed distribution of cotton goods to relief families and needy school children would not materially help dispose of cotton surplus of more than 11,000,000 bales.

The President said he was opposed to the Ellender bill because it would give special consideration to domestic cane producers and seriously affect American citizens not only in this country but in Porto Rico, Hawaii, and the Virgin Islands, and also a large population in Cuba. It would destroy the economy of these islands, he said, at the cost of helping an infinitely smaller number of people in Louisiana and Florida.

Utility Defers Stock Offer Because of Europe's Trouble

The Consolidated Gas, Electric Light and Power company of Baltimore announced yesterday that it was deferring contemplated financing "because of unsettled conditions due to the European situation." Underwriters of the proposed issue of $22,306,300 of 4½ per cent preferred stock have "decided not to proceed with their underwriting at this time," it was announced. The exchange offer to holders of outstanding 5 per cent preferred stock "has been deferred until further notice" as a result, the announcement added.

Senators Ask 1⅓ Billion for 1940 Farm Aid

Washington, D. C., April 8.—[Special.]—Eleven cotton state senators seeking to solve the cotton surplus problem today agreed to push a program which would put the total cost of all federal aid to agriculture next year at more than $1,300,000,000. Four midwestern senators at the meeting gave somewhat qualified approval.

A total of $1,088,000,000 would be in outright subsidies, about $300,000,-000 more than ever has been appropriated for this purpose. The remainder is the 224 million dollars already approved by the house for regular activities of the department of agriculture.

This program, if adopted, would completely upset the President's budget and make the present congress one of the largest spenders ever to sit in peace time.

Ask New Appropriations.

Meeting primarily to adopt a cotton program, the eleven cotton state senators decided to oppose an export subsidy, but agreed to seek these new appropriations:

1. 250 million dollars for parity payments on cotton, corn, wheat, tobacco and rice.

2. 150 million dollars for surplus purchases in addition to the 92 million dollars now contained in the house agricultural bill.

3. Sufficient funds, estimated at 96 million dollars, to pay cotton farmers who stay out of the loan plan 3 cents a pound on all they raise.

Besides these subsidies, agriculture also would receive 500 million dollars again next year for soil conservation payments.

Names of Supporting Senators.

The eleven Democratic senators who put forward this program were Ellison D. Smith [S. C.], chairman of the senate agriculture committee; John H. Bankhead and Lister Hill [Ala.], Pat Harrison and Theodore G. Bilbo [Miss.], Elmer Thomas and Josh Lee [Okla.], Walter George [Ga.], Stewart [Tenn.], Tom Connally [Tex.], and Carl A. Hatch [N. M.]. Lee and Connally originally favored an export subsidy for cotton, but agreed to go along.

Present and giving qualified approval were Senators Scott W. Lucas [D., Ill.], chairman of the new subcommittee on cotton; Robert L. La Follette [Prog., Wis.], Arthur Capper [R., Kas.], and William J. Bulow [S. D.]. Senator Lucas said he thought the amount of money sought was a little high.

6,605 More Are Placed on U. S. Pay Roll in February

Washington, D. C., April 8.—[Special.]—Employment in the executive branch of the government was increased by 6,605 during February. This increase was due primarily to the addition of temporary employés in the Works Progress administration. There were 870,767 civil employés in the executive branch in February, with a pay roll of $130,015,491, as compared with $131,403,792 for January.

$34,250,000 SCHOOL WARRANTS SOLD AT RECORD LOW RATES

The board of education yesterday approved the sale by Robert B. Upham, city controler, of $34,250,000 of 1939 school tax anticipation warrants. The sale was at the lowest rates of interest ever paid by the board, according to James B. McCahey, president. The rate for warrants to be delivered before September was 1⅞ per cent and for those to be delivered after September 1⅞ per cent.

The sale included $29,000,000 of educational fund warrants, $5,000,000 building fund, and $250,000 playground fund. The warrants were sold to six loop banks and Hickey & Co.

The educational fund warrants will be delivered in $5,000,000 payments over a period of eight months as the money is required by the board. Interest is paid only from the date of delivery.

'MOP' RAILROAD ORDERS $4,500,000 NEW EQUIPMENT

St. Louis, Mo., April 8.—(AP)—The Missouri Pacific lines placed orders today for approximately $4,500,000 of new equipment, including two streamlined trains for operation between St. Louis, Kansas City, and Omaha.

The two 2,000 horse power Diesel-electric locomotives for the trains will be built by the Electro-Motive corporation of La Grange, Ill., which also was awarded contracts for five Diesel switching locomotives, two of 900 horse power, two of 600 horse power, and one of 1,000 horse power.

The Baldwin Locomotive works of Philadelphia and the American Locomotive company of Schenectady, N. Y., will each build a 1,000 horse power switching engine for the railroad.

Each streamlined train will have a baggage and mail car, a mail storage car, a coach, a de luxe coach, a diner-bar-lounge car, and a parlor-observation car. These will be constructed at the St. Charles, Mo., plant of American Car and Foundry company.

Contracts for the building of 1,025 coal cars of fifty ton capacity and for 125 boxcars were awarded to the Mount Vernon Car Manufacturing company of Mount Vernon, Ill.

HOME BUILDING HEAVIEST SINCE OCTOBER OF 1929

New York, April 8.—(AP)—Contracts for construction of new homes in the United States in March were the largest in value for any month since October, 1929, the F. W. Dodge corporation reported today.

In the thirty-seven states east of the Rocky mountains included in the data compiled by the construction information agency, the increase in residential contracts amounted to 58 per cent compared with March, 1938, and 59 per cent compared with February, 1939.

Contracts for all classes of building, the agency said, totaled $300,661,-000, a gain of 32 per cent over March last year and 36 per cent over February, 1939.

For the first three months of the year, all construction contracts were the largest in eight years and were 44 per cent ahead of 1938. Residential contracts, largest in ten years, were 83 per cent ahead of 1938.

Coal Deadlock Still Unbroken as Parleys Fail

New York, April 8.—[U. P.]—Negotiations for a new labor contract in the Appalachian soft coal region continued today in an atmosphere of uncertainty and disagreement.

James F. Dewey, mediator, confers again.

While representatives of operators and leaders of the United Mine Workers of America wrangled over a wage-hour agreement to replace the one which expired April 1, 338,000 miners were idle and almost 3,500 mines were shut down. The federal government had attempted to bring the negotiators to agreement.

Closed Since Monday.

The mines, except for a few "coöperatives" and others serving emergency needs, have been closed since Monday under the union's "no contract, no work" rule, and there was little likelihood of an early resumption of operations, it was said.

The negotiators, four to a side, were deadlocked over a formula for renewing the 1937-'39 wage-hour agreement. The operators proposed a flat two year renewal. The miners insisted on a "protective" clause—a closed shop or elimination of strike penalty provisions in local working agreements—as a means of defense against portending attempts of rival unions to invade the territory.

Mediator Urges Accord.

James F. Dewey, federal labor conciliator who has been "standing by" for two weeks, obtained an audience with the negotiators yesterday and pleaded with them to break the stalemate which, he warned, may result in an acute coal shortage in the east and possibly in labor strife.

Dewey conferred with the negotiators for two hours and continued with them today. John L. Lewis, union leader, was absent from Friday's conference, and neither Philip Murray, labor official, nor Charles O'Neill, spokesman for the operators, would comment on Dewey's recommendations.

Illinois Mine to Close.

Nokomis, Ill., April 8.—(AP)—The Indiana and Illinois Coal corporation announced today that its No. 10 mine here, opened thirty-five years ago, would be abandoned. The shutdown will leave about 400 miners without employment.

Anthracite Output Low.

Harrisburg, Pa., April 8.—(AP)—Pennsylvania's anthracite production last year slumped to the lowest number of net tons since 1890, the department of mines reported today. Production was approximately 46,154,-226 net tons, about 5,500,000 tons short of 1937. Officials in the mining department explained the decline as "just bad business."

CHICAGO'S STEEL PRODUCTION TO GAIN SLIGHTLY

Steel mills in the Chicago area will increase ingot production 0.4 point to 52.2 per cent of theoretical capacity starting tomorrow, Dow, Jones & Co. estimated yesterday.

The gain in production will not be general, the survey indicated. In the Pittsburgh area producers on Monday will reduce operations 2 points to 47 per cent of capacity. A month ago the district's production was at 49 per cent and in 1938 at 31 per cent.

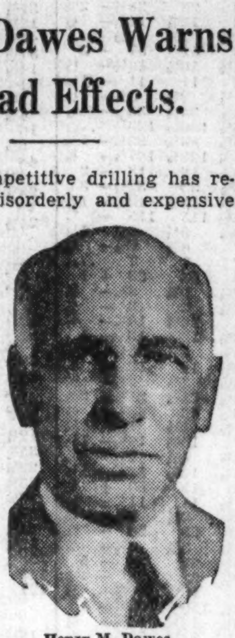
RUSH TO EXPLOIT NEW ILLINOIS OIL FIELDS ASSAILED

H. M. Dawes Warns of Bad Effects.

Highly competitive drilling has resulted in "disorderly and expensive development" of the new Illinois oil fields, Henry M. Dawes, president of the Pure Oil company, said yesterday.



Henry M. Dawes.

In many areas, production has reached a peak long before it would have under more economic methods, he told his company's stockholders at their annual meeting in Columbus, O.

Steps to conserve the state's newly discovered oil resources are now being studied by a legislative committee meeting in Salem, Ill. The larger operators have favored proration of production, already in effect in several other states, while most smaller operators have opposed it.

Tells Own Firm's Policy.

Pure Oil has not contributed to the "disorderly" development, Dawes told stockholders, assuring them that because of its protective measures, "it will be many years before the company has explored and developed the whole of its possibilities" in the state.

Competitive drilling on small tracts "results in a quicker development of the field and produces a peak production which is higher in proportion to the ultimate recovery than is the case where developments have been carried on in a more orderly manner," he said.

As an example, he said that within six months after the first well was drilled, production in one Illinois field had reached 26,000 barrels daily, and has now declined to 7,000 barrels. "This is likely to be characteristic of many of the new developments in Illinois," he added.

One Well to Each 20 Acres.

Pure Oil is drilling only one well to each 20 acres of its 300,000 acres under lease in the state, and has not produced in excess of its own refinery and marketing demands, Dawes said, adding:

"The company has for many months maintained a production of between 22,000 and 25,000 barrels per day. If we had developed our leaseholdings on a comparable basis with other Illinois pools, we might at present have much larger production, but it would have been in excess of market demands, and the cost would have been very much greater.

"This systematic and orderly development of the property will, beyond any question, greatly increase the earnings which will be derived from it over the years. Our Illinois production is profitable."

Predicts Rapid Decline.

Dawes predicted that because of much uneconomic development, oil production in the state "will probably decline rapidly." He added:

"Illinois producing strata are neither as rich nor as numerous as those in some of the western states, and while over the years very large quantities of oil can be recovered, it is improbable that production in Illinois will ever be in any wise comparable to that of Oklahoma or Texas."

Operating results for the industry as a whole "will be very disappointing" during the first quarter of 1939, he said, but added prospects for the remainder of the year "are very good" because of the industry's favorable statistical position and the likelihood of increased consumption.

The industry's tax bill rose to $1,-200,000,000 last year, he said, "mainly because of the ease of collection" of such taxes.

All of the directors whose names were contained in a recent proxy solicitation were elected.

Petroleum Stocks Increase.

Washington, D. C., April 8.—[Special.]—Stocks of foreign and domestic crude petroleum totaled 276,119,000 barrels as of April 1, an increase of 2,294,000 over the preceding week, the bureau of mines reported today. The industry's production averaged 3,385,-000 barrels daily during the week, a decline of 25,000 barrels from the preceding week's average.

British Turn Down Big U. S. Cotton Offer

BY DAVID DARRAH.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, April 8.—The Lancashire Cotton corporation, reputedly the biggest spinning concern in the world, turned down a record deal in American cotton this week, it was revealed today.

Although the negotiations were secret, market circles disclosed that the corporation was offered 750,000 bales of American cotton, valued at more than 30 million dollars, current prices, on terms which admittedly were "advantageous" to British consumers.

It was learned that the offers were made through an important finance house, presumably in the course of the American government's endeavors to find outlets for vast stocks of cotton accumulated as security for loans to growers. The proposal was that the deal should be spread over a period of three years and that the cotton would be delivered to England at regular intervals.

Loan Policy Protested.

The corporation's decision to reject the offer was the subject of speculation in market circles this week in view of the complaint sent to Washington recently by the Federation of Master Cotton Spinners' Associations against the shortage of American supplies. The federation protested that President Roosevelt's loan policy kept cotton off the market to such an extent that Lancashire requirements could not be met except at excessive prices.

Although the official explanation of the rejection of the deal was that it would have involved a departure from normal channels of trade, there recently has been increasing indication that British consumers may be prepared to hold off the market in the hope of forcing a drop in prices.

Spokesman Explains Rejection.

"Overtures were made to the United States to buy a very substantial amount of American cotton on advantageous terms," a spokesman for the Lancashire corporation said, "but, though attractive on the surface, the deal was turned down as being against the best interests of the industry as a whole. Had we accepted the proposal, it would have upset the whole merchant system of this country."

Reports that the American government apparently was seeking to trade directly with individual Lancashire spinning organizations caused some annoyance this week. The Liverpool Cotton association immediately cabled a protest to Washington, it was revealed, urging that any releases from stocks of American cotton should be made through members of the association in accordance with the usual custom.

GENERAL MOTORS SALES INCREASE DURING MARCH

New York, April 8.—Special.]—World sales of General Motors cars and trucks to dealers in March totaled 182,652 units, the company reported today. Sales were 153,886 units in February and 109.555 in March last year.

Sales to dealers in the United States amounted to 142,743 units, against 115,890 in February, and 76,142 a year ago. March sales to consumers in the United States were 83,251 in February, and 100,022 in March, 1938.

Total sales in the first quarter of 1939 were 489,284 units, compared with 298,271 in 1938. Sales to dealers in the United States in the first three months totaled 377,597 against 196,851 in 1938. Sales to consumers in the United States amounted to 314,178, against 225,922.

Corresponding last year	267,800,000	28,100,000

The New York Clearing House association reported clearings for the week ended April 7 amounted to $3,-524,595,682, compared with $3,048,574,-229 in the preceding week.

EASTER PARADE IN EUROPE (WAR) HURTS BUSINESS

Some Lines Slower in United States.

BY LELAND FORRESTER.

Most branches of American business slowed down last week as gloom and unsettlement growing from world events nullified the bracing effects usually attending the approach of Easter. Retail trade benefited from sales of Easter finery, but industry and the security markets had their eyes on a different kind of parade in Europe, where army uniforms and bayonets instead of women's fashions provided the color.

Italy's invasion of Albania and reactions from the British drive to fence in Germany and Italy jolted the New York Stock exchange. As the securities markets went into the Good Friday holiday, prices had fallen through the bottoms established in last September's war fright and were at the lowest levels since last June. Foreign exchange markets continued unsettled.

Coal Strike Worries Industry.

In addition, industry had its domestic worries, one of which was the stoppage of production affecting almost three-fourths of the nation's soft coal industry. About 338,000 miners ceased work, losing 1½ million dollars or more a day in wages, and allied industries felt the pinch, laying off other hundreds.

In the latest weekly period reported upon, railroad freight loadings, steel output, engineering and residential construction and the volume of new financing declined from the preceding week. Production of cotton textiles, like other lines of activity, failed to show the progress expected at this season.

Automobile production increased, but less than the normal seasonal amount. Bank loans for business purposes increased in New York but declined in Chicago. Retail sales as a whole showed gains compared with a year ago, when trade was at a low level, but failed to meet forecasts. Dun & Bradstreet, Inc., reported that wholesalers received sizable orders for Easter, but that buying for future needs was at a "very low level."

Steel Output Decreases.

The rate of production at steel mills declined to 54.7 per cent of capacity, from 56.1 per cent in the preceding week. In the corresponding 1938 week the rate was 32.6 per cent. Markets for steel were reported stagnant, preventing the usual spring rally in mill activity. Iron Age said the lag in steel business was caused by a cold, rainy spring, tension in Europe, security price declines, and lack of a constructive federal policy toward private enterprise.

Freight loadings totaled 604,201 cars in the week ended April 1, or 0.2 per cent less than in the preceding week. However, the volume still was 15.4 per cent larger than in the corresponding 1938 week.

Engineering construction awards for the week ended April 6 amounted to $57,624,000, against $59,004,000 in the preceding week and $39,551,000 in the 1938 week.

Security Offerings Small.

Offerings of new securities fell to a low level, totaling $32,966,000, compared with $86,176,260 in the preceding week. In the corresponding 1938 period new financing amounted to less than 5 million dollars.

The output of automobiles increased to 87,019 units. In the preceding week factories turned out 85,980 cars and trucks.

Production of electric power was

COPPER TRADING LAGS IN SPITE OF CUT BY SMELTER

Most Other Commodities Lower in Week.

Interest in the commodity markets was heightened last week by a drop of ½ cent a pound in the price of refined copper. In a surprise move a leading smelter broke a six month deadlock that had kept domestic copper roughly a full cent above world levels by quoting a new price of 10¾ cents.

The reduction failed to stimulate any appreciable buying, however, and major producers refused to follow the cut. They held that their 11¼ cent price was justified by potential war needs hanging over the market and the fact that inventories in the hands of fabricators were near record low levels.

Germany entered the export market as a buyer for the first time since last November, but business on the whole remained at low levels.

Other commodities traded in for future delivery were generally lower during the week. Wool top futures led the reaction with losses ranging to 7 cents a pound. Hides were about ½ cent lower and smaller reductions were shown by cocoa and cottonseed oil. Rubber, sugar, and coffee contracts were moderately higher. Yesterday's prices:

MUCH ACTIVITY IS EXPECTED IN NEW OIL FIEL[D]

Clay County (Ill.) Are[a] Opened by Big Well.

Centralia, Ill., April 8.—(AP)—Illinois oil operators said today they expected a new Clay county pool to be one of the most intensively explored areas in the state during the spring and summer. This oil pool is in Larkinsburg township in the northwest corner of Clay county.

The field was opened by the completion of Dick Duncan's No. 1 J. H. Liggett well, which oil men estimated to be an 800 to 1,000 barrel daily producer. The second producer in the field will be Bumpus and Burnett's No. 1 Liggett, which was to be completed over the week-end. It is an offset to the Discovery well.

Another Pool Active.

Rivaling the Larkinsburg township activity for the attention of the oil fraternity was the new Cordes pool six miles southwest of Nashville in Washington county. Four producers have been completed with an aggregate daily production of approximately 1,000 barrels, and three other tests were due for completion within the next few days.

A slump in operations was reported in the field because the Texas company had completed many wells during the last two weeks but had announced few new locations. There were eighty-five operations in the pool, including nineteen completions.

However, state wide trends indicated a definite increase in activity. The total operations in Illinois, 462, was a gain of nearly twenty over last week. The operations included seventy first reports and sixty completions of which forty-seven were oil wells.

Group Opposes Control.

Salem, Ill., April 8.—(AP)—Opponents of legislation to restrict Illinois oil production testified today before a joint legislative committee investigating the state's oil industry. Witnesses at the second day of the committee's hearing on oil production and market conditions were as opposed to state control of production as preceding witnesses were in favor of it.

Frank T. Egan of Centralia, secretary-treasurer of the Petroleum Association of Illinois, told the committee the solution for production problems was the finding of new markets for Illinois crude oil. He charged many of those selling finished petroleum products in Illinois were refusing to buy Illinois crude oil.

An effective way to correct the situation, Egan said, would be legislation providing that every oil station operator in the state place a placard in a conspicuous place stating what percentage of Illinois crude oil was used in the products he sold.

Last of Trustees System Assets Ordered Liquidated

Federal Judge Charles E. Woodward yesterday ordered the liquidation of $22,316 of remaining assets of the Trustees System company of Chicago. Claims totaling $32,094 were referred to Referee in Bankruptcy Archie Cohen for decision. The company is a subsidiary of the Trustees System Discount company of Chicago, and has had a bankruptcy petition pending since 1932. The parent company has reorganized since then.

LITTLE FELLOWS INCREASE STAKE IN BIG BUSINESS

Total of Stockholders Is Larger than in 1929.

The great American corporation is becoming increasingly the property of the little American citizen. Stock ownership is growing more diversified. Holders of small quantities of stock are assuming a larger position in the ownership of gigantic railroad, public utility, and industrial enterprises.

These facts are disclosed in a tabulation of the total number of stockholders in representative corporations. Such tabulations show that, despite depressions, political propaganda, and European crises, the average American is increasing his ownership interest in what is termed "Big Business."

Some Representative Figures.

The following table shows the number of stockholders in some of the largest incorporated enterprises in the country on Dec. 31 of given years [last three ciphers omitted]:

	1929.	1932.	1934.	1936.	1938.
A. T. & T...	469	700	675	640	646
Gen. Motors..	198	365	350	342	389
Gen. Electric	60	181	196	190	208
Beth. Steel..	74	92	84	98	74
DuPont de N	33	60	65	67	64
Penn. R. R..	196	250	232	218	214
Un. C. & C..	28	53	53	55	63
U. S. Steel...	167	237	239	217	219
Total	1,229	1,933	1,896	1,830	1,881

In the case of Union Carbide and Carbon, the figures given are at the end of the fiscal year, which changed in each year, rather than the end of the calendar year. The 1936 figures for General Electric are as of Nov. 27 in that year.

Diversification of ownership is strikingly illustrated by American Telephone and Telegraph company. At the end of last year, 42 per cent of the stock was held by women, 32 per cent by men, 4 per cent in joint accounts, 2 per cent by brokers, and 20 per cent by trustees, insurance companies, corporations, private firms and similar groups. No stockholder of record holds as much as 1 per cent of the total American Telephone and Telegraph stock outstanding.

The chart illustrates the increase in the number of stockholders of eight large corporations since 1929.

More Owners Than in 1929.

There has been a growth of stock ownership by the little fellow since 1929, the year in which the post-war speculative mania reached its zenith.

One reason for this may be that today the stock is owned outright, and kept for investment purposes as much as for capital appreciation. In 1929 much stock was held on margin. Stock held on margin is credited as owned by the brokerage house in whose possession the margin holder has placed it.

In this situation, the small stockholder has a more stable attitude toward stocks today than in 1929. One decade ago he made a bet, borrowing money to make it, that his favorite stocks would go up before they went down. Because interest charges for carrying margined stock were often higher than dividend returns, he had to be more interested in the price action of that stock than in the success of the company behind the stock.

Attitude Different Today.

This appears to have changed today. Outright ownership of stock places emphasis upon the success of the company, its ability to earn money and to pass a portion of that money on to investors in dividends. Capital appreciation, while still desirable from the stockholder's standpoint, is not the sole reason for stock ownership.

The figures alone do not give a snapshot portrait of the small stockholder. Such a picture, however, has been taken by the Container Corporation of America. Container recently made a survey of its stockholders. Out of a total of 8,000 stockholders, 3,857 answered the company's questionnaire.

Owns $8,000 Home.

This average stockholder, the corporation found, has a wife and children. He owns his own home, the average value of which is $8,000. When he does not own his home, his average monthly rent is $58.77. He owns a car and spends his spare time fishing or gardening. He went to high school, but not to college.

Listing the professions of its stockholders alphabetically, Container corporation found that they ranged from accountant to zoölogist. They included representatives in such diversified groups as authors, bellboys, dentists, blacksmiths, missionaries and rooming house proprietors.

This trend toward democratization of great corporations is welcomed by the management group. Alfred P. Sloan, president of General Motors, summarizes the attitude of the corporate executive toward the trend: "General Motors believes in the broadest possible distribution of ownership. To the degree that American business is owned by the American public, its security and the opportunities for progress are enhanced."

JONES' OWN BANK HAS LOWER LOAN RATIO THAN MOST

Fails to Practice What RFC Chief Preaches.

BY THOMAS FURLONG.

The Texas bank headed by Jesse H. Jones, chairman of the Reconstruction Finance corporation, is pursuing a more cautious lending policy than most banks. This is disclosed by the statement of condition issued by the bank since Jones made his appeal to Washington ten days ago urging bankers to make more liberal loans.

Jesse Jones.

The National Bank of Commerce, Houston, of which Jones is chairman, reported that on March 29 it was employing 19.92 per cent of its deposits in loans and discounts. Three months earlier the ratio was slightly higher, loans and discounting amounting to 20.61 per cent of total deposits.

During the period deposits increased from $45,110,642 to $47,026,294 and loans and discounts went up from $9,296,558 to $9,369,553.

Deposits Outpace Loans.

Deposits gained more rapidly than loans, with the result that there was a shrinkage in the percentage of available funds employed in loans and discounts.

In both cases the percentage of the bank's funds employed in loans and discounts was below the average for all banks. Figures released by the Federal Deposit Insurance corporation show that the loans and discounts of the 15,000 member banks of the system at the close of 1938 amounted to 32 per cent of their aggregate deposits. The system includes nearly all the banks in the country.

From the beginning of 1938 through the September quarter the percentage of total deposits employed by the National Bank of Commerce in loans and discounts declined gradually. The ratio increased slightly in the last quarter of 1938 but the trend was reversed again in the first three months this year.

Trends Are Disclosed.

The following figures, taken from the bank's statement, show the trend of loans and discounts and deposits since the end of 1937:

	Dec. 31, '37.	Mar. 7, '38.
Deposits	$37,499,690	$37,637,875

	June 30, '38.	Sept. 28, '38.

Loans and discounts	7,677,923	8,027,771

	Dec. 31, '38.	Mar. 29, '39.
Deposits	$45,110,642	$47,026,294
Loans and discounts	9,296,558	9,369,553
Per cent employed..	20.61	19.92

Ten days ago Jones sent letters to all state and national bankers in the United States urging them to lend more money.

Pleads "General Welfare."

"I again appeal to all bankers in the interest of the general welfare, as well as in their own interests," he wrote, "to see to it that no business enterprise of merit, regardless of its size, is unnecessarily restricted in its operations by lack of credit that can be so secured as reasonably to assure repayment."

In a previous appeal made last July, Jones said that "in good business morals a bank should not accept the deposit account of a business, however small, unless it is willing to accord that business credit accommodations."

When asked about the policy of his own bank, Jones replied, "Do as I say, not as I do."

Hogs slaughtered under federal inspection in the United States during March totaled 3,229,120, the largest for that month since 1933, when the total was 3,601,776. The volume was 338,692 above February. The three month hog slaughter was 10,162,700, against 9,644,265 a year ago. It was the largest since 1934.

Cattle slaughter for March was 773,801 head, compared with 809,257 a year ago and was the smallest for March since 1936. In February, 1939, cattle slaughter was only 652,567 head.

The three month total was 2,187,828, against 2,355,206 a year ago. It was the smallest since 1935.

Sheep slaughter totaled 1,473,069, largest on record. The figure was 1,360,964 in February.

Consumers who bought any cut of pork for today's Easter dinner will prepare the cheapest such dinner in five years as a result of the low level of hog prices at the Chicago stock yards last week.

Butcher shops late in the week stocked up with fresh pork at costs ranging from 13 to 22 per cent lower than a year ago and 14 to 26 per cent less than two years ago.

Biggest Saving in Loins.

Most of the saving was in loins. Packers wholesaled fresh loins at from $13.50 to $17.00 a hundred pounds late in the week, compared with $17.00 to $22.00 in 1938.

The purchase of beef and some cuts of lamb meat was not economy, it was said at the stock yards. The various classes of beef went to butcher shops late in the week from 6 to 26 per cent higher than a year ago. Lamb legs were 9 per cent over a year ago, while other lamb meat ranged from 4 to 16 per cent lower.

Hog prices declined last week while other meat animals advanced in value. The six day hog average at $7.05, lowest since 1934, stood $3.35 below the week's steer average and $2.70 lower than lambs. A year ago hogs sold only 25 cents under steers and 20 cents below lambs.

PRICES OF BONDS DECLINE TO NEW LOWS FOR YEAR

Heavy Selling Affects All Parts of List.

New York, April 8.—[Special.]—European developments released more selling in the bond market today. Prices fell to the lowest level in several months. Declines amounted to 1 to 5 points in the more volatile issues.

Speculative bonds that ordinarily move within a comparatively wide price range were the chief losers. The selling, however, extended to other low yield issues, including United States government securities which lost 5-32 to 10-32 point.

Set New 1939 Lows.

Composite averages based on quotations of domestic bonds fell to new 1939 lows. Every group included in the averages established new lows. Foreign bonds, as measured by the averages, were the lowest since Nov. 16, 1933.

Among the issues losing 1 to 5 points were International Telephone and Telegraph 5s, which closed at 57; Erie Railroad 5s, which dropped to 7⅞, and Delaware & Hudson 4s, which sold down to 53½. Other prominent losers were New York Central 5s, Nickel Plate 4½s, Northern Pacific 4s and Youngstown Sheet and Tube 4s. Belgian and German government issues were weak. Rome 6s also fell sharply, closing at 46¼.

Trade Volume Large.

Bonds with a face value of $6,623,500 were traded, the largest volume for a Saturday session since last October. Transactions last Saturday amounted to $5,557,000.

Dealers said the latest shock to confidence arising from Italy's invasion of Albania was regarded as the chief influence in the market.

Investors' Guide

[Registered U. S. Patent Office.]

TRY READING YOURS.

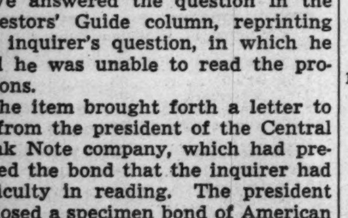
Did you ever try to read the provisions engraved on a bond?

One of our inquirers tried, but couldn't make out the finely engraved script. The result was that he wrote to this department to find out just what conversion privileges went with his American Writing Paper corporation general mortgage bond.

We answered the question in the Investors' Guide column, reprinting the inquirer's question, in which he said he was unable to read the provisions.

The item brought forth a letter to us from the president of the Central Bank Note company, which had prepared the bond that the inquirer had difficulty in reading. The president inclosed a specimen bond of American Writing Paper with the comment, "It seems to us that the engraved script text is easily readable."

We found the engraved script text rather difficult going, however, and submit here a sample of the text in the same size it appears on the bond.



The use of fine script is found in most corporate bonds.

We asked stock exchange officials, company treasurers, and officials of the engraving companies for an explanation. Why should the bonds be engraved in script that makes reading a hardship? The answers were that engraving is required by the stock exchanges to prevent counterfeiting, and that the use of script is thrown in as an additional precaution.

If script is necessary to guard against counterfeiting, then why cannot the provisions be also printed in readable block letters on an additional page so that they can be read easily? This would be inexpensive and take little space. On bond coupons where the reading matter is often in block letters and easy to read, more letters per square inch are printed than on the script text portion of the bond.

Under present practice the bondholder's recourse, in looking for an original statement of his bond provisions, is to get a copy of the trust indenture from the trustee. Trust indentures contain the bond provisions, but they also contain a bulky mass of other information of little interest to most holders.

As it is now the man who sits down some evening and decides to find out what the two or three bonds he holds are all about is out of luck unless he has a magnifying glass or a master sharpshooter's eyesight. And if he has the latter he may still wind up with a headache.

WHEAT AND CORN FUTURES CLIMB ON WAR THREAT

Fears of war in Europe led to general buying of grain futures yesterday in North American markets. Winnipeg led the advance in wheat, prices there being up 2 cents a bushel at one time. There was a material expansion in speculative interest in the markets. Wheat prices in Chicago were the highest in over two months.

Closing prices on wheat futures on the Chicago Board of Trade were at net gains of 1¼ to 1½ cents.

Corn closed ⅝ to ⅞ cent a bushel higher. Oats, rye, and soy beans were higher in sympathy with the market leaders. All European grain markets were closed yesterday for the Easter holidays. Liverpool will reopen Tuesday.

Short covering was responsible for a large part of the upturn in wheat and corn futures, brokers said. However, they noted an increase in outside buying. Selling on resting orders above 69 cents for May wheat and 48 cents for May corn checked the upturn.

CHURCHGOERS SING 'CHRIST HAS RISEN'

133 CANDIDATES IN DU PAGE WAIT BALLOT VERDICT

Citizens Alert for Vote April 18.

BY CARL HENRY.

With 133 candidates in the running, Du Page county voters will ballot April 18 to fill eighty-four city and village offices in eighteen incorporated areas. Although most of the posts are commissionerships or trusteeships, contests are numerous.

Seven major offices will be filled, with mayors to be designated in Wheaton, Naperville, Downers Grove, West Chicago and Wood Dale, and village presidents in Hinsdale and Bloomingdale.

While some communities are without contest, there is but one office without a candidate. Residents of Wood Dale will have to write in the name of a police magistrate, since none was nominated.

Propositions will be on the ballot in three communities. Spirited debate prevails in Naperville over the wet-dry issue. Voters will determine whether the sale of alcoholic liquor at retail shall be prohibited in that community.

Elmhurst Bond Issue Up.

Elmhurst taxpayers must decide two propositions. The first calls for a $5,000 bond issue for fire equipment, including a replacement truck; the second for an additional tax levy, up to 2 mills, for fire protection. In Bensenville citizens will decide whether a tax of not more than 1 mill should be levied to provide a fund for a municipal band.

Four cities and fourteen villages furnish the background for the April 18 contests. Operating under the commissioner form of government, the cities are Elmhurst. Naperville. West Chicago and Wheaton. Villages holding elections are Addison, Bensenville, Bloomingdale, Clarendon Hills, Downers Grove, Glen Ellyn, Hinsdale, Itasca, Lombard, Roselle, Villa Park, Westmont, Winfield and Wood Dale. Downers Grove and Wood Dale also have the commissioner form of government.

Mayoralty races furnish competition of special interest. In Wheaton, Henry J. Burt, in business in Chicago, opposes William W. Renton, who received the support of Mayor William H. Caldwell when the latter was eliminated in the primaries.

Seek Office of Mayor.

In Downers Grove, Mason E. Taylor, executive secretary of the Du Page county centennial committee, is opposed for mayor by Carlyle B. Stair, an inventor. In Naperville, James L. Nichols, who has served as mayor for four years, is being opposed by John J. Bentz, who has been a commissioner for twice that period. In Wood Dale, Charles Schroder, now a commissioner, is being opposed for mayor by Matt Bauman, local coal dealer.

Greeks Keep Old Culture Alive in U. S.

Various nationality organizations of the west side help provide relief for the needy and cultural and educational service among their own people. This is the last story in a series telling the purposes and work of these clubs and associations.

BY MILDRED WILDS.

Sails in the sunset along the shores of Greece have been the theme of Greek adventure stories since Odysseus set out with his seven ships for his island kingdom of Ithaca. This is the story of 20,000 Greeks who made an Odyssey from Arcadia, Sparta and Messenia in the picturesque mountains of Peloponnesus. But they never went back. They found America.

Paul Javaras.

Of those who went in search of the golden fleece—for everything was gold in America they were told—some found it beyond their reach. Some never found it. But the 50,000 Greeks who poured into Chicago from 1895 to 1912 found the opportunity that they were told was here. More than one-third settled on the west side.

From Soil to Trade.

What they left was a peninsula washed by the Ionian sea and the Aegean. There were the fertile lowlands, an abundance of clear springs, basins of red earth and the long-sung Arcadia. But living was not like the pastoral idyll. It was tiresome, monotonous, herding the sheep, tilling the soil. The only extras besides food from their work were the scenery, the sunsets, the rugged mountains, the fragments of age-old culture.

What they found at the fringe of Chicago's loop were places to open stores, coffee houses, bakeries, restaurants. They could buy the extras, fine furniture and college educations, if they were successful.

Thus at the fringe of the loop in the vicinity of Harrison and Halsted streets came to be the first Greek-American settlement in the city about 1895. A year later they built the first Greek Orthodox church, Holy Trinity at 1101 South Peoria street, even today the pilgrimage place of the thousands of Greek-Americans throughout the city and suburbs.

Churches Mark Growth.

With the influx of Greek immigration between 1900 and 1912 some moved westward as far as Kedzie avenue, built bigger homes. These Chicagoans built St. Basil's church, 733 South Ashland avenue. Then another settlement grew in Austin and the new Church of the Assumption at Harrison street and Central avenue serves Greek-Americans in Austin, Oak Park and Cicero.

These new citizens on the west side came in the main from Arcadia, Sparta and Messenia. Some fled here from Asia Minor when they were exiled by the Turks. In a strange land, cold climate, new language and customs, the newcomers were bound together in the warm sound of the name of their homeland.

Thus the Pan-Arcadian club was started by friends and neighbors from Arcadia. Today the 38 chapters in the United States having their central headquarters at 810 West Harrison street, are planning to build an orphan's home. Members receive medical care, death benefits and unemployment aid. Paul Javaras of Oak Park is supreme president. The four west side chapters are Matinea, headed by John Ariostathes; Kekrops, with George Christopoulos as president; Trikorfa, Theodore Alevizos, president, and Kakureon, with Spyros Spyropoulos as president.

Form Benefit Union.

Neighbors from Messenia are members of the Messenia Brotherhood which meets at 807 West Jackson boulevard. Harry Athanasopoulos is president of this organization, which provides hospital care, accident insurance, life insurance, and many social evenings. Mrs. Jennie Kokos is president of the Messenia Ladies' club, which maintains sewing projects, distributes baskets and gives the little friendly sympathies to the needy.

When Greece fought its war with Turkey in 1922, the section of Asia Minor was lost as a Greek possession, and its people exiled, many came to Chicago. In their common need, for all their possessions were left behind, they organized the Mikrasiaton Chrysostomos club. Dr. Constantine Charal is president. Greek-Americans who fought in the many Greek wars have organized the Greek War Veterans association meeting at 515 South Halsted street. Paul Flambouras is president.

Group from Islands.

Those who remember the seven islands in the Ionian sea as their home are banded together in the Eptanesian society which meets at 603 South Halsted street to conduct a philanthropic program. The president is Sophocles Moustakis. Members of the Macedonian Megas Alexandros club have named their benefit and social organization for Alexander the Great. They are from Macedonia.

Every church has its social organizations. The women's clubs support the Greek schools held in the churches every afternoon. There are 300 children attending the Socrates school of Holy Trinity church, 742 South Ada street, which was founded

Saying Happy Easter in a Big Way

Designers have been at work fashioning things before Easter and among the youngest were those at St. Patrick academy kindergarten, 2300 Washington boulevard. It's a big Easter greeting that Kathleen made and its size and substance is a hint to the Easter rabbit as to what little folks expect on their doorstep this morning. Kathleen's chivalrous classmate holds the door so she can extend the best wishes of the day to every one. She is the small daughter of the Harry Magees, 3435 Walnut street, and Patrick McKune's home is at 21 South Central Park avenue. Their teacher who helped them make their mammoth greeting cards is Sister Mary Dorothy, kindergarten director. [TRIBUNE Photo.]

SUBURBS UPSET BY PREVALENCE OF GRASS FIRES

Forest Preserve Trees Are Endangered.

Prevalence of springtime grass fires in the west suburban area has caused a number of village fire chiefs to call attention to ordinances prohibiting the burning of plots without permits. Because of the dryness of the grass and woods in the forest preserve district, Clayton F. Smith, president of the board of forest preserve commissioners, has asked the coöperation of citizens to assist in the prevention of fire.

"Fire is the greatest enemy of the forest," said President Smith. "The burning of gras son prairies and along highways as well as in yards is not only dangerous, but an unwise procedure, because seed of the best qualities of grasses suffer and only the weeds and quack grass remain. People should refrain from starting fires for the sake of the new crop of grass."

Offer Four Rules.

Four rules are given as an aid in minimizing forest preserve fires:

Build fires only in the ovens provided. See that the last live ember is dead before leaving.

Do not throw from automobiles lighted matches, cigaret or cigar butts or pipe heels along the highway or in the forests. Most fires start from these causes.

Break matches between the fingers. Then you will know they are out. Snuff out cigar, cigaret butts, and pipe heels.

If you see a fire, try to extinguish it. Remember, the forest preserves belong to you. If the fire is beyond your control, phone forest preserve district headquarters, Forest 4470 or Columbus 8400, or the town or village fire department.

Any one caught deliberately setting fire to any of the forest preserve district holdings will be arrested and prosecuted, Charles G. Sauers, general superintendent of the district, warns.

Expense to Taxpayers.

Village fire chiefs call attention to the fact that responding to a grass fire causes an expense to the taxpayers due to the wear and tear on the equipment, the use of gasoline and oil, and the pay of the fire fighters.

Some of the fires that have swept over wide areas have been caused by the burning of rubbish in back yards rather than utilizing wire cages.

The Wheaton ordinance reads that "It shall be unlawful to set or start any open fire unless there are present sufficient guards or watchers, adequately furnished with fire fighting apparatus, to prevent the undue spread or escape of flames."

CHORUS OF NURSES WILL GIVE CONCERT FOR DISABLED VETS

The chorus of Augustana Hospital School of Nursing will present an Easter concert for the disabled veterans at the Edward Hines Memorial hospital this evening. The program is sponsored by the Army and Navy fellowship division of the Rotary club of Chicago, which has arranged for transportation of the members of the chorus to the hospital. On the activities committee of the fellowship group is Maj. Gen. Stanley Ford, commander of the 6th corps area. Others active in the work are H. Kirke Becker, chairman; Foster G. McGaw and Preston H. Williams, vice chairmen; Dr. S. A. Fuqua, secretary; Brig. Gen. Karl Truesdell, Rear Admiral Hayne Ellis, and Capt. E. H. Woleson.

Maj. Gen. Stanley Ford.

Forest Park Church Players Give Easter Drama Tonight

Revealing a new view of the age old story of the persecution and crucifixtion, the Easter drama, "Into Thy Kingdom," will be presented tonight at the First Evangelical and Reformed church, Elgin avenue and Harvard street, Forest Park. Included in the cast are Mr. and Mrs. E. H. Luebeck, Miss Phyllis Vosburgh, and Kenneth T. Clark. The Rev. Robert H. Vitz is pastor of the church.

BERWYN FAVORS PLAN FOR OWN HIGH SCHOOL

Citizens Sign Petitions for Project.

Workers circulating petitions for the establishment of a high school for Berwyn say that more than 85 per cent of residents who have been approached are in favor of the project. It is necessary to cover more than 1,100 blocks in the campaign and 250 volunteers are active in the task of obtaining the signatures of 25,000 legal voters.

The Berwyn Ministerial association recently joined other groups in going on record as "unanimously endorsing a high school for Berwyn," said to be the only community of 55,000 population in the country which does not have a high school of its own. The committee hopes to have all petitions returned by April 15.

Meetings Held on Fridays.

Meetings for citizens interested in the movement are held at the city hall on Friday evenings, when residents may obtain information about the compaign.

A sketch showing how the proposed new school might appear when completed, has been drawn by John C. Llewellyn, Chicago architect. The design calls for seventy-eight classrooms, two gymnasiums, a swimming pool, an auditorium with a seating capacity of 1,800, study halls, cafeteria, board room, and offices. No location has been decided upon.

Plan to Spend $1,500,000.

The committee's plan calls for a building to cost about $1,200,000. In addition, it is planned that about $150,000 might be needed for a site, and another $150,000 for equipment. Assuming that federal funds again be available, a PWA grant of about $800,000 would be possible. The committee is asking residents to sign petitions so that Berwyn may be in a position to take advantage of any federal money if and when it is made available.

The movement is being given encouragement by more than forty local organizations. Mayor Anton Janura and most of the aldermen have signed petitions.

George Rott.

EVERY day when the alarm clock rings, James Eccles, 1107 Wenonah avenue, Oak Park, knows his job is being a bank teller. But the spectators of his landscape paintings in Mandel Brothers galleries know him as an artist. Eccles is one of twenty-three professional and buiness men represented in the exhibit and painting is his hobby. He exercises it in the meetings of the Business Men's Art club which meets every Tuesday and Thursday evening. The criticism they get is from one another.

Alpha Pi chapter of Delta Gamma recently announced the initiation of Miss Sara Maxwell, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. W. Maxwell of Hinsdale. Miss Maxwell is a sophomore at the University of Arizona in Tucson. She was graduated from the Westridge High school, Pasadena, Cal.

Our Towners are making ready to welcome Crown Prince Olav and the Crown Princess Martha of Norway when they arrive in Chicago May 4 and 5. The royal couple's two day stay in Chicago will be a part of a two month tour of the United States. Included in the honorary welcoming committee are Adolph G. Ensrud of Oak Park, Joseph C. Simonsen, 652 Lotus avenue; Sigurd E. Naess, River Forest, and Ole Gullicksen, Oak Park.

Fifty years of marriage came to a golden climax recently when Mr. and Mrs. Josph Duffek, 3504 West Cermak road, celebrated their wedding anniversary. Bringing them congratulations were six sons and daughters, nine grandsons and grand daughters, and one great-grandchild.

Mrs. A. M. Ibenfeldt is still receiving congratulatory messages on her recent 80th birthday. She is a resident of 1218 North Euclid avenue, Oak Park, and has lived in Oak Park and Chicago since she migrated from Norway when she was 26 years old. Telegrams came from Mrs. Jacob Baur and from her sister-in-law, Mrs. Betsy Kjelsburg, known as the Jane Addams of Norway.

Several west side residents are members of the cast for Moliere's "The Miser," a five act play, to be produced by the De Paul University dramatists from tomorrow evening through Saturday in the De Paul Little theater, 64 East Lake street. They are Clifford Traynor, 4901 West Van Buren street; Ruth LaPlante, 1641 South 59th street, Cicero, and Issahr Appelman, 1148 North Spaulding avenue.

HOOSIER SALON PATRONS PLAN TEA, EXHIBITION

The Hoosier Salon Patrons' association announces a program, tea and exhibition to be held at 2:30 o'clock Friday afternoon at the Galleries, 211 West Wacker drive. The exhibition will be paintings in various mediums by Miss Vera A. Griffith of Anderson, Ind.

Elton Breckenridge will speak on "What do Pictures Mean in Your Life." Hostesses during the tea hour will be members of the Chicago Associate chapter of Kappa Kappa Kappa sorority.

Hostesses from the west side will be Mrs. W. F. Conlon, Mrs. Arthur Romine, and Mrs. Richard Strutz. The exhibit will continue through April 30.

CENTURIES OLD EASTER STORY AGAIN IS TOLD

Lilies Bank Altars in Churches.

A story 2,000 years old of the dawn that revealed an empty tomb will be new again this Easter morning. The promise of immortality made poetry by the passing ages will be chanted by millions of voices in churches everywhere throughout the day. They will be combined into one great choir by the theme of their song.

White altars and candlelight will be the setting for Catholic masses. Pastel blossoms banked in Protestant sanctuaries will make a spring festival of the Easter tidings. Throughout the west side the message will be told in all languages, all faiths, and denominations.

It will be told in Spanish at the Good Shepherd church [Mexican Methodist Episcopal], 1046 West Polk street, at four services today. The early morning program will begin at 6 o'clock and a Bible study meeting will be held at 10 o'clock.

The sermon, entitled "El Cristo Resurrecto," will be delivered at the 11 o'clock service by the pastor in charge, the Rev. G. A. Delasco. A "Nuestra Tarea" service will be held at 7 o'clock in the evening when a religious pageant entitled "Despiertate Tu que Duermes" will be given by church members.

In Bohemian Baptist Church.

COUNCIL GROWTH FROM TEN TO 50 TOLD IN RESUME

Next Change in Wards Slated for 1941.

BY HAROLD SMITH.

Chicago's new common council, which was completed in last Tuesday's supplemental aldermanic elections, is but little different functionally from the deliberative body that took office when the city was chartered in 1837.

Ward representation is fundamentally about the same now as it was then. Councilmen, chosen to represent territories of approximately equal population, still form the directorate by which the municipal corporation is run.

For the first thirty-two years of its life Chicago elected a new council each year. To cut down election costs the term was increased to two years in 1869, and sixty-six years later, in 1935, to four. Until four years ago there were two aldermen for each ward. Inasmuch as there were thirty-five wards before the present fifty ward plan was adopted, the old councils had seventy members. Now there is one alderman for each of the fifty wards.

Ten Represent Six Wards.

A council chronology, prepared with the aid of Frederick Rex, municipal librarian, tells an interesting story of Chicago's development.

The first council had jurisdiction over 4,170 persons living in the 10.6 square miles of territory bounded approximately by the lake on the east, 22d street on the south, Wood street on the west, and North avenue on the north.

There were six wards. I. C. Goodhue and Hiram Pearsons were elected to represent the 1st, Francis C. Sherman and Peter Bolles for the 2d, John D. Caton for the 3d, John S. C. Hogan and Asahel Pierce for the 4th, Francis C. Taylor for the 5th, and Bernard Ward and Samuel Jackson for the 6th. It was not until 1839 that the population of the 3d and 5th wards waranted the election of two aldermen each.

By 1851 the population had leaped to 34,000, the city had grown to 13.5 square miles in area, and it was necessary to add three new wards for a total of nine.

Sixteen Wards in 1863.

When the number of wards was increased to sixteen in 1863 the city was still about the same size as in 1851, but it now held 112,000 residents.

By 1869 the city had pushed south and west and had expanded to 35.66 square miles. The population, still mushrooming, had gone to 169,353. In that year four new wards were added, bringing the total to twenty. The council that took office in 1869 was the first elected for the two year term.

Until the cities and villages act became effective in 1875, the size of the council was governed by state law. In 1880, after the city was given self determination in this matter, it cut its ward total to eighteen. Chicago was then the same size as in 1869, but the population had crossed the half million mark.

In 1887 the area of the city had increased to forty-four square miles and some of the eighteen wards had become unwieldy, so boundary lines were shifted to provide for twenty-four. Three years later, just after Chicago had joined the million population category and increased its area several fold by the annexation of such townships as Lake View, Hyde Park, Lake, and Jefferson, the number of wards was boosted to thirty-four.

Increased to Fifty in 1923.

In 1900, when there were 1,698,575 persons living in Chicago, the 35th ward was added. The number remained at thirty-five until 1923, when the fifty ward plan took effect. There has been no change since then in the total, but ward boundaries have been shifted every ten years as the law provides, to keep ward populations approximately equal. The next decennial redistricting is scheduled for 1941.

KITES FILL AIR IN PRACTICE FOR BIG TOURNAMENT

Boys, Girls Evince Keen Interest in Event.

Chicago and its suburbs became kite conscious last week. Thousands of boys and girls of all ages were filling the spring skies with a colorful patchwork of kites in all sizes and shapes as part of their early rehersals for THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE kite flying contest Saturday, May 6, in Grant park. The contest, which will take the form of a round robin tournament, will be held with the coöperation of the park district.

Preliminary eliminations will get under way this week at seventy-nine local park fieldhouses, continuing through Tuesday, April 18. The tournament is expected to draw at least 5,000 contestants.

The rules are simple. Each kite is to be homemade. No store bought kites will be permitted. Entries will be judged on construction and flying performances. Contestants may build kites at the craft rooms of the local fieldhouses under the guidance of park district instructors. Materials will be supplied free.

Get Plenty of String.

Each flyer will be given seventy-five yards of string. Winning kites in the main will be those first to soar at the end of the string.

Eight trophies will be given by THE TRIBUNE to first place winners of the contest divisions at the finals. Other winners will be awarded ribbons furnished by the park district. The tournament will be supervised by F. E. Kardes, craft technician for the park district. He will be assisted by sectional park directors and local park instructors.

At the finals, in addition to the main contest, there will be a mass kite flying sepctacle with more than 5,000 entries. All entrants in the tournament, whether prize winners or not, will be eligible for the mass flying spectacle.

Coupon Lets You In.

To enter the tournament clip the attached coupon and mail or take it to your nearest fieldhouse by Wednesday. Suburbanites, as well as city residents, are eligible. There is no age limit. Boys and girls, men and women are all eligible.

Local eliminations at seventy-nine fieldhouses will qualify twenty flyers from each park for the sectional contests to be held April 24 and 25. The sectional contests will be the semi-finals. Here will be selected 372 finalists for the May 6 contest.

Contestants may enter in eight divisions of the tournament. The events are artistic, novelty, handwinding contest, mechanical winding, solo box kite, messenger, smallest kite and largest kite.

Some Early Entrants.

West side park craft rooms began turning out scores of kites last week for the tournament. A few of the early entrants are:

Shedd park—Otto Nedjl, Robert and Fred Pancer, Rudolph Puzman, Earl Schroeder, Eric Jansen and Jansen and Clarence Paciocka.

La Follette park—Russell Harper, Jewel Gits, Robert Ploog, Jan Van Lear, Irving Kovnat and Jerome Miner.

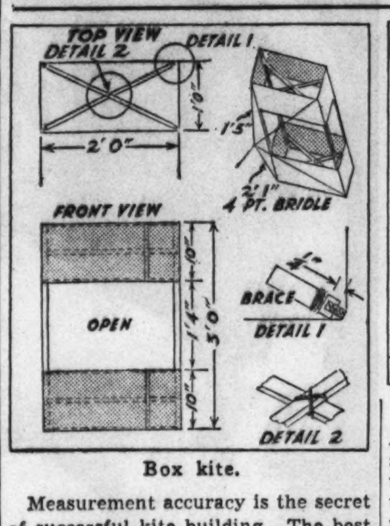
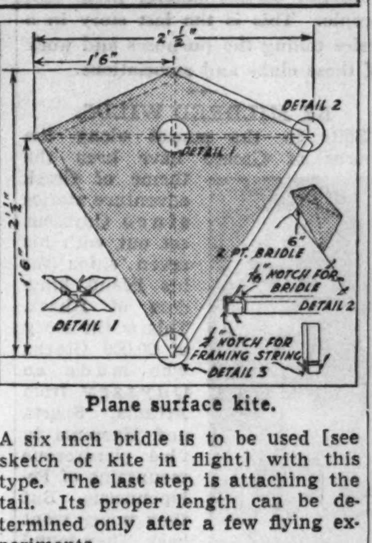
How to Make a Kite



Box kite.



Plane surface kite.

Measurement accuracy is the secret of successful kite building. The best flying kites are the most perfectly balanced.

The first step in building a plane surface kite [the easiest one to make, incidentally] is tieing the crosspiece to the longer stick. [Detail 1.] The ends of the sticks must be notched for bridle and for framing string [details 2 and 3]. The paper should be cut one-half inch larger than the skeleton. Great care should be taken in laying out and lapping paper. The extra half inch of paper is folded over and pasted securely.

This type of kite can be flown with or without a bowstring. If a bow is used it should be about three inches. A six inch bridle is to be used [see sketch of kite in flight] with this type. The last step is attaching the tail. Its proper length can be determined only after a few flying experiments.

There are seven major construction steps in building a box kite: 1. Whittle or plane crosspiece sticks, as in detail 1, so that they can be lashed securely to the four upright frame sticks. 2. Tie crosspiece sticks with twine [detail 2]. 3. Assemble frame. 4. Attach string through ends of frame sticks. 5. Cut and sew cloth according to above measurements. 6. Adjust cloth on frame. 7. Attach bridle. Use light weight, closely woven cloth. This kite flies without a tail.

Instruction in kitemaking is being given on week day afternoons at your nearest park fieldhouse.

DRIVERS SOUGHT TO TRANSPORT SICK TO CLINIC

An appeal to automobile owners for help in transporting cases living at a distance to the free tuberculosis clinic of the Du Page County Tuberculosis association in Glen Ellyn recently was issued by the organization.

According to Miss Gertrude Bearls, executive secretary, the steady increase in the number of persons referred to the clinic is crowding available transportation facilities. Miss Berls said it was necessary to find six volunteer drivers to assist at the last clinic.

Cases cannot be scheduled according to their geographical location in the county because of the two week intervals between clinics. They must be examined as soon as possible after being referred by their family doctor. The driver, it is explained, is in no danger of infection from his passengers.

Clinics are held monthly on the first and third Thursdays. Announcement is made that persons wishing to volunteer may do so by telephoning Glen Ellyn 809, or writing the Du Page County Tuberculosis association, room 326, 526 Crescent boulevard, Glen Ellyn.

The present building has normal accommodations for 84 patients, and recently has been obliged to care for 78 adults and 25 infant patients. F. J. Rising young maestro tells success secret

"Our first piano at home was a used one. Mother bought it at a bargain through a Tribune want ad. But it launched the career that put me in the money today."

PERHAPS your child has the makings of a great artist, composer, or orchestra leader. There is one way to find out before investing large sums in training.

In the Musical Instruments column in the Tribune want ad section you will find used pianos, violins, saxophones and other instruments offered at low prices. You can select a satisfactory instrument for your child to begin with—and do so at low cost.

For announcements of teachers offering instruction in music, see the Musical and Dramatic column.

"I'd tell any ambitious girl the same thing"

"Beauty culture pays—that's why I went into it. But you have to have training. I picked my school through a Tribune want ad. And now I own a profitable shop which I bought through a Tribune Business Opportunities want ad."

When you consider that some women travel miles to have their hair done by a favorite operator—when frequently every shop is swamped with appointments—you can realize the money-making possibilities in the beauty business.

A good way to get started is to choose a school from among the many outstanding institutions which advertise in the Instruction and Trade Schools columns in the Tribune want ad section.

"It's a pleasure to work here now!"

"With a good machine, better light and files that really work, I don't get half so tired. The boss says I do better typing, too."

The few dollars it costs to provide an office with money saving equipment is money well spent.

Tribune want ads offer you many opportunities to carry out such a plan. In the Typewriters and Supplies and the Office Equipment and Devices columns you will find many offers of desks, cabinets, lighting fixtures, calculating machines, typewriters and other equipment.

Hundreds of business firms and executives have become satisfied purchasers of office equipment bought through Tribune want ads. Review them today.

Because they get better results, want ad users place more total want advertising in the Tribune than they place in all other Chicago newspapers combined.

[C]UYLER CHURCH TO CELEBRATE SLIVER JUBILEE

[T]ribute Will Be Paid to Charter Members.

[T]here were two sets of builders for [th]e Cuyler Avenue Methodist church in Oak Park, the carpenters and the congregation. In observing the silver anniversary of the dedication of the church sanctuary beginning Wednesday, tribute will be paid to charter members and former ministers.

The Rev. Wesley Israel. [Green Photo.]

The observance will open at 6:30 o'clock Wednesday evening with a banquet, when Bishop Ernest Lynn Waldorf [wi]ll be the speaker. The history of [th]e church, which was founded in [19]00, and events in the building of the [ne]w sanctuary twenty-five years ago, [wi]ll be reviewed.

[T]he celebration will continue [th]rough April 23 under the general [di]rection of the pastor, the Rev. C. [W]esley Israel, and Mrs. H. K. Bauern[fe]ind, anniversary committee chair[m]an.

Former Pastor to Talk.

[N]ext Sunday at the 10:45 o'clock [se]rvice Dr. Asa Davis Thibodeau, Cuy[le]r church pastor from 1915 to 1917, [wi]ll be the guest speaker on the topic "An Evaluation of the Church," Dr. [Th]ibodeau, now a resident of Denver, [C]olo., left the Oak Park church to en[lis]t in the army. He served as chap[la]in of an artillery regiment in [F]rance.

Dr. Frank K. Barnum, minister [fr]om 1917 to 1923, now a resident of [La]ke Bluff, will return to Oak Park [to] preach at the 10:45 o'clock service [on] Sunday, April 23. During Dr. Bar[nu]m's pastorate he conducted a mem[be]rship campaign and in 1920 the [ch]urch reached the high point in [m]embership with 565 persons.

Missionaries to Be Guests.

The Rev. and Mrs. Dillman S. Bul[lo]ck, missionaries in Angol, Chile, will [be] guests of the church at 7:45 o'clock [W]ednesday evening, April 19. Dr. Bul[lo]ck will show motion pictures of his [ag]ricultural project in Chile. The [lo]wer class of the Sunday school will [co]mpose the reception committee. [M]rs. C. Wesley Israel is a niece of [th]e missionaries.

The history of Cuyler Avenue [ch]urch goes back to September, 1900, [wh]en the Rev. J. Clayton Youker ob[ta]ined a meeting place, a residence at [th]e corner of Ontario street and Lom[ba]rd avenue. It is now the home of [M]r. and Mrs. H. V. Gustavson.

The entire church program was [he]ld on Sunday afternoon. It was [or]ganized under the name of the [Th]ird Methodist Episcopal church of [O]ak Park and Robert Quayle became [su]perintendent of the Sunday school.

A building committee headed by [W]. H. Dangel was organized and in [th]e spring of 1914 the completed [ch]urch was dedicated. In 1935, when [th]e Rev. Forest W. Hoisington was [p]astor, the church began the support [of] its first missionary, the Rev. E. B. [P]aul stationed at Landour, India.

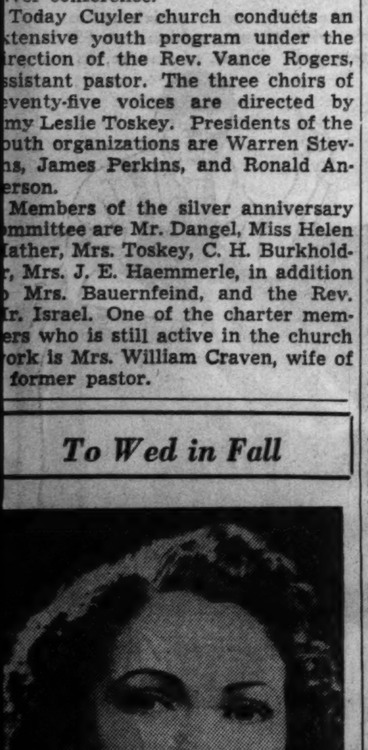
Beach Important Places.

All of the many pastors of Cuyler [ch]urch stepped from there into im[po]rtant Methodist positions. Dr. R. [Sc]ott Hyde and Dr. Barnum became [di]strict superintendents of the Chi[ca]go Western district of the Rock [R]iver conference.

Today Cuyler church conducts an [ex]tensive youth program under the [di]rection of the Rev. Vance Rogers, [a]ssistant pastor. The three choirs of [s]eventy-five voices are directed by [A]my Leslie Toskey. Presidents of the [y]outh organizations are Warren Stev[e]ns, James Perkins, and Ronald An[d]erson.

Members of the silver anniversary [co]mmittee are Mr. Dangel, Miss Helen [M]ather, Mrs. Toskey, C. H. Burkhold[er], Mrs. J. E. Haemmerle, in addition [to] Mrs. Bauernfeind, and the Rev. [M]r. Israel. One of the charter mem[be]rs who is still active in the church [w]ork is Mrs. William Craven, wife of [a] former pastor.

To Wed in Fall



The engagement of Miriam Dich[te]r of Los Angeles to Max Hacker, [s]on of Mr. and Mrs. Hayme Hack[er], 4928 North St. Louis avenue, [h]as been announced by her parents, [M]r. and Mrs. S. J. Dichter. Miss [D]ichter is residing with her sister [at] 3918 Jackson boulevard. Her [fi]ance is attending John Marshall [L]aw school. The wedding is [p]lanned for the fall.

This Week in the Garden

Monday, April 10.

Bulbs grow rapidly when warm days come, and perennials grow beneath the mulching material, part of which should be removed early to admit air and prevent smothering of the tender shoots. Lawns should be given an application of food immediately if it has not been done. Old lawns should be raked with an iron rake, to remove dead grass and débris, and fed with a commercial food. Reseed old lawns. Beds should be spaded carefully. Push the blade straight down to its full length and take thin slices; turn the upper side into the bottom of the excavation, and keep the surface level and all lumps broken up as fine as possible. Soil never should be worked when wet.

Tuesday, April 11.

Soils that contain too much clay can be improved by spading in three to five inches of coal ashes. With the ashes it is wise to use humus in some form, such as leaf mold, peat, and decomposed manure. Mix thoroughly, and if animal manure cannot be obtained commercial foods should be used. Heavy applications of commercial fertilizers are likely to cause injury. Directions usually are given on the container, and they should be followed. Scatter the food over the surface and hoe it under.

Wednesday, April 12.

Consider the clematis as a flowering vine. There are a number of choice varieties. Buy two year old plants. Plant early in the spring in a well drained place and where four to five hours of sun can be had. Plant two to three inches deep, and arrange some support immediately, for the tender stems are easily injured by the wind. Years ago no garden was complete without a few gas plants. They last through many years and send out many white or rose red flowers in June. They look well with the old time moss roses. Evergreens are not recommended for congested city areas. Plant a few gladioli every two weeks for a succession of bloom. Many varieties are available, and in a great array of colors.

Thursday, April 13.

Shrubs planted around the foundation of the house often fail to do well because of poor soil. It often is best to remove the old soil to a depth of two feet and replace with fresh, rich soil and then plant. Do not use a tall shrub where a dwarf should be used. Do not overplant. Select the refined kinds for foundation planting. Buy high grade stock, plants with a good root system and well branched.

Friday, April 14.

A fine garden can be had by using annuals alone. Buy a few pansy plants. They are fine for cutting. Annuals like a good soil, well prepared. Spade well and rake fine before sowing the seed. Mix fine seed with sand before sowing. Do not sow too deep. Seedlings are very tender, and it often is advisable to give them some temporary shade. Thin seedlings if too close together, or the plants will be tall and leggy. Thin early. Cultivate with the hoe. Do not permit seed to form, or the plants will stop flowering.

Saturday, April 15.

Watering annuals or other plants is very important, and when once begun it should be thorough. During very dry weather soak the ground, and when it is partly dry, or dry enough not to stick to the hoe, stir the soil to conserve the moisture. The roses can be pruned now. Hybrid tearoses are pruned rather severely to force strong stems to develop. The hybrid perpetuals should be pruned to three to four strong canes, and these cut back to four to five eyes. Thin out the old shoots of the flowering climbers and head in some of the longest shoots. Try to have a nice variety of flowering plants. Screen poor views and service buildings. Tall growing annuals and vines may be had in great variety.

HINSDALE HOUSE HAS FACE LIFTED; REGAINS YOUTH

Interior Given Thorough Remodeling Also.

BY LOUISE BARGELT.

There are a great many people who like old houses and the idea of doing things for them. This is one of the reasons, of course, for the fact that we see the restoration of so many ageing homes.

It was last year that Mr. and Mrs. Henry Dancer decided to purchase a "mature" home in 3d street, Hinsdale, and make it over into a home to fit their individual needs. They liked the fine site on which the house stood and recognized the possibilities in its inherently sound structure. They felt, too, that the size suited them, though the old fashioned layout, especially on the first floor, left much to be improved.

So they purchased the home and called in Harold A. Zook, architect, 140 South Dearborn street, Chicago, to decide on all the many things which must be done if the house were to be brought abreast of the times and transformed into a house for tomorrow, as well as for today.

New Columns for Old.

The work was started in the fall, and just completed in March, when Mr. and Mrs. Dancer moved in. There are still a few things to be done: A new brick walk in keeping with the Georgian period, dark brown blinds to be put up to match the roof which has been freshly painted, and a new recreation room in the basement. But in the main the work is finished, and from the new wide white siding on the exterior walls, the white quiet columns and serene entrance doorway, to the binfed stoker in the basement, this home is a fine example of how the modern and the traditional can be beautifully blended.

Its exterior has been finely simplified. The old porch and columns have been removed, and a new terrace and columns have brought the house closer to the ground. As might be expected, the interiors are likewise simplified and restrained, and evince in color and decoration a nice feeling for charm and detail.

Old Parlors Combined.

At the right of the reception hall is a large living room. A pleasing sense of space has been obtained by combining the "front and back parlor." The fireplace end of the room is paneled, while the other walls are painted. Still further spaciousness was given to this room by converting a one time wide open porch into a sun room.

At the left of the hall is a library, with walls paneled in pine. Such a "seclusion" room, or study or a guest room, is a trend which is becoming increasingly obvious. An extra room like this, when it can be afforded, is of usefulness to the average family and worth serious consideration. There are no end of uses to which it can be put: Study, conversation when the living room is occupied, homework. Such an extra room can be placed at almost any point in the house, and by a little thoughtful planning in furnishing and decorating can also serve as an extra bedroom if the need becomes imperative.

Kitchen Goes Modern.

The kitchen was completely modernized, with a double drainboard sink, linoleum counter tops, a rubber floor and ivory cabinets and walls. The ceiling is a deep, rich blue.

There is also a breakfast room, with rubber floor and furniture especially designed by the architect. There is excellent and very moderin lighting throughout the house. In the dining room there is daylight illumination above the cornice. This new type of lighting is also used in the bedrooms on the second floor.

On the second floor there were two bathrooms. These were beautifully done over in the modern spirt, with light tile walls and rubber flooring. A third new bath was installed on this floor. On the third floor are the servants' quarters.

Radiators in Walls.

Where the walls were broken into, a blanket type of insulation was used, and mineral fill insulation packed into the second floor ceiling.

The present heating system is forced flow hot water, with all the radiators concealed in the walls. It is fired by one of the new and highly efficient bin type stokers—the type which is completely automatic.

There will be a large woodburning fireplace in the basement recreation room, when it is finished.

Planning Harrison Corps Dance

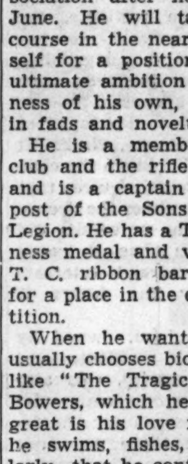
At Harrison High school preparations are under way for an R. O. T. C. dance, profits of which will be used to purchase a school flag. Responsibility for the party has been assumed by the officers' club and its leaders met last week to arrange plans. They are (seated) Lieut. Ralph Golusinski, secretary; (left to right, standing) Maj. Harold Brennan, president; Capt. Henry Letzter, treasurer; Maj. Frank Adamski, vice president, and Lieut. Frank Jurjovec, sergeant at arms.

[TRIBUNE Photo.]

SELF-RELIANCE IS CALLED BEST R. O. T. C. BENEFIT

J. F. Whitfield Learns to Press Own Pants.

"Self-reliance," answered James Fletcher Whitfield, commanding officer of the Marshall High school battalion, when asked what, in his estimation, was the most important advantage of R. O. T. C. training. "You learn to get along without depending on others. I, for example, learned to press my pants. The R. O. T. C. trains you in many ways and with me it amounts to an obsession. I seldom think or talk of anything else."



James Whitfield.

James, however, does not intend to have a military career, although he plans to study until he gets a commission in the Reserve Officers association after he is graduated in June. He will take a commercial course in the near future to fit himself for a position in business. His ultimate ambition is to own a business of his own, preferably dealing in fads and novelties.

He is a member of the usher's club and the rifle team at Marshall and is a captain in Logan Square post of the Sons of the American Legion. He has a TRIBUNE and a neatness medal and won all the R. O. T. C. ribbon bars except the one for a place in the city platoon competition.

When he wants to read, James usually chooses biography, something like "The Tragic Era," by Claude Bowers, which he endorses. And so great is his love for the outdoors—he swims, fishes, and cycles regularly—that he confesses he may take up landscaping as a vocation. Meantime, in class, he fills himself with commercial law, practical chemistry, and practical physics.

PUPILS TO PLANT TREES APRIL 20 IN ARBORETUM

The Arbor day program will be the first major event of the Centennial since the celebration in February of the establishment of the county 100 years ago.

HIT TUNES, SONGS OF YESTERDAY ON MUSIC COUNTER

The Music Counter, with Harold Stokes directing, will present hit tunes of today and songs of yesteryear from 9:30 to 10:15 p. m. Wednesday on W-G-N and the Mutual network.

Edna O'Dell, Gunther Decker, and the Four Grenadiers will be featured in the singing and Olda Jirousek will offer a 'cello solo. A Memory Lane medley will include "I'll See You Again," with Jirousek playing the 'cello; "Let Me Call You Sweetheart," sung by Gunther Decker, and "Take Me Home Again Kathleen," done by the chorus and orchestra.

Northerners Quartet to Be Featured Tuesday

The Northerners will feature their quartet on their program from 9:30 to 10 p. m., Tuesday, on W-G-N. The quartet, with William Haddow and Alfred Mortimer, tenors; Gordon Nereim, baritone, and Milton Ekstrom, bass, will sing, "Drink to Me Only With Thine Eyes" and "Stout Hearted Men." Bernice Rickman will sing a request number for her solo, "Alice Blue Gown."

Romance Strikes Deeply Into W-G-N Song Staf

Spring is having its effect on W-G-N singers. A few weeks ago Patricia Clayton of the Three Graces and Gale Watts, a W-G-N singer, announced their engagement. And now Kathleen Bretzlaff, also of the Three Graces, and Duwayne Carns, another W-G-N-Mutual singer, have announced plans for a wedding next month.

Abe Lyman's Orchestra on Mutual Show of Week

Abe Lyman and his Californians will treat listeners to a potpourri of sweet swing when they appear on W-G-N and Mutual's coast to coast "Show of the Week" from 5:30 to 6 p. m., today. This Easter Sunday special also features the news commentaries of Ernest Chappell.

'Name Three,' New Mutual Show, to Start Tomorrow

A jackpot which will swell from week to week is to be one of the features of W-G-N-Mutual's new quiz show, "Name Three," aired from 7 to 7:30 p. m., Mondays, starting tomorrow. Bob Hawk is the ringmaster.

SCHOOLS INVADE RADIO STATIONS' BUSINESS FIELD

Sell Time and Ask for Increased Power.

Many radio stations, operated by so-called educational interests, are rapidly broadening their campaigns and are seeking further fields to conquer. Three trends are apparent:

1. These stations are demanding possession of select broadcasting channels.

2. They are asking higher power permits.

3. They are going more and more into the business of selling radio time to advertisers.

Station WHA, operated by the University of Wisconsin at Madison, has applied to federal authorities for the 670 channel, now owned by WMAQ in Chicago. It has also demanded that it be allowed to increase its power to 50,000 watts, the highest granted any station in this country. Station WWL at New Orleans, conducted by Loyola university as a commercial institution, already has 50,000 watts.

Charge La Follette Backing.

Charges have been made that the WHA demands were backed by the political machine of Gov. Philip La Follette, who desired a powerful outlet for the propaganda of his third party movement. The present governor of Wisconsin, Julius P. Heil, has requested a delay to study the application. A stay of sixty days was granted by the federal communications commission.

The League of Wisconsin Stations has protested against the confiscation of the WMAQ channel, holding that WHA has no need for a full power station if it intends only to spread educational information to the people of Wisconsin. It was pointed out that the university does not use all the time granted it under its present license.

Acute observers believe a dangerous precedent would be established if the Wisconsin demands are met. They reason that if WMAQ can be taken for the university's benefit, other state institutions could seize the rest of the best channels. With such a start, it would not be difficult, these observers hold, to go a step further and establish government broadcasting.

Some Woo Business.

Some of the educational broadcasters do not sell time. WILL, at the University of Illinois, and WMBI, at the Moody Bible institute, are among them. So far WHA also has refrained from paid advertising. Others are frankly in business, seeking revenues from sponsors.

An unusual situation developed at Cornell university, Ithaca, N. Y. It owned station WESG. Since the communications commission requires that all broadcasting time under the license be used, and since the university did not want that much time, it leased its station to commercial interests and reserved only the hours it wanted.

WAPI at Birmingham, owned by Alabama Polytechnic institute and Alabama State university, was also leased several years ago to commercial operators. A spokesman for the institutions said that there were not sufficient funds for good programs and that quasi-commercial operation was unfair to the other stations of the state.

List Time Sellers.

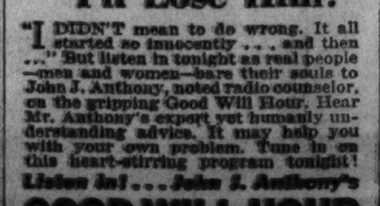
There is nothing in the radio regulations to prevent any educational interest with a radio station from engaging in commercial activity. Among the educational institutions that do sell time and their stations are:

St. Louis university, WEW; Georgia School of Technology, Atlanta, WGST; Rensselaer Polytechnic institute, Troy, N. Y., WHAZ; St. Norbert college, Green Bay, Wis., WHBY and WTAQ; University of Florida, WRUF; University of North Dakota, KFMJ; Port Arthur college, Port Arthur, Tex., KPAC, and John Brown university, Siloam Springs, Ark., KUOA.

There are about two dozen educational institutions with radio facilities which do not engage in commercial broadcasting.

PETER QUILL IN NEW ADVENTURE ON FRIDAY NIGHT

"Peter Quill," the drama depicting the fight against the dreaded Red Circle, will present a new episode, "The Captain Conquers Death," at 8 p. m. Friday, on W-G-N and the Mutual Broadcasting system. The scientific genius, Peter Quill, portrayed by Hugh Studebaker, while awaiting the Red Circle's next move, reminisces upon a heroic feat during the world war by an American captain. To Secret Agent Gail Carson, portrayed by Alice Hill, Quill tells of the patriotism of Capt. Wells, played by Chris Ford, in the face of certain death.



"If I Tell Him, I'll Lose Him!"

"I DIDN'T mean to do wrong. It all started so innocently . . . and then . . ." But listen in tonight as real people —men and women—bare their souls to John J. Anthony, noted radio counselor, on the gripping Good Will Hour. Hear Mr. Anthony's expert yet humanly understanding advice. It may help you with your own problem. Tune in on this heart-stirring program tonight! Listen in! . . . John J. Anthony's GOOD WILL HOUR 9 TO 10 P. M. TONIGHT — WGN

[ADVERTISMENT]

Pull the Trigger on Lazy Bowels, and Also Pepsin-ize Stomach!

When constipation brings on acid indigestion, bloating, dizzy spells, gas, coated tongue, sour taste, and bad breath, your stomach is probably loaded up with certain undigested food and your bowels don't move. So you need both Pepsin to help break up fast that rich undigested food in your stomach, and Laxative Senna to pull the trigger on those lazy bowels. So be sure your laxative also contains Pepsin. Take Dr. Caldwell's Laxative, because its Syrup Pepsin helps you gain that wonderful stomach-relief, while the Laxative Senna moves your bowels. Tests prove the power of Pepsin to dissolve those lumps of undigested protein food which may linger in your stomach, to cause belching, gastric acidity and nausea. This is how pepsinizing your stomach helps relieve it of such distress. At the same time this medicine wakes up lazy nerves and muscles in your bowels to relieve your constipation. So see how much better you feel by taking the laxative that also puts Pepsin to work on that stomach discomfort, too. Even finicky children love to taste this pleasant family laxative. Buy Dr. Caldwell's Laxative—Senna with Syrup Pepsin at your druggist today! (Adv.)

TAPE RECORDING CALLED A RADIO HOPE OF FUTURE

Permits Cutting, Editing as in Movies.

Motion pictures, many a Hollywood commentator has observed, are made in the cutting room and this editing aspect of motion picture making is acquiring greater and greater importance.

If a motion picture were rehersed and shot in one sequence as the present radio show is it would probably be so bad that it could not be shown —even if it weren't a dozen times too long.

Today there is some disposition among radio producers to speculate whether the technique of cutting and editing might not be applied with good results to radio broadcasting.

That could not be done, of course, to live talent shows, as they are now produced. Words uttered, music played on the air cannot be recalled. It is always the hope of radio producers that the performance that is put on the air will be the ultimate in perfection, that it will far exceed even the dress rehearsal. That, of course, is not always the way it works out. Often performers get the jitters when they face the microphone and give an inferior performance.

New Tape for Recording.

Lately a new type of transmission has been introduced in America, after a test of several years in Europe, which appears to hurdle some of the drawbacks of "live" programs. It is recording on tape, somewhat similar to the sound track employed in motion picture work.

The tape, which is made of a specially prepared and patented gelatin substance, 7 millimeters wide, can be cut and spliced with the greatest of ease. Words can be cut out or added, sentences and music rearranged, sound effects may be added, or narration and explanation put in in any manner desired. In the disc type of recording or electrical transcriptions such alterations are impossible. In other words, production and showmanship can be injected into the new tape system of transmission which are impossible in other types of programming. And they can be perfectly timed.

Tried Successfully in Europe.

The tape in its final form is actuated with a beam of light and a photoelectric cell. It is said to have a frequency and volume range exceeding that of high fidelity transmitters.

The system has been successfully employed for radio in Great Britain and on the continent. In England the tape system is used to record entertainment by American and English artists for consumption by British listeners by way of stations and Luxembourg, France, and Holland. The programs are fitted together, commercial continuity is added [advertising is not permitted on the government controled British networks], and then the finished programs are shipped across the channel for airing on continental stations.

Before the tape system can come into general use in America several barriers must be hurdled. The American public has never showed the enthusiasm for recorded radio entertainment it has for "live" shows. That prejudice seems to be waning somewhat though. Perhaps the terrific comeback of the phonograph is evidence to that effect.

Ban on Two Networks.

And two of the three major networks still prohibit the broadcasting of recorded entertainment. The Mutual network is the exception. NBC and CBS have seen fit to relax this rule on rare occasions and it is not inconceivable that they might one day abolish this prohibition.

The tape system would be welcomed by many topnotch performers since it would relieve them of many inconvenient hours of rehersal as well as the necessity for being at a given point when the program was aired. They would be less likely to object to the new recordings with their flexibility, permitting editing and production, than they would to the old style transcription which permits of no alteration once it has been cut.

The tape system is also adaptable for use in the phonograph. It is said to have the advantage of compactness. A full symphony could be recorded and wound on a spool which would occupy no more space than a 200 foot can of 8 millimeter amateur movie film, a model of compactness by comparison with the space occupied by present phonograph discs.

Lose Weight Safely

IF you want to take off ugly fat easily and pleasantly all you have to do is—First . . . eat sensibly, which means you avoid over-eating. Second . . mix ¾ of a glass of Welch's Grape Juice with ¼ of a glass of water and drink before meals and at bedtime. Thus you reduce caloric intake considerably. But you do not suffer a hungry moment. There are no strenuous exercises or taking drugs. Yet!—in a test conducted by Dr. Damrau with this method among a group of intelligent and cooperative people who followed directions implicitly, an average weight loss of seven pounds was registered per month. This remarkable method is just as beneficial and effective for overweight men as it is for overweight women. There is only one thing to watch. Eat sensibly, which means you avoid over-eating; and be sure to use Welch's Grape Juice—always made from the pick of the grape crop; always full strength; always pure.

Irene Rich, lovely star of the screen and radio, now past 40, weighs the same as she did at 16.

Try This Amazing Welch's Tomato Juice

If you think all Tomato Juice is alike, try Welch's new, vitamin-rich Tomato Juice. It is so rich and thick you can add ⅓ water or ice and still have a most delicious Tomato Juice.

WE BELIEVE THIS TO BE THE TRUTH ABOUT REUPHOLSTERING

AND REBUILDING YOUR OLD LIVING ROOM SUITE

There has been so much advertising about low prices on reupholstering that many people are confused.

We believe it DOES NOT PAY TO REUPHOLSTER any low priced living room suite. If you have an expensive suite, then it is a good investment to have it reupholstered and rebuilt. The prices are advertised all over Chicago anywhere from $29.50 and up. The lowest price we advertise is $39.50. Our selection of covers at $39.50 is naturally limited as to quality—however, for those who will not pay more.

Our Wool Tapestry cover for a two-piece suite, which means a chair and one cushion and a sofa with three cushions at $59.50, offers you a fine quality, satisfactory job. Then, of course, as the prices go higher the entire difference is in the finer quality of covers which you select. Miller Bros. guarantee every job and all work is done by factory trained union men.

$100 CASH PRIZES FOR BEST Quinkos
(10 prizes of $5 each 50 prizes of $1 each)
SEND IN YOUR QUINKO

HOW TO MAKE A QUINKO

Drop a spot of Parker Quink on a piece of paper. Fold the paper and squeeze it. Then unfold and let dry. You'll be surprised and delighted by the queer, interesting shapes you can make. Some look like spiders, some like butterflies, cats, dogs, bugs, flowers, people, etc. Here are a few examples:

BUTTERFLY QUINKO — TURTLE QUINKO — SPIDER QUINKO

TO INTRODUCE A QUICK-DRYING INK

Quinko is a fascinating, exciting, easy game that anyone can play. The Parker Pen Co. offers $100 cash prizes for the best Quinkos, solely to acquaint more people with Parker Quink, the marvelous new writing ink that cleans any pen as it writes—a Parker or any other pen. Millions prefer Quink also because it dries 31% faster than average inks. And its brilliant colors make your writing look swell. Only 15c at any store selling ink. Get Quink today.

RULES:

Make a Quinko on a sheet of paper, give it a name, and letter your own name and address plainly. For the ten best Quinkos received before April 19th, 1939, Parker will award $5 cash each, and for the next fifty selected, $1 each ($100 in all). Quinkos will be judged for neatness and originality. Duplicate prizes in case of ties. Be sure to enclose a Parker Quink box-top with your Quinko so we will know it was made with Quink. Mail to "Quinko Contest," Dept. A, P. O. Box 1130, Chicago, Ill.

Day by Day on the Farm

By BOB BECKER

Spring on the Farm.

CANADA geese pairing off and sneaking away to nesting places along the edges of the pond . . . turkey hens traveling between the barnyard and underbrush at the edge of the woods to scout possible nesting sites . . . white swans building huge nests . . . spring bird migrants arriving from the south . . . the first wildflowers and the first tree blossoms of the season showing in the woods . . . these and other signs of spring may be observed on the farm at this time of the year.

One Muscovy hen seems to be far ahead of the other barnyard residents on her nesting plans. While some of the turkeys and ducks already are building nests and laying eggs, this particular Muscovy can boast about a full quota of eggs which she is incubating in her nest. In less than three weeks this smart old hen should have a string of fuzzy yellow ducklings following her around the barnyard.

Swans Building Nests.

At least two pairs of swans on the Du Page county farm are busy building nests. When we walked back to the big pond the other day we noticed that the white swans on that body of water had a nest mound more than a foot high, and both the cob and the pen were working to build it higher. The two birds were pulling weed stalks at a furious pace and piling them up on the nest as though they had to finish their important job in a few hours. The white swans on Half Moon pond also are building a nest.

If all the ducks and geese on Half Moon pond are successful in raising families this summer we'll have a real parade of waterfowl before the season is over. Besides the white swans, a pair of wild mallards is nesting there, and the high-hat Muscovy ducks which have refused to associate with the Muscovys in the barnyard undoubtedly will raise a family.

A pair of mallards nesting at the edge of Half Moon pond are [as far as we know now] the only wild ducks staying around the pond, with the exception of the waterfowl which were trapped on the farm last summer and kept [by federal permission] for a breeding experiment. The flockmaster reports that he saw the wild mallards this week when he visited the pond to feed the Muscovys.

War on Rats Succeeds.

The continued use of red squill liquid in the war against rats in farm buildings has been successful. One of the men on the farm made up a gallon of this liquid rat poison, which he has been using from time to time. The other day he was telling us that several dead rats were found around the sheep barn, all victims of red squill. The baits the rats ate were made up of shelled corn, a fine chicken mash, and red squill. It proved to be an appetizing combination to the rodents.

The flockmaster on the Tribune's Du Page county farm is going to waste no time in exterminating whorled milkweed, the plant which he believes poisoned some of his sheep last summer. Sheep occasionally eat this poisonous plant, especially in the late summer after the bitter taste of the green milkweed has disappeared. This year the flockmaster has plans to eliminate it in grazing fields before it has a chance to flower. It is difficult to eradicate the plants by pulling them up because it will grow again if any root fragments are left in the ground. So the men have bought a weed spray to be used in the campaigns against this poisonous growth in open fields. The liquid applied by this spray is death to the poisonous milkweed.

REAL ESTATE LOANS, MORTGAGES.

BABES IN ARMS OR MEN IN ARMS. It's all in a day's work with us to take care of them. Here is a fellow who is in debt over his head and in bad with everybody, including his own angelic mother; then there is a man who came to us with fire in his eyes—and on his tongue—because his bank wouldn't renew his old mortgage for the 4th time, and demanded payment in full P. D. Q. Then there are inexperienced people who left everything up to "George" and need help because "George" is not what he is cracked up to be.
We like to help ALL DECENT FOLKS. See us if you wish to buy, sell, refinance, or repair property or build, and we will give you every possible "break." We don't use routine machine methods. Your case is handled by an experienced officer of this corporation who is not hog-tied by inflexible rules, and who will give you speedy, reliable and efficient service.
We make top loans up to 20 years on homes, 2-4 flats—frame, stucco, brick—up to 30 years old, handle our Own, Bank, Insurance and Building and Loan funds and place 80 to 90% FHA loans. Also large Apartment, Store, Garage and Factory buildings. On good FHA loans over $5,000, no commission at all; other loans, low charges.
OUR SERVICE IS BY ODDS THE BEST.

"How I Got a Loan of $100 without embarrassment or delay."
"I needed $100 in a hurry. I dreaded to ask friends for a favor. And I had no security for getting a loan at a bank. What was I to do? Fortunately, I heard about Household Finance and so went to a nearby office. The manager was courteous and friendly. He merely asked me a few simple questions. The next day I got the money with 20 months to repay. Only my wife and I signed the papers. I was delighted to get a loan so simply and promptly."
Whether you are married or single, if you need a loan of $20 to $300 the manager of the Household office near you will be glad to discuss your problem with you in complete privacy and without obligation. Why not phone or visit him today?

Public Service Building Corporation Slum Clearance Plan Is Based on Competition

MONOPOLY WILL BE PREVENTED, ANGELL ASSERTS

Explains New Proposal for Reclamation.

BY AL CHASE.
[Real Estate Editor.]

Competition instead of monopoly is the keynote to the Chicago plan for rebuilding slum areas by means of "public service building corporations," according to Paul D. Angell, secretary of the Chicago Building Congress, Inc. That organization yesterday published a pamphlet compiled by Angell outlining the plan it has developed to reclaim depreciated areas.

Although the "public service building corporations," as planned in the bills recently introduced in both houses of the state legislature, will operate like public utility corporations, they will differ in one important respect, Angell pointed out. They will not be monopolistic.

Corporations to Be Competitive.

Public utilities almost invariably have operated under state or municipal supervision as monopolies in their particular field. The "public service building corporation," on the other hand, according to the bills now under consideration at Springfield, will be competitive.

"In order that the feature of monopoly control may not be introduced into this phase of our economic progress, the act will provide that there shall be competition in the acquisition of land, demolition, and rebuilding between two or more public service building corporations within any given area," Angell said in his pamphlet entitled "The Case for Slum Clearance by Private Enterprise."

Will Serve Public Interest.

"In the absence of monopoly, the law of supply and demand, plus an intelligent regulatory control and protection of the public interest, may be depended upon to fashion the public service building corporation into an effective instrument of public service.

"It is hoped that such corporations may become the means of performing a task which neither the property owner as an individual nor the government can accomplish."

Angell pointed out that the activities of the corporations authorized under the enabling act will be restricted to the clearance of blighted areas and their rebuilding.

"Such rebuilding would follow a master plan," he said, "prepared in advance by the city or town, dealing with zoning and building restrictions, street layouts, parks, playgrounds, and similar facilities.

Large Districts Affected.

"The chief constructive feature of the public service building corporation act is that large districts would be contemporaneously affected by demolition and rebuilding on a comprehensive scale and on a competitive basis.

"The slum and blighted areas are usually located in the heart of our cities, enveloping and smothering the downtown retail districts.

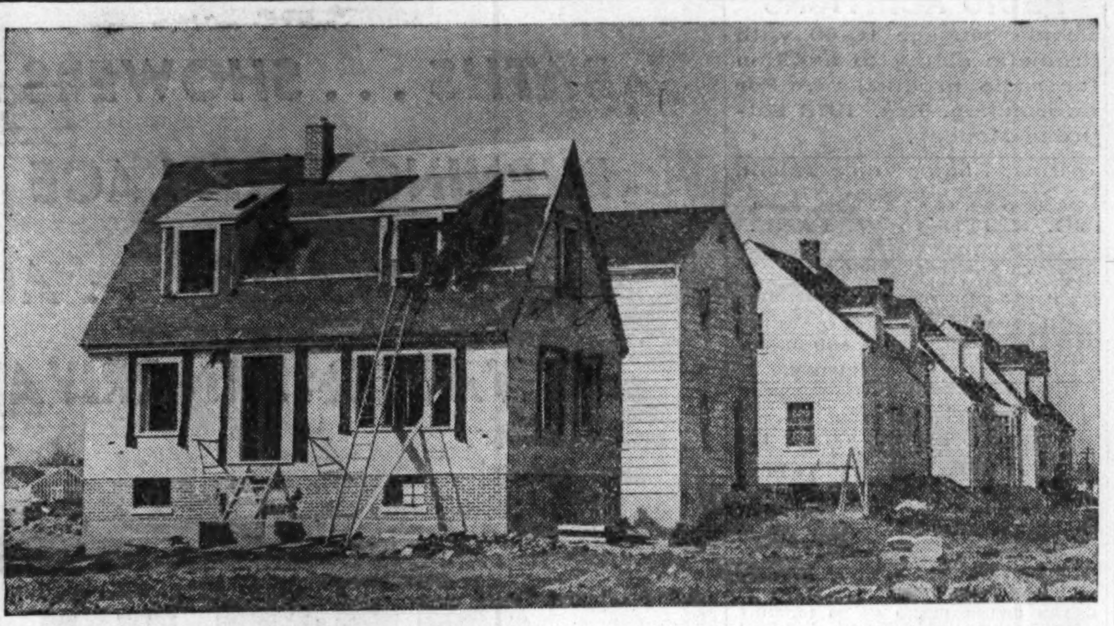
"The plan commission, the zoning commission, the city council, and other organs of a municipality would join in the task of rebuilding their most strategically located districts by offering wholehearted coöperation to the proposed public service building corporations. It is not difficult to imagine the broad and effective benefits and advantages that are to accrue to the taxpayers of the municipality and the community as a whole."

Remodel Dairy Group Into Residence

(Story in adjoining column.)

Jerome Robert Cerny, architect, bought the dairy farm group of buildings comprising two acres of "Walden," the former estate of the late Cyrus H. McCormick in Lake Forest, and is remodeling and enlarging them into a court, as shown above. It is built around a circular area with an English elm in the center. The original pasteurizing room with white marble floor is being made into a dining room. Portions of the outbuildings are being rebuilt into summer living rooms and stables.

Residential Activity in Broadview



These five houses are nearing completion on the west side of 11th avenue, between 13th and 14th streets, in John Cummings Lindop's Broadview Estates development in Broadview, a suburb south of Maywood. All were sold before construction began. Harlan W. Bird is architect. They cost from $5,250 to $6,500 for land and building. They have five and six rooms.

BEGIN SELLING M'CORMICK LAKE FOREST ESTATE

Twelve Acres Are Bought by Three Families.

Another big Lake Forest property has been placed on the market. "Walden," the wooded estate of the late Cyrus H. McCormick, comprising eighty-six acres extending from the lake to Sheridan road, is being sold by the trustees of the McCormick estate, Judson F. Stone, Cyrus McCormick, and John P. Wilson.

Three parcels comprising twelve acres already have been purchased by three buyers.

Architect Buys 2 Acres.

Jerome Robert Cerny, architect, bought two acres fronting north on Ringwood road. This is known as the dairy farm group. The buildings are to be developed into a stone masonry house in the California Monterey style. Melville Lackie of John Griffith, Inc., was broker in the Cerny purchase.

Two other tracts, containing ten acres, have been purchased by undisclosed buyers. One of them also is an architect. Both of them will build.

Wil Be Sold as Desired.

The McCormick estate, according to Stone, will not be formally subdivided, but will be sold to buyers in tracts as desired.

The property is separated from the Edith Rockefeller McCormick estate adjoining it on the south by an east and west private road extending from Sheridan road to the lake.

Crepe Paper Plant to Open in Chicago

The Dennison Manufacturing company, said to be the world's largest maker of crêpe paper, will move part of its manufacturing activities from Framingham, Mass., to this city. Yesterday it leased the factory building at the southwest corner of West 47th street and South Kedzie avenue, in the Kedzie development of the Central Manufacturing district, for eleven years commencing May 1, with an option for an extended period.

Will Make Crêpe Paper.

According to William Kaplan, who represented all parties, the Dennison company at once will install modern machinery for the manufacture of crêpe paper. Heretofore all its crêpe paper making has been done in Massachusetts, at the main plant.

The company, which also makes shipping tags, gummed paper, jewelry boxes, and many other paper products, is moving its factory from its present quarters at 1500 South Western avenue to the new plant.

The building was leased from the Henry Bosch company. It has 130,000 square feet of floor space. This is nearly double its present plant area.

Pay Roll to Increase.

It now employs about one hundred persons in its Chicago operations. When the new manufacturing activities are under way it will have approximately three hundred of its plant roster.

The company, established in 1844, has its main factory at Framingham on a seventy-six acre site. It has a branch plant at Marboro, covering five acres, and the Chicago factory where a few specialties other than crêpe paper are made.

Beverly Hills Seven Room House

This residence of John T. Station, division freight agent of the Rock Island railroad, recently completed by S. A. Vandyk, realtor, is at 9116 Claremont avenue. The construction cost is said to have been $11,500, plus $2,000, for the 50 by 125 foot lot. It has seven rooms, two baths, an attached garage, and is heated by gas. Vandyk has eight other homes under construction, seven of which are sold. He expects to build twelve more this spring in the Beverly Hills and Brainerd areas. During the last year he has built seventeen homes.

Unit in Suburban Building Program

The above house, at 1032 Ridge court, Evanston, was bought by Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence W. Hitchcock from George J. Cyrus & Co. for a reported $14,500. Hitchcock is assistant treasurer of the Red and White corporation. The house was built by the North Suburban Home Builders, Inc. Howard Irwin of Evanston was architect. It contains seven rooms, two baths, and an attached garage. It is heated by gas. It was financed with an $8,000 twenty year Federal Housing administration insured mortgage on which the monthly payments are $74.50. This is one unit in a home building program of fifteen residences planned by the North Suburban Home Builders, Inc., for 1939 in Evanston.

NELSON TELLS PLAN FOR URBAN LAND INSTITUTE

Will Be Established at Northwestern.

Business leaders and realtors are planning to coöperate in the establishment of an "urban land institute" at Northwestern university. The institute, advocated by the National Association of Real Estate Boards, will be a research center for study of city decentralization, creation of new urban areas, and other problems.

Plans for the institute were announced recently by Herbert U. Nelson, executive vice president of the association. Nelson said yesterday that many influential business leaders are interested in the institute and have formed a foundation to establish it.

President Walter Dill Scott and Vice President Franklin Bliss Snyder of the university already have been consulted, according to Nelson.

Favors Chicago Location.

"The institute should be located here because Chicago is a typical American city with typical realty and urban problems of all types," Nelson said. "It should be a research center to investigate decentralization of cities, creation of new urban areas and the decay of cities. It should be a library and clearing house for information for all realtors.

"There are hundreds of agricultural schools and experimental stations studying rural and farm problems. They spend as much as $169,000,000 a year. But there is not a single institute in the country today devoted to the study of urban problems. This is a great field for useful service to city humanity and we hope that such an institute will come to life here within the next year or two."

Favors Building Corporations.

In announcing plans for the institute Nelson commented on the federal government's invasion of the private building field.

"If the government continues to pour millions into public housing projects all of us sooner or later will suffer," he said. "The national real estate board recently has proposed authorization of public service building corporations before authorities in Washington. These would replace the various alphabetical agencies related to real estate. They would be privately organized, financed, and managed to rebuild slum areas without the use of federal funds."

LEASE ROSELAND STORE.

Western Tire Auto Stores, Inc., operators of sixty retail stores in the middle west, leased space at 11256 South Michigan avenue for five years.

Lindop Sells 15 Frame Homes in Broadview Since Jan. 1

Fifteen new frame residences have been sold since Jan. 1 and are under construction by John Cummings Lindop of Oak Park, in the south part of his Broadview estates. Contracts are awaiting execution on eight more, he said yesterday.

In the north section of his development, north of Roosevelt road, Lindop has sold fifteen brick homes. Eleven of these are completed and occupied. Two are nearing completion and work has just been started on two more.

Lindop has 333 lots, all 50x126 feet, in the property he owns south of Roosevelt road. He has 312 lots, with a width of 35 to 60 feet, in his development north of Roosevelt road. In the latter area the houses are of brick construction and were sold at $7,000 to $10,000.

In his property south of Roosevelt road Lindop has built five and six room frame houses. They are being erected on the west side of 11th avenue, between 13th and 15th streets, also on 12th and 13th avenues. They were sold at from $5,250 to $6,500. All were financed with 90 per cent Federal Housing administration twenty-five year loans negotiated through the Republic Realty Mortgage corporation.

All houses in the Lindop development are being built to order. There is no speculative building. Harlan W. Bird is architect for all of the Lindop houses.

REALTY BOARD PLANS 10 WEEK BUILDING COURSE

A ten week educational course in residential construction for members of the Chicago Real Estate board and their salesmen will be started next Tuesday at 32 West Randolph street under the direction of Dominick Dunn. The cost of ten sessions will be $5, it was said.

Sessions will be from 4:30 to 6 p. m. each Tuesday afternoon, according to Charles E. Joern, chairman of the home builders and land developers' division of the board, which is sponsoring the course.

At the Realty Boards

Sir Augustus Carlson of Washington, D. C., and Sweden will be the guest speaker at the "spring jamboree" of the Chicago Real Estate board on Wednesday evening, April 26, at the Hotel Sherman. He will speak on "Government Housing and Slum Clearance Versus Individual Ownership and Initiative." An elaborate program of entertainment is being planned, according to Frank C. Wells, chairman of the house and program committee of the board.

The West Side Real Estate board will have a "Presidents' day" meeting tomorrow noon at the Graemere hotel. President Fred B. Huebenthal will speak on "Where's Your Range?" Joseph R. Dorfman, president in 1938, will be "chief receptionist." His predecessor, President Fred M. Thuerk, is in charge of the program. Ray McCarthy, president in 1936, will be at the speakers' table. Joseph B. Ford, president for two terms, 1934 and 1935, will preside.

PECK & PECK TO OPEN STORE IN EVANSTON

Peck & Peck, women's sports wear, yesterday leased a shop at 702 Church street, Evanston, for five years at an undisclosed rental. It will be opened on May 5. The lease was negotiated by Quinlan & Tyson and John A. Borthwick, Chicago manager of Peck & Peck. This is the firm's second shop to be opened in the Chicago area within a year. The concern's main Chicago store is at 28 South Michigan. It also operates shops throughout the east and south.

Lincolnshire Sales Since Jan. 1 Exceed All 1938

Sales of homes in Lincolnshire Estates since Jan. 1 already have exceeded the total for all of last year, according to S. M. Homan, president of Lincolnshire Estates, Inc. He said that the total for the first two months of 1939 was sixty-two residences valued close to $500,000. Twelve miles of new road are being built on the Lincolnshire property, he said.

HUMMEL OUTLINES BIG SUBURBAN HOME BUILDING PROGRAM

The Frederick E. Hummel company, active in building and financing for more than half a century, is erecting the first four units in a contemplated extensive home building program in northwest Evanston. The houses under construction are at 2755 Lawndale avenue and at 3032, 3034, and 3036 Isabella avenue. William Vesley is architect.

The Lawndale avenue residence was sold yesterday. It is practically completed. The other three will be completed about June 1, it was said.

The four homes have six and seven rooms, with attached garages, two fireplaces each, gas heat, and double deck screened porches. The selling price of the house purchased yesterday was reported as $14,000. Of this figure $2,500 was the cost of the 48 by 104 foot lot.

Predicts Years of Rapidly Increasing Home Building

Residential units are wearing out faster than they are being replaced. For that reason several years of rapidly increasing construction are expected before present housing needs are satisfied. These statements were made yesterday by L. D. McKendry of the Chicago Mortgage Bankers' association in a special survey made for that organization.

L. D. McKendry.

He pointed out that although home building has been increasing encouragingly for five years the surface hardly has been scratched.

Relative Volume Small.

"We must realize," said McKendry, "that in 1934 there was little building of new residential units in this territory. If, for example, we compare the rate of building of all kinds in Chicago and suburbs in 1934 with the rate in 1925 we find that 1934 construction was only about 3 per cent of the 1925 volume.

"Even in 1938, after the construction industry admittedly had made big strides, the volume of new building reached only about 11 per cent of the 1925 figure."

McKendry said that the average life of residential buildings in this area is about forty years, which means that 2½ per cent of all such units become uninhabitable each year. They should be replaced at that time in order to house decently even a static population.

Population Is Growing.

There are approximately 700,000 residential units in Cook county, he said. To keep the situation in hand 17,500 new home units should be built every year. McKendry pointed out that not even in any five year period has that many new units been built. He added that Cook county's population is slowly increasing.

McKendry in his report to the Mortgage Bankers' association said that after several years of inactivity the real estate market is feeling the effects of investment of new money in both existing and new apartment buildings at a constantly accelerated pace.

SOUTH LA SALLE STREET LEASE.

The Mansfield Photo Research laboratories leased space in the Hicky building, 701-03 South La Salle street. J. J. Harrington & Co. represented the lessee and Preston C. Patch of McMenemy, Inc., the lessor.

Paris Easter Parade Today Lace Trimmed

By BETTINA BEDWELL

(Copyright: 1939: By the Chicago Tribune-New York News Syndicate, Inc.)

PARIS.—What a fashion reporter needs to cover the Easter parade over here is an airplane with the world's speed record, or else a telescope that can focus Cannes and Biarritz and Paris at the same time, because all the world takes an Easter vacation, and the international big games divide up between Biarritz and Cannes, while the English come to Paris. By doing some expert advance gumshoe work, however, I know all, because I have seen what went into high-powered luggage for points south.

And a good 50 per cent of the stuff the 24-carat women took away was trimmed with lace, inside and outside garments. And the parade along the Champs Elysées is likewise hung with it. Lace is a name for all the categories of allied trimmings, such as Swiss embroidery, Valenciennes edging, point de Venise lace, etc.

Much of the lace trimming on swank Easter outfits here in Paris is dyed to match wool dresses in pastel colors and dark blue. Frosty white lace and lingerie blouses with dark suits are conspicuous in the parade. Lace-trimmed white petticoats, worn under dark dresses, peek out from hems.

Falsely demure dress and cape ensembles sporting frilled lace jabots are eye catchers in the parade, and the dress with lacy white collar and cuffs is so thick along the avenues that you can't move without stepping on it.

At the resorts, where the sun already is ardent as a Spanish lover, there are apron dresses worn over white Swiss embroidery bodices. There are printed silk frocks trimmed with lace ruffles, or insertion, or both. Eyelet embroidered sports frocks in pastel colors are paired with pastel tweed jackets. Hats with starched lace brims are worn.

Cocktail ensembles for the season make use of dramatic lace in copious amounts. Slithery black dresses have big revers covered with startling white lace or eyelet embroidered ruffles. White lace garnished lingerie blouses with long black or dark blue skirts, and insignificant

Self-portrait, a masterpiece of pastel-tinted makeup in the new "lovely lady" tradition, with rose-tinted lips, flower-petal cheeks, blue-tipped lashes, and a faint suggestion of shadow on the eyelids. To complement the subtle shade of her chartreuse gown she chooses makeup in water color tones.

Cosmetics in water color tones are the medium with which a woman may paint an exquisite portrait each time she makes up her face. There is a delicate Marie Laurencin quality about the spring makeups. Soft colors and deft "painting" create an effect that is very young and very charming.

TRIBUNE NATURAL COLOR PHOTOS

Feminine Face of '39 Amounts to Self-Portrait

By ELEANOR NANGLE

REMEMBER when it was the fashion to look a little gaunt, even a little hard? Eyebrows were exclamation points, cheeks were unrouged hollows, and mouths were crimson, drooping gashes set in a colorless face. Women would rather have had hydrophobia than hips, and it was considered pretty old-fashioned to have a bosom.

It's not so long ago, children. The lean, lithe greyhound phase got its start after the world war and stuck around until Mae West made "curves" a word for fashion experts to worry about.

The pendulum has completed its swing this season. The glamor girl of not so long ago looked haggard and soulful as all get-out. The glamor girl of spring, 1939, is ultrafeminine, deliciously young. You can judge her sophistication by the intensity with which she creates the effect of naiveté!

Her hair is arranged in soft tendrils, à la Watteau. Don't be a bit surprised if there's a silly bow in it. She has a high, rounded bosom rising above a flat diaphragm. She'll never lace herself in to the fainting point, but her exercise program and her invaluable foundation garment combine to make her waist a small one. She has hips. There are even whispers coming out of Paris and the east that if nature has failed her she resorts to padding beneath the peplum of her new spring suit!

She doesn't slink in what will go down in history as the "debutante slouch." She walks proudly, youthfully, often in flat-heeled shoes. She likes the old-fashioned petticoat so much that she sees that it peeps provocatively from beneath the hem of her "little girl" dress. Her clothes have feminine lingerie touches, and color. The uniform of the era when it was better to look chic than pretty was black, with pearls. Today she scorns a uniform.

She has honest eyebrows, groomed to the state of being neither too thick nor too thin, but the line is her own, not freehand drawing. Her complexion is dewy, and she has abandoned the harsh contrast of creamy powder and crimson rouge for soft, delicate pastels with which she literally paints a face that might have been created by the artful brush of a Marie Laurencin!

This painting of her own portrait is vitally important to the pointing up of her new personality. She must be deft at makeup, and her color sense must be virtually infallible. In a season of portrait makeups false notes are almost fatal.

These tremendous changes in typing one's self, which women enjoy and fashion demands, never could be evolved successfully without the aid of the experts. Every woman should count among her twentieth century blessings the beauty experts and fashion arbiters whose backstage workings contribute so much to the picture she presents from day to day and season to season.

This spring, for example, a great beauty specialist has come to the aid of the women transforming themselves into ladies with a "water color" makeup, designed to give the complexion the tender, delicate quality of a water color portrait. She advocates, and is esthetically and unquestionably right in doing so, a pastel-tinted face to do justice to the soft, feminine hues of fashion and the whole new interpretation of beauty.

"Water color" rouge and lipstick are in rose tones. Not orange red, nor purple red, nor namby-pamby pink, but the clear, strong red of a flaming rose. Powder is a golden rose shade, faintly beige, with glowing pinky undertones. Eye shadow, with which the artist painting her self-portrait gives a flattering depth and softness just above the eyelids, is a light, clear blue. Mascara is the dark blue of the midnight sky. Nail enamel is the rose flame tone of the lipstick, so that lips and finger tips are in perfect harmony.

There is a muted, tender quality about the pastel makeup that makes it exquisitely flattering, that gives the face the gracious, young effect, the exact effect demanded by the season's mandate that woman must look sweetly pretty.

Every woman must, in a sense, turn artist this year. There is a riot of color in clothes, some colors strong but most of them subtle. For spring and summer the subtle colors are sponsored by fashion. The soft hues of bonbon pinks, the delicate violet blues, the leafy greens, the tender yellows and pale fuchsias insure costume loveliness. Makeup must be keyed to their muted tones. It must be restrained, natural, and as dewy and fresh as flower petals. It's painting, most certainly, but the eye must be unerring and the touch of the hand be light.

Patterns by Clotilde

By Clotilde.

If you have silhouette problems and the attendant ones of finding flattering clothes, consider your worries over. To the rescue today are these three patterns designed to make the most of your good points and to minimize those you would just as soon keep hidden. Each model has its own version of smartness, and we think you'll like all three.

At the left, a simple design with pointed-up waistline, gently flared skirt, full flowing sleeves, and deft shirring throughout the bodice. Printed silks are the ideal mediums for this model.

Next, in the center, a trim and semi-tailored design with V neckline, broad shoulders, neat waist, and moderately flared skirt. Lace forms a frothy edging for the neckline, and there is a soft jabot to match. Crêpes in warm tones are high fashion for a model such as this.

Stripes are important for the morning dress illustrated at the right. It has a V neckline with a soft rolled collar, and sleeves that are cut in one with the broad and flattering shoulderline. Washable fabrics, either silk, linen, or cotton, are preferred for this pattern. The pattern provides for a charming jacket to wear with this dress.

Campus Modes by a Co-ed

By Carolyn Ramey.

Now and then my modesty forsakes me. I suppose I'm only human in taking pride in my work and have to shout once in a while. My particular reason for pride this time is the pattern illustrated. It's so simple that it fits perfectly into any social schedule. I've worn my own dress to teas, informal dances, receptions, and just plain "dates." With the trinket hat I have to keep it company I've even worn it to classes. The professors cast rather baleful looks at the bonnet, but this censure didn't extend to the frock.

My own version of the pattern is the one illustrated in the largest figure. The material I chose is a triple sheer in marine blue, that greenish-blue shade that is so handsome and popular this season. At the neckline and on the sleeves I have scalloped lace, and there are simple buttons in groups down the entire length of the dress, which has, as you see, princess lines. There is a narrow lether belt at the waist, and the skirt has volumes of flare.

There are lots of things you can do with a pattern as simple as this. For one thing, you can make a beach coat such as the one sketched. Printed cottons or linens should be the best mediums.

Style No. T-8616 is designed for sizes 12, 14, 16, 18, and 20.

Address orders for Campus Modes to Chicago Tribune, P. O. Box 414, Grand Central Station, NEW YORK CITY, inclosing 15 cents in stamps or coin (coin preferred—wrap it carefully) for each pattern ordered. IMPORTANT! Easter Parade in Paris Is Lace Trimmed little jackets or shawls, take their liquor in the best society.

For Easter holiday dances dresses are trimmed with lact unlimited. It is swanky for the younger set to wear girlish muslin dresses trimmed with lace all over the place, and very much like what the simpering sweet girl graduate wore a good many years ago. Also seen on the dance floor are all-over white Swiss embroidered dresses worn on top of pink, blue, or yellow taffeta slips. These are "for young girls only." The sophisticated wear all lace dresses to take out the universal yerning for the stuff. These are usually black, white or blonde. Dinner dresses of black or dark blue silk get a dose of lace in little jackets, always white, which are worn over them.

The result of all this lace is to soften and beautify the feminine landscape, so that there seem to be a lot more pretty women around than I have seen for years and years. When white lacy props are worn with dark suits, the effect is one of fresh scrubbed daintiness which is bound to help along the personal allure of the wearer in the eyes of the sterner sex, besides doing a lot to lift the laundry business out of the red.

From Schiaparelli, the "suit queen," is an ensemble dose that the smartest women over here are taking. It's about one-third white lace to two-thirds black suit. The latter is made of smooth wool, with a rounded neckline, flanked by curved revers to play up the sparkling white lace blouse. Buttons embossed with spread eagles fasten the jacket down the front. The white lace blouse is Venetian, with short sleeves and a soft bow collar. Short white lace gloves match it, and the black hat is trimmed with white lace and organdy. Curved tucks at the back of the skirt produce an effect of tiers.

Jean Patou's dark blue cape and dress ensemble has a white lingerie dickey on the dress, and a ruffled white lace jabot below a black ribbon tie. The cape is flared by pie-piece godets of plaiting, and the skirt of the dress has the same treatment. White lace frills at the wrists of the dress flatter the hands.

Bruyere's young ensemble in dark blue silk crêpe has a peasant blouse of white muslin to fill in the strap top of the apron dress. The bolero jacket and the dress are eyelet embroidered. The navy hat for this outfit is trimmed with white tulle.

Scenes from Early America on Chinaware

What do you know about china? The booklet, "Learn About China Before You Buy," gives brief histories of the most important potters and their works. On sale at the Tribune Public Service offices, 1 South Dearborn street or Tribune Tower. Price, 3 cents. Postpaid, 5 cents.

By Edith Weigle.

Old copper engravings of historic American scenes inspired the designs found on some exceedingly handsome new china. So, now it is possible to have not only authentic copies of old wallpapers, draperies, rugs, and furniture but dinnerware as well.

Over thirty scenes from the America of 1830 to 1860 were selected and copied in underglaze prints in deep blue and in rose-red. Some of the plates, for example, show the capitol at Washington as it was in those days; others give a view of the Hudson from West Point; Boston Harbor, the scene of the famous tea party; Kansas City when it was the eastern terminus for the Santa Fe trade, and the Erie canal as it was in its heighday.

A gracefully shaped tea pot has a charming picture of Mount Vernon on its side, while the sugar bowl shows a little replica of the Clermont, the first steamboat on the Hudson, and the cream pitcher, "the railroad in the valley of the Mohawk."

A steamboat scene called "Low Water in the Mississippi" decorates a gravy boat, and a pretty little egg cup has a print of old Fort Dearborn on its side. Niagara Falls is seen on a good looking platter, and the colonial capitol at Williamsburg is the motif of a cream soup bowl.

This beautiful set of china may be had in a thirty-two piece set for six, in a thirty-eight piece for six, in a fifty piece set for eight, and in a ninety-four piece service for twelve. Although it was made in England by a well known china manufacturer prices on this historic American ware are most reasonable.

Around the border of all the pieces is a charming pattern of foliage and nuts called the old Staffordshire oak and acorn design. And to make the whole thing complete you can get glassware to accompany this china which also has this border. The matching stemware includes goblets, sherbets, cocktail glasses, highball glasses, finger bowls, plates, and salad plates.

So, if you have a dining room done in early American maple, or in colonial or Victorian mahogany or walnut, here is an ideal set of china and glass. The picture today shows a dinner plate, a square salad or dessert plate, a cup and saucer, and one of the matching water goblets.

It's been a long time since we've seen any nicer tableware, no matter what the price.

[Willming Photo.]

A new set of china and glassware is called historic America because the plates, cups, and saucers, vegetable dishes, etc., all have different scenes taken from old copper engravings from the period of 1830-1860. It is unusually charming as are the pieces of glassware used with it.

Crochet Hook Is Easy Avenue to Colored Gloves

By Ellen Bruce.

Colored gloves have been waving in the breezes like gayly flying flags, and crocheted gloves are being twice as gay, because two colors are used. The lighter shade is used for the palm and the darker shade for the back. This two toned effect may be reversed, with the palm dark and the back light. These crocheted gloves are not the difficult jobs many persons seem to believe, and may be made from two balls of thread.

For instructions in crocheting the two toned gloves, No. X-236, send 10 cents in stamps or coin to the Needlework Bureau, Chicago Tribune, 220 Fifth Avenue, New York City.

Army for Control of Cancer Opens Annual Campaign

Last year 150,000 men, women, and children died of cancer in this country. One-third of them might have lived.

Mrs. George Hanly Nippert. [Bloom Photo.]

With a barrage of such facts the Women's Field Army of the American Society for the Control of Cancer tomorrow will open its third annual enlistment campaign in the war against this second greatest killer.

"Fight cancer with knowledge," is the slogan of the army's nation-wide drive. To arouse public interest to the fact that cancer, in its early stages, can be cured, and to add to the fund that supports the army's year around education program, are double objectives of the campaign.

Mrs. George Hanly Nippert, president of the 1st district, Illinois Federation of Women's Clubs, is state commander of the army for Illinois. Assisting her in the Chicago drive are five vice commanders, Mrs Walter H. Hermsdorf, Mrs. Clifton K. Timmons, Mrs. R. L. Everett, Mrs. Henery F. Patterson, and Mrs. Robert J. Sterling.

With the coöperation of other organizations, the woman's field army is spreading the knowledge of cancer danger signals, of the importance of complete annual physical examinations, and of the fact the cancer is curable in its early stages.

Gov. Henry Horner heads an advisory board for the Illinois campaign. Prominent physicians and civic leaders also are coöperating.

Methodist Women to Assemble at Several Meetings

"New Tools for Tomorrow's World" will be the theme of the post-Easter meeting to be held by the seventeen groups of the Methodist Women's association of the Rock River conference. On Friday the first meeting will be held jointly by the Northwest suburban, McHenry county, Lake county and North Shore groups at the Grace Community church in Lake Bluff. These meetings will culminate in the association's spring meeting May 31 at Berwyn. Mrs. James Oldshue of Chicago, president of the association, will be a delegate from the conference to the uniting conference of the three branches of Methodism opening April 25 at Kansas City, Mo. Mrs. Oldshue recently was elected delegate-at-large by the board of bishops. Mrs. W. H. Dangel of Oak Park is to be the association's only other representative at this meeting.

Leading British Aviatrix Makes First Glider Flight

Great Britain's first airwoman, Mrs. Gertrude Foggitt, 64, recently had a new thrill by making her first glider flight. She is declared to be the bravest woman in the world. Mrs. Foggitt was the first woman in the world to go up in an airship, the first to take a seaplane flight, and the first to fly to Paris in a commercial plane. As a girl she took part in many daring balloon ascensions before airplanes were invented.

Family Rearing to Be Topic of Lecture Series

Prospective mothers are to be helped in the rearing of their families through a series of lectures beginning Tuesday under the auspices of the Chicago Assocation for Child Study and Parent Education. Lectures will be given each Tuesday afternoon through May 16 at the association's headquarters, 220 South State street. Dr. Irving S. Cutter, dean of the Northwestern university medical school, and health editor of THE TRIBUNE, assisted in planning the course.

The first steps in the building of a new family will be discussed by Dr. Irene Josselyn, psychiatrist, in a lecture on "The Adventure of Pregnancy" at 2 o'clock Tuesday. The mental hygiene of pregnancy, facts versus superstition about the mother and child, and husband-wife relationships will be topics considered.

Physical care of mother and child, and budgeting of the mother's time and strength, will be discussed by Miss Mabel Finney, director of obstetrical nursing at Passavant Memorial hospital, in a talk, "Ways and Means of the Early Weeks," on April 18.

The following Tuesday Dr. L. Martin Hardy, director of the pediatrics dispensary of Northwestern medical school, will show how to manage a baby's routine without being harassed by the "bogey" of schedules.

Other speakers and their subjects will be Dr. Gustave F. Weinfeld, associate in pediatrics and juvenile behavior at the University of Illinois, "How Does Your Baby Grow?" on May 2; Mrs. Evelyn Millis Duvall, executive director of the Chicago association, "Are Babies Happy? Do We Help or Hinder?" on May 9; Dr. Irene Tufts Mead, psychiatrist, "The New Constellation," dealing with the family's adjustment to the new member, on May 16.

Council to Fete Motion Pictures' 50th Anniversary

In April, 1889, an English inventor named Stern patented a chrono-photographic apparatus that projected a primitive type of moving pictures. The same year George Eastman perfected his invention of celluloid film, and made it possible for Thomas A. Edison to complete his "kinetoscope" for producing moving pictures.

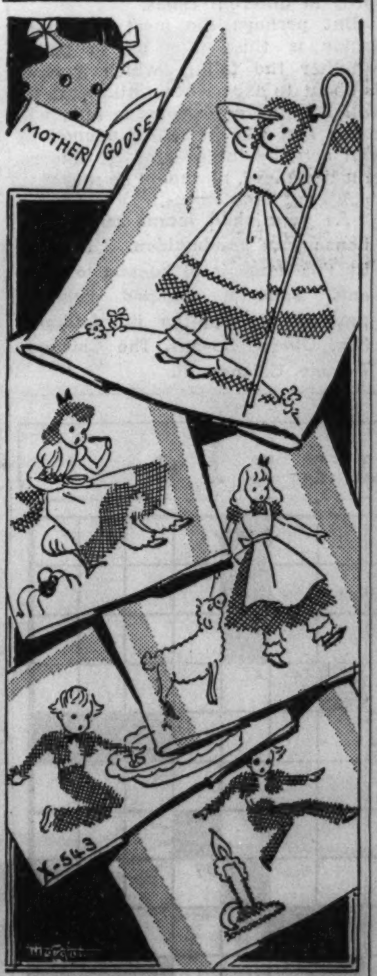
The fiftieth anniversary of motion pictures will be celebrated by the Better Films Council of Chicagoland at its annual spring luncheon Friday at the Electric club in the Chicago City Opera building.

Wilbur Crane, who directed the Warner Brothers 1938 Academy award winning picture, "Declaration of Independence," will be the principal speaker.

George Buehr of the Art institute lecture staf will speak on "The Cinema Is Art," and Thomas Gorman of the RKO film company will discuss "The Producer Announces." Miss Margarete Moore of the Chicago Lighting institute will demonstrate "Architectural Lighting in the Home."

Mrs. Richard M. McClure heads the council, which works to stimulate interest in the best and most artistic motion pictures.

Mother Goose's Children Appear in Cross-Stitch



By Nancy Cabot.

Here are five colorful cross-stitch figures depicting the activities of the famous Mother Goose children. This group may be arranged on a plain background and used as a wall hanging for the nursery, or it may be worked individually and placed at random around the walls of the room. They are excellent figures by which to teach the youngsters the story of each person indicated.

For the hot iron transfer pattern of the Mother Goose children, No. X-543, send 10 cents in stamps or coin to the Needlework Bureau, Chicago Tribune, 220 Fifth Avenue, New York City.

Clotilde Children's Patterns

We think your growing-ups will like this ensemble. Its crisply tailored lines, so practical and easy to keep ship-shape, will appeal to you mothers, too. All types of fabrics are suitable, with heavy crêpes and light weight woolen leading.

The larger figure suggests a version in two colors. The brief collarless bolero and the buttoned-on skirt are of one color, the shirtwaist blouse of another. The original costume made from this pattern employs navy crêpe for the two pieces, with pale blue sheer cotton for the blouse. Lace, braid, or any other type of edging may be used on the collar and down the front closing.

If you like, use the pattern for a one piece dress, as illustrated at the right. This style is particularly suited to the very little girls. Give the simple dress a rounded shirtwaist collar, puffed and banded sleeves, and a matching sash ending in streamers. Printed silks and cottons are perfect for this model.

Style No. 2077 is designed for sizes 6, 8, 10, 12, and 14 years. Size 8 requires 1¾ yards of 39 inch material for the short sleeved bolero and the skirt. For the blouse, 1⅛ yards of 35 inch fabric are required.

Address orders for Clotilde Children's fashions to Chicago Tribune, P. O. Box 537, Grand Central Station, NEW YORK CITY, inclosing 10 cents in stamps or coin (coin preferred—wrap it carefully) for each pattern ordered. IMPORTANT! Be certain to state clearly the number of the pattern and the size desired, and write your name and address plainly.

Three Factors Help the Child to Learn Life

By Gladys Huntington Bevans.

[Copyright: 1939: By The Chicago Tribune-N. Y. News Syndicate, Inc.]

In our passionate desire to save our children mistakes, and the unhappiness that frequently results from them, we are in danger of trying to live their lives for them. We who are parents frequently are told that experience is the best teacher, that trial and error is a good system of learning. And it's quite true. We must let our children live their own lives, make their own mistakes, learn from their own experiences.

But, like all glittering generalities, the glitter of these is likely to blind us unless we have pretty good vision. And these, like all generalities, need to be taken with a grain of salt. [I hope you don't mind "mixed metaphors."] And, like all generalities, these two do not tell the whole story. The thought that experience is the best teacher, and that we learn through our mistakes, is worth some serious weighing. Let's think out loud, and together, as it were.

Is trial and error the only way to learn?

Is experience always the best teacher?

The answer to both is "No." Not only, and not always.

There are, to be sure, many things that are best learned by trial and error. The trial and error makes the whole performance stick. Mistakes can be, and often are, stepping stones.

Experience, too, is a wonderful teacher. The lessons learned in that way usually make a great impression. But notice that when we say "experience is the best teacher" we far too often are thinking of unfortunate or unhappy experiences. When we use the other expression the same thing is implied, we say "trial and error," not "trial and triumph" or "trial and success."

The thing I feel strongly is that not all errors or mistakes are beneficial, that not all unhappy experiences teach wisely. A child can learn as much through many successes. He can learn as well through happy experiences. And he can learn many other things through the wise, friendly guidance of a mature person [father, mother, relative, or friend] quite as well as in the ways so often recommended, of making his own mistakes. "A burnt child dreads the fire." Yes, true. But he can learn the purpose and power of fire, its benefits as well as its destructiveness, without getting really hurt and without dreading it, too.

So we see that there's a great deal to be said on the subject that isn't contained in the two expressions: Learn through trial and error and experience is the best teacher.

That a child learns enormously by trial and error, by experience, is, of course, true. Children, unhampered by fearful adults, are venturesome. Some more than others, to be sure. But normally they are constantly trying new things, experimenting.

The very little boy loves jumping down steps one at a time. He tries three and blop—he goes over and probably skins his knees and his chin. And he won't try three steps again for some time.

The small girl gets ambitious with her blocks and builds up—up—up. The last block brings all her work down with a crash and, perhaps, brings tears, too. But she soon learns just how high her tower can be without toppling.

Most of the mistakes that our children make are the result of their experimenting. When we can see that we usually are willing to stand aside.

But one angle on dealing well with this kind of learning consists in our recognizing that some experimenting holds within it elements of real danger.

And there is where our judgment plays its part.

Who, for instance, will let a small child experiment with plugging in and out an electric iron?

Who is willing to let a young driver learn, through a serious accident, that excessive speed constitutes dangerous driving? We teach him by other methods, among them, perhaps, by such hair-raising but effective examples as those described in "Sudden Death."

Must all learning come through mistakes?

Not at all. For success, doing the right thing at the right moment, has quite as much to do with learning as failure has. The advice, "to celebrate a child's successes and minimize his failures," is good advice.

To the question then, shall we let a child learn through his mistakes, the answer is: Yes, sometimes, and through some kind of mistakes. But not at all times and through all kinds of mistakes. A great deal depends upon the situation, the act itself, and, of course, the individual child.

Because we know, or, should, that some children can stand more mistakes, more mishaps, more discouragements, more obstacles than others. We don't always know why. Native qualities or early experiences, or both, may account for the variation.

Another thing we should observe is that even the individual child will vary from time to time, or from one long phase to another. The state of a child's mind, and his body, too, may make him cope with mistakes differently at different times.

But perhaps the most important factor is this: For us to gauge whether the failure which a child is about to experience while learning will frighten or discourage him, will make him lose in self-confidence, or will actually injure him. If this result lies ahead, he should be spared it.

As your child learns make patience your handmaiden, a booklet by this name is of interest to parents. Send a stamped, self-addressed envelope for it. Address Mrs. Gladys Bevans, The Chicago Tribune, Chicago, Ill.

Contract According to Culbertson

Safety Should Be First Thought of the Bidder

By Ely Culbertson.

[Copyright: 1939: By Ely Culbertson.]

[This is the second of a series of articles on the intermediate zone bidder.]

It may be accepted as a safe hypothesis that when a partnership can find some fair sort of trump fit, the same number of honor tricks will produce one trick more at a trump than at a no trump contract.

This being so, it follows that a final contract of two in a suit is no more of an undertaking than a contract of one no trump. Further, it follows that any bid of two no trump is equivalent to a bid of three in a suit, showing about the same amount of strength because the two contracts are equally difficult to fulfill.

Remember this relation of no trump to trump contracts. It has a powerful bearing on the entire philosophy of bidding.

To distinguish between weak bids and strong bids is perhaps the most difficult thing in bidding for the average player. This should not be so. Self-preservation is at the back of every bridge player's mind. When he bids, the safety factor is, or should be, the first thing he thinks about.

Remember this: Every time you bid you take a chance. Maybe you will be doubled and set. If you take this chance without some hope of commensurate gain, you are foolish.

To illustrate this rude statement, suppose your partner, at some stage of the auction, makes a bid of two no trump. And suppose he realizes that if things go wrong, he can go down about 500 points. Is he taking a 500 point risk to make a score of 70 points at two no trump? Of course not! He takes the chance of losing 500 points because he thinks that there is hope of reaching and making game, whereby he will make 500 points. What inference can you then draw when your partner bids two no trump? Why, that he has strength of such extent that he has reason to believe a game is possible. Two no trump, then, must be a strong bid. Even if you did not know, from reading the requirements, how much strength the bid shows, you could figure it out by pure logic.

The risk one accepts in bidding is greater on some hands than on others, regardless of honor trick content, because there are typical safe hands and typical unsafe hands.

A hand is safe when, whether or not the contract is made, it cannot be badly beaten by even a terrible break. A hand is unsafe when, if things go unexpectedly wrong, the contract can be defeated by four or five tricks.

It is seldom the high cards, aces and kings, in the hand which cause it to be safe or unsafe. High cards are only temporary barriers to the running of some long suit in the opponents' hands. Generally speaking, it is the combination of many trumps plus unbalanced distribution which forms a safe hand. Take the following hand for example:

West	East
♠ K Q 8 6 3 2	♠ J 9 7 5 4
♥ 6 5 2	♥ 10
♦ 4 3 2	♦ 9 8 7 5
♣ 7	♣ J 8 3

This is a weak hand which must lose six tricks. At a four spade contract it will go down three. But it is a safe hand because, whatever happens, it cannot go down more than three. Add a couple of aces, say in hearts and clubs. Now the hand will go down only one at four spades. It probably cannot stop an opposing game in hearts, but it offers a cheap sacrifice with absolute safety. Now add the king of diamonds. There is a chance to make four spades. It may not be made, of course, but there is a chance. And if the chance fails, the risk is still negligible because the hand can go down only one. It is a typical safe hand.

An unsafe hand is typified by its short trumps or balanced distribution, or both. For example:

West	East
♠ K Q 7 5	♠ 9 8 6 3
♥ Q	♥ 7 6 3 2
♦ A Q 4	♦ 8 3
♣ K J 9 7 4	♣ A 10 3

At a four spade contract this hand seems to have an excellent chance for game, good enough to warant the bid. But it is still an unsafe hand. Suppose the trumps break badly, with ♠ A J 10 x in North's hand. Suppose North has the king of diamonds, and West guesses badly on the location of the queen of clubs. This hand may go down four or five tricks doubled at four spades. It probably will not, but anything may happen.

With very few exceptions, no trump hands may all be classified in the unsafe group. An unusually long suit, easily establishable, in an opponent's hand, together with an ace or other sure entry card in a suit declarer must try to set up, can account for an impressive total of undertricks even when declarer's side has six honor tricks or more.

About the only no trump hand which falls into the safe group, barring times when the partners have a near monopoly on the high cards, is one which includes a long, positively solid suit and quick, sure stoppers in the other suits.

It is the unsafe character of no trump bids, and the general unsafeness of suit contracts with ill-fitting trump suits, which dictate the meanings of sign-off and weakness showing bids. The rush to get into a fairly safe trump suit also accounts for the obligation to show preference, as strong an obligation on a bridge player as the forced response to an opening two bid.

A sound bidder must understand preference bids and what they imply. He must equally recognize the necessity for them. Above all, he must realize that merely giving a preference places no responsibility on the responder.

When one partner has bid two suits, the other partner must show which one he prefers, unless, of course, conditions and the strength of his hand warant his bidding another suit, or no trump, in order to reach a contract he can consider superior to either of his partner's suits. His choice will be made as follows:

1. With equal length in each of partner's suits [as 3 and 3] he should usually prefer the first bid suit, even though the second is stronger in high cards.

2. With greater length in one suit, he should prefer that suit, even though he has higher cards in the other. [He will prefer the suit in which he holds 6 5 4 to the suit in which he holds A Q.]

However, an exception is made when one of partner's suits is obviously only four cards in length.

Preference is sometimes shown by bidding, and sometimes by passing, following these rules:

If you prefer partner's second bid suit, and your hand is so weak that a pass is indicated, you show preference by passing; but

If you prefer partner's first bid suit, even though your hand's weakness warants passing, you do not pass. You return to partner's first bid suit, at the lowest possible level. This is equivalent to passing.

[This subject will be continued next Sunday.]

An article by Mr. Culbertson appears in the feature section of The Tribune each weekday.

Bridge Problem

♠ K 5
♥ A J 10 8
♦ A Q 9 5
♣ 10 8 3

WEST	EAST
♠ A 7 3	♠ J 10 8 6 4 2
♥ K 9 6 4 2	♥ 7
♦ K J 6	♦ 10 4 3
♣ Q 5	♣ A 9 6

SOUTH
♠ Q 9
♥ Q 5 3
♣ K J 7 4 2

This is one of the most difficult thirteen card double dummy problems ever devised. It is an old one but has not been publicized extensively. South's contract is three no trump, against which West leads the heart four. Nine tricks can be made against any defense, but I warn you, the precise method of play required is one that will bother you to the point of desperation. There is a defense against every order of play except the one given in the answer below.

Answer: Declarer's play must go precisely in the following order: Dummy plays heart eight. South overtakes with queen and returns heart, winning with dummy's ten. Now [not later] the diamond ace must be cashed. West can drop the diamond king, but it will do him no good. The play of the defenders, as given, is as good as can be devised. West follows with the diamond jack. North now leads the club three, East ducks and South wins with the king. South leads diamond toward dummy. West wins, cashes club queen, and exits with the diamond six, dummy winning with queen. Dummy cashes diamond nine, West discarding a heart. Dummy leads club ten. East wins and West must discard a spade to keep the heart king guarded. East returns spade jack. Declarer plays low. If West plays ace, dummy unblocks the king and declarer can win a spade return with his queen. If West lets East's jack ride, dummy's king wins and West is thrown on lead with the spade which forces him to return a heart and dummy makes two more heart tricks.

Cooking Editor Offers Three Dainty Cakes

By Mary Meade.

[Copyright: 1939: By The Chicago Tribune.]

Three lovely cakes—a gold one in three lemon filled tiers, a Sunshine cake made by an unusual method, and a chocolate sponge with butterscotch filling. These are my Easter gift to readers of this column.

All of these cakes require more eggs than do most recipes. This is excellent, because many eggs make good cakes. Eggs aren't expensive and most homes will be well supplied over Easter. Try one of the cakes tomorrow, and save the other recipes for later cake baking sprees.

BUTTERCUP PARTY CAKE.
[3 10-inch layers.]

4 cups sifted cake flour
4 teaspoons baking powder
1 cup butter, margarine, or vegetable shortening
2 cups sifted sugar
6 egg yolks
1½ cups milk
1 teaspoon lemon extract.

Sift flour once, measure, add baking powder, and sift together four times. Cream butter or other shortening until very soft, add sugar gradually, and cream together until very light. Add egg yolks which have been beaten until thick and very yellow. Alternately add flour and milk, a little at a time. Beat after each addition until smooth. Add lemon extract. Beat well. Bake in three greased, wax paper lined 10 inch layer pans at 350 degrees for 30 minutes, or until done. Cool layers on cake rack for 5 minutes and turn out to finish cooling. Put layers together with lemon filling and cover top of cake with a sprinkling of confectioners' sugar. Or frost with a confectioners' sugar icing flavored with lemon juice and a little grated lemon rind.

LEMON FILLING.

2 cups sugar
5 tablespoons flour
½ cup lemon juice
Grated rind of 2 lemons
2 eggs, slightly beaten
2 teaspoons butter

Combine sugar and flour. Add lemon juice, rind, and eggs. Cook over boiling water until thickened and smooth, stirring constantly; add butter.

SUNSHINE CAKE.
[Sirup method.]

1 cup minus 2 tablespoons sifted cake flour
½ teaspoon cream of tartar
¼ teaspoon salt
1¼ cups sugar
⅓ cup water
5 eggs, separated
1 teaspoon orange flavoring.

Sift flour before measuring. Add cream of tartar and salt, and sift together four times. Boil sugar and water to the soft ball or thread stage 238 degrees by the candy thermometer. Pour sirup in a fine stream over the egg whites, which have been beaten until stiff, and continue beating until sirup all has been added, and until the mixture becomes cool. Fold in egg yolks, which have been beaten until thick and lemony. Fold in flour mixture, a small amount at a time. Pour into ungreased tube pan and bake in a 325 degree oven for an hour or longer until done. Invert pan to cool cake, and do not disturb until completely cool, about an hour. Serve sprinkled with confectioners' sugar and accompanied by whipped cream. Or serve slices topped with ice cream and a fruit sauce.

This is a light, fluffy, golden cake which isn't at all hard to make if directions are followed carefully.

Chocolate sponge layers with butterscotch filling make an unusual and intriguing cake. Strictly speaking, this is a pseudo-sponge, for the recipe contains baking powder and doesn't depend entirely upon eggs for levening. For that reason, if you're a rank amateur at cakes, you may have more success with this recipe than you've had with the genuine sponge type.

CHOCOLATE BUTTERSCOTCH SPONGE CAKE.
[2 9-inch layers.]

½ cup sugar
4 squares unsweetened chocolate, cut in pieces
1 cup milk
1 teaspoon vanilla
1¼ cups sifted cake flour
2¼ teaspoons baking powder
½ teaspoon salt
1 cup sugar
2 tablespoons water
4 eggs, separated

Combine sugar, chocolate, and milk in the top of a double boiler, and cook until chocolate is melted and the mixture is smooth and thick. Stir constantly during cooking. Cover the pan and cool, stirring occasionally. Add vanilla.

Now sift flour, measure, add baking powder and salt and ½ cup of the sugar. Sift together three times. Add water to egg yolks and beat with rotary beater until thick and lemony. Add the other half cup of sugar gradually, beating until thick, about 5 minutes. Fold in flour, alternately with cooled chocolate mixture, in two parts each. Fold in egg whites which have been beaten until stiff. Turn into two lightly greased 9 inch layer pans and bake in a moderate oven, 350 degree, for 30 minutes or until done. Cool and put together with butterscotch filling. Top with a sprinkling of confectioners' sugar.

BUTTERSCOTCH FILLING.

⅓ cup brown sugar
3 tablespoons butter
¼ cup flour
1 cup milk
1 egg, well beaten
1 tablespoon cream
1 teaspoon vanilla
⅛ teaspoon salt

Put brown sugar and butter in the top compartment of the double boiler. Cook over low, direct heat until bubbly. Then cook and stir constantly for 3 minutes longer. Remove from heat and stir in flour rapidly. Add milk gradually and stir vigorously until smooth. Set the pan over boiling water and cook until thick and very smooth, about 8 minutes. Add a small amount of the mixture to the egg yolks, beating well. Then return to the double boiler and cook, stirring constantly for 2 minutes longer. Add cream, vanilla, and salt. Cool.

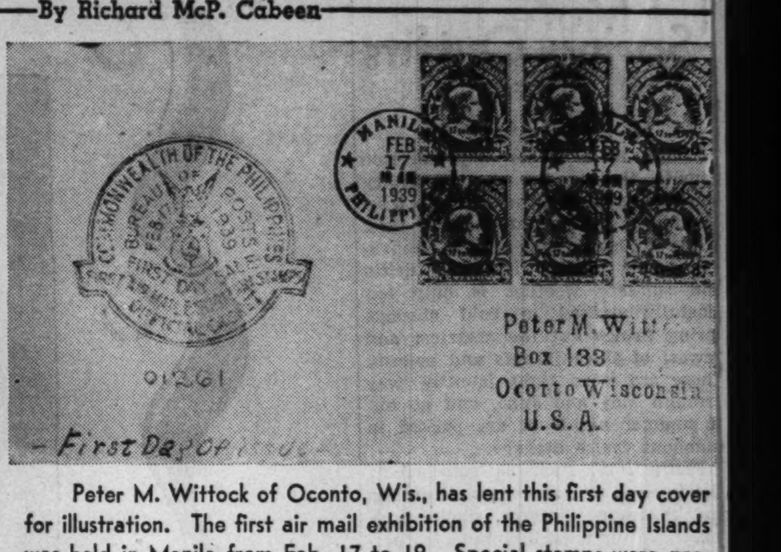
The Stamp Collector

By Richard McP. Cabeen

Mr. Cabeen will answer questions about stamps, except concerning values. Do not ask where stamps may be sold, as the Stamps and Coin advertising section adjoining contains offers to buy and sell. Inclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope for reply.



Peter M. Wittock of Oconto, Wis., has lent this first day cover for illustration. The first air mail exhibition of the Philippine Islands was held in Manila from Feb. 17 to 19. Special stamps were provided by surcharging an appropriate inscription and new value on obsolete issues.

Some one has defined a collection as an orderly arrangement of stamps in order to distinguish between a collection and an accumulation. The latter may be kept in envelopes or boxes or even carried loose in one's pocket, but a collection is not a collection until it has been mounted in an album, or upon sheets or cards which have the same effect as an album.

The first album which the beginner uses may be any book with blank or ruled pages, but it is recommended that those who cannot have a stamp catalog should select a bound album with printed spaces for the stamps and with stamp illustrations and maps. The stamp illustrations will be of great assistance in classifying some of those foreign stamps which show no identifying marks in words or letters which the beginner can understand.

Such an album will have pages assigned to the larger countries and partial pages to small states and colonies and stamps may be mounted on the proper pages as they are acquired without any attempt to arrange them according to issues or dates.

If the beginner learns the principles of neatness and makes a pleasing display of his stamps in the outlined spaces provided, and not a jumble with stamps at all angles, some with bits of paper attached, by the time this album is filled he will be ready to move his collection or at least the undamaged stamps to a new album. This may take the form of another printed album with spaces for all of the moderate priced stamps, or of a loose leaf album in which the collector must provide his own arrangement for the various issues.

Stamp Notes.

The American Olympic association will issue a steel engraved Olympic poster stamp to assist in raising funds to send the American Olympic team to Finland in 1940. This stamp will be printed in four colors, red, blue, purple, and green, and will be sold by the committee at $1 for sheets of forty. The Olympic committee may be addressed at 11 South La Salle street, Chicago, Ill.

The catalog of the April 21 sale of Philip H. Ward Jr. lists and illustrates many of the rarities in bureau printed United States stamps. The scarce items in the 1894 issue include such things as part-perforate vertical pairs of the 2, 5, and 6 cent values, imperforate horizontal pairs of the 3, 4, and 5 cent values, a block of four of the $5 value, and a single copy of the Chicago counterfeit. The 1895 issue includes the 6 and 8 cent values on revenue paper, and all values in imperforate condition. The 1910 issue is represented by a used copy of the very rare 3 cent Orangeburg coil. Other rare pieces in the sale include an imperforate block of sixteen of the 2 cent 1916 showing the 5 cent error, and a block of six with margin of type III., 3 cent 1918, offset printing, with stamps printed on a portion of the back of the block. Serious collectors may obtain the catalog of this sale from Mr. Ward at 1616 Walnut street, Philadelphia, Pa.

Frank Zaracki, 2763 Dupont street, Omaha, Neb., will give to interested readers an assortment of six different scarce poster stamps for return postage only.

A peculiar situation has arisen in the postal affairs of the Sandjak of Alexandretta. Although this is a French protectorate and is recognized as such internationally, the Turkish government claims it as a province and has issued stamps overprinted with the word "Hatay" for use in the district. Apparently some of these stamps have been used in international service without postage due charges being collected. Covers showing the stamps issued by the two different authorities would make an interesting page in a collection.

The Golden Gate exposition commemorative stamps were printed from plates numbered 22,289, 22,290, 22,291, and 22,292. Each plate contains 200 subjects. The first two plates were put to press on Jan. 31, the last on Feb. 2, 1939. William A. Roach was the designer of this stamp, Charles A. Brooks engraved the picture, and Edward M. Hall, the lettering.

The stamps for the New York world's fair are being printed from plates 22,293, 22,294, 22,295, and 22,296. These plates contain 200 subjects each and the first two were put to press on Feb. 10, while the last two followed on Feb. 17, 1939. C. Dale Badgeley was the designer of this stamp and Edward M. Weeks the engraver.

It is understood that several foreign countries will have their stamps on sale in the various pavilions at the New York world's fair. These include Albania, the French colonies, Finland, Iraq, Netherland colonies, Portugal, Rumania, Southern Rhodesia, and very likely Italy and Lithuania. Stamps to commemorate the fair will be issued by Brazil, Dominican Republic, Equador, Haiti, Iceland, Iraq, Sweden, Turkey, and perhaps Russia.

Infant's Shawl and Bunting Simple to Knit

By Jean Macdonald.

Knitting a baby bunting is a much simpler job than sending daddy hunting as he did in the nursery rhyme. The shawl and bunting are knitted in the garter stitch, which is ordinary knitting, and the bunting is a most attractive little garment for any layette. It is zipped up the front, and matches the one side of the shawl, which is knitted of blue and white and bound with blue satin ribbon.

For instructions in knitting the bunting and shawl, No. X-237, send 10 cents in stamps or coin to the Needlework Bureau, Chicago Tribune, 220 Fifth Avenue, New York City.

Women's Colleges Best for Girls, Educator Avers

Women's colleges give greater freedom of expression and wider opportunity for initiative and creative effort than women can find in co-educational institutions, according to Dr. Paul Swain Havens, president of Wilson college, in one of a series of papers issued by Wilson college dealing with the status of the small liberal arts college for women.

In colleges for women no student ever takes second place because of her sex alone, stated Dr. Havens. The entire curriculum is designed for her, whereas, he believes, in most co-educational colleges the curriculum is planned primarily for men.

Easter Values

By Eleanor Jewett.

Crocus and tulip and lily fair,
Blossom of peach and plum and pear—
Eggs and a bunny who hid them there!
Gardens with tender green growing things,

Churches with bells that some one rings—

Eggs to find that a bunny brings!
Easter morning and Easter parade,
New hat and a dress that mother made—

Chocolate eggs that a bunny laid!
You see no matter of what I write,
Of dress or church or flowers bright—
We love best the EGGS brought in the night!

CLOTHES MAKES THE WOMAN—beautiful!

There's no question about the modern standard of beauty being highly tuned to the modern standard of smart dress. But we may have thought of clothes supplying merely a surface attractiveness. According to Nina B. Price, American designer, the right clothes worn in the right way actually can improve a woman's body as well as help her develop a magnetic personality.

"One of the most essential ingredients of beauty is poise, and poise is largely the consciousness of being well dressed," Mrs. Price explains. "Show me a truly smart woman and I'll show you an attractive, magnetic one!

"We've all known women with perfect features and well made bodies who fell far short of beauty or even average attractiveness. Despite their structural soundness they were lacking in personality, in those intangible qualities we call charm, self-confidence, and appeal, for lack of better names.

"If you've given such women a more than cursory glance [and the chances are you haven't] you've seen that they were dressed in badly cut, ill-fitting garments that only added to their general air of dowdiness and awkwardness.

"On the other hand, we've seen women with imperfect features, women with actual figure defects, enter a room and dominate it. Such women radiate charm, self-confidence, and assurance, and their clothes tell exactly that story about them.

"Because their clothes are right for both their bodies and their personalities, they can forget them and concentrate on being interested in the people around them. And that is the secret of charm."

For clothes to be exactly right, they must fulfill four requirements, Mrs. Price insists. They must fit first the body, second the personality, third the occasion, and fourth the life the wearer leads.

Fitting the body is more than a matter of measurements and correct tailoring, the designer continues.

"Even the most meticulously tailored frock or suit will look all wrong if it is not designed for the type of body and personality of the woman who wears it.

"The tall, slim, rather angular body needs an entirely different type of costume than the one created for the short, stocky figure. And even if it fits to perfection, if the shoulders are smooth, the sleeves perfect, the skirt exactly right, the frock designed for the first girl will look absurd if made and fitted in the size of the second stocky one.

"Fitting the personality is something else again.

"You'll find some tall girls athletic, some the leisurely romantic type. Certainly because a suit would fit both bodies is no sign that it would look well on both girls.

"The same is true of every figure. Some small fragile girls are of the pert, boyish type while others fairly reek clinging femininity.

"And, of course, color plays a very important rôle in determining the design of the garment."

Appropriateness is third on Mrs. Price's list of "musts." For she feels that one of the most general faults women make is in over-dressing for occasions.

"Always remember that it's better to be under-dressed than over-dressed!

"A casual dinner frock can look wellbred at a formal function, but a bare, elaborate formal gown always will be self-conscious at a simple dinner where the men are wearing black ties.

"Knitted frocks can lunch in town with perfect poise, but a draped and sinuous afternoon frock will look awkward on a country club veranda.

"In other words, if your clothes are right for you, you can play safe by wearing your simplest things when in doubt and you'll always look well and tastefully dressed.

Another mistake to be avoided is that of buying promiscuously without regard for the life one leads or for the other garments already in your wardrobe.

Mrs. Price is a great believer in the related wardrobe and feels that every purchase should be made with the entire wardrobe in mind.

"At the beginning of each season a woman should sit down and plan her wardrobe carefully. She should, first of all, consider the general pattern of her life, whether she's going to need town or country clothes, whether she's going to business every day or is making her home her business.

"Then, once she's decided just how many daytime frocks she'll need, how many sports dresses, how many suits and dinner frocks, and evening gowns, she should determine the basic color she likes for the coming season.

"From then on, every purchase she makes should be according to plan, the plan of her life and of her color, so that all accessories will be interchangeable, all dresses look well with the same coat, all hats be adaptable to several costumes."

Fundamentally, the business woman's wardrobe should include a good coat, of course, plus a number of inexpensive but well fitted daytime frocks, a dinner gown or two, and several formal evening gowns.

The suburban clubwoman needs fewer daytime frocks but more dinner and evening gowns, and she'll find use for several hostess gowns besides.

Then, beside the importance of clothes in building personality, Mrs. Price has found that the right clothes can actually help correct figure faults.

"A trim, well tailored suit and square, military shoulders, is almost certain to have a good effect on a girl inclined to slouch.

"Design a gown that fits snugly through the midriff, hips, and abdomen for the girl who fails to hold her abdomen in, and watch her hold herself erect!

"In fact, clothes can be designed to hide figure defects while, at the same time, aiding in eliminating them, which is certainly a way to make clothes a real beauty asset!"

Miss Donnelly's authoritative articles, counseling women in matters of beauty and charm, appear every day in the feature pages of The Chicago Tribune.

CLOTHES MAKE THE WOMAN—BEAUTIFUL!

Below: Wear a frock that fits snugly through the midriff and abdomen, and you will hold yourself erect, as does Jacqueline Wells.

At left: Poise is largely the consciousness of being well dressed, Harriet Hilliard agrees. She is one of the loveliest stars of screen and radio, and knows that more physical beauty is as nothing if clothes are not worn with poise and do not suit the personality. Beautiful women are self-confident.

Above right: Only if you have the shoulders for them, as Nan Grey has, should you wear strapless gowns. There are four requirements for clothes: They must fit the body, suit the personality, suit the occasion, and fit the life the wearer leads.

A FRIEND IN NEED

If you are in need, perhaps I can help you. If you have household articles or clothing you no longer use, please let me place them with needy families. Address correspondence to Sally Joy Brown, The Chicago Tribune, Chicago. Activities of this department are sponsored by the Chicago Tribune Charities, Inc.

By Sally Joy Brown.

As a prelude to moving day, many housewives now are sorting out and discarding or replacing household articles of all kinds, and we hope that any available surpluses will be placed with some of the numerous poor of the city who have need of them.

Mr. C., his wife, and their four children live in furnished rooms on the south side of the city. Their quarters are crowded and unhealthful, and all the youngsters have been ill this winter. One child of seven still is attending a clinic for treatment. The father earns a very small salary, and feels that unfurnished quarters would be more comfortable and less expensive than their present home. He has come to me with a request for furniture, including two full size beds, complete, a dresser, rugs, curtains, bedding, anything to help furnish a four room home.

On his salary and with their present expenses, it will be impossible for him to obtain any such items through his own efforts, and for the health of the youngsters alone it is imperative that he move. We will be glad to supply the name and address to any readers able to assist him with surplus usable articles.

Mrs. B., on the north side of the city, is in similar circumstances. She, her husband, and their small child are living at present in a two room apartment which has no running water. Eight other tenants must use the plumbing and kitchen facilities. If she could obtain a full sized bed, a dresser, and few chairs, and an ice box, she could find more sanitary quarters.

The R. family, on the west side of the city, has the same need. There are four children, all of whom have been ill during the winter. Their living room and dining room are unfurnished. Mr. R. had a small business for many years, and was self-supporting until recently, when he had to accept relief. Their budget is extremely small and permits barely enough for food and rent.

We have families in similar circumstances all over the city, crowded into small, unsanitary quarters, the majority of these families with small children. In many cases furniture was reclaimed or lost during eviction; in others it was sold, piece by piece, before the family finally touched bottom and applied for aid. Furnished quarters in the sections of the city and type of building which needy families can afford are generally unclean and unsatisfactory from all angles. Frequently surplus articles from the homes of two or three readers can set a family up completely in new quarters. It is, of course, necessary that the furniture donated be clean. As we've said before, shabbiness doesn't matter particularly. A bit of paint can fix that, but we must insist that items be in clean, usable condition.

Mrs. M. is much in need of a baby buggy for her youngest child. Their home is extremely crowded and, for the health of the baby, it is imperative that the child have a bed of his own. The family is on relief at present, and the father feels that his shabby clothing prevents his obtaining work. A suit, size 34, and shoes, size 8½, would help to improve his appearance.

● ● ●

If you have a sewing machine which you no longer use, or which has been replaced by a later model, we would be very glad to place it with some of the numerous persons who have requested them. There are many mothers of large families whose burden of keeping youngsters clothed would be lightened considerably by possession of a machine.

On the House

By Louise Bargelt

A well known manufacturer's insulation board for walls and ceilings is now being offered with the color already applied. A smooth, satin-like finish has been obtained by a new color process, and pastel shades of oyster white, ivory, green, and buff are available. Besides the charm of this surfacing, which can be had in plain, tile or plank effects, it has the added advantage of being washable. Neutral soap and a damp cloth will remove the marks of passing time.

It is now possible to obtain the effect over your mantel of mirror paneling, and yet the mirror is entirely portable and can be used elsewhere in the house if you wish. This is due to frameless, beveled mirrors now manufactured on wood backing. They come in different sizes, and hang flat on the wall in the manner of real paneling.

* *

If your wants exceed the amount you have to spend for that new home you are hoping for, or that older one you are planning to renovate, there are ways of putting color into the final plaster coat on your walls. In this way your walls will need no further decoration for a time. The same method can be employed on a ceiling, with definite results in saving accomplished.

Coat with Slim Lines May Be Part of an Ensemble

By Bettina Bedwell.

PARIS.—[Special.]—It isn't often that I have a coat model copied for one of our patterns. This design is so striking in its simplicity and smartness that I couldn't resist it. The original is the creation of one of the salons specializing in things with Today as the theme. This coat rejects all extravagant influences and adheres to true principles of chic. For that reason alone I think you will find it a hit for your wardrobe.

The original coat is of lightweight woolen in a henna shade. The printed silk dress that keeps it company is of white and henna. It's a smart idea to create a dress to go with the coat because, while you can wear both items separately, together they are a grand ensemble. I've designed the pattern so that you can make revers of the print for the coat. If you like, make the rever facings detachable, so that you can change them as you change your frock.

Black, navy, marine blue, the luscious browns and all the other latest shades in the spring color spectrum will be ideal for this coat. The most practical idea is to make the coat of woolen, because it affords warmth for chilly spring days, but if you plan a trip to a balmy climate, make the coat of silk.

Style No. 5289 is designed for sizes 12, 14, 16, 18, and 20, and 30, 32, 34, 36, 38, and 40 inches bust measurement.

Address orders to Chicago Tribune Paris Patterns, 119 West 19th Street, NEW YORK CITY, inclosing 15 cents in stamps or coin (coin preferred—wrap it carefully) for each pattern ordered. IMPORTANT! Be certain to state clearly the number of the pattern and the size desired, and write your name and address plainly.

Ideal Hostess Always Poised and Thoughtful

By Helen Bartlett.

The picture that etiquet authorities paint of the perfect hostess may make the goal seem well nigh unattainable. But isn't it true that perfection in any art is something which all of us try to achieve, but few, if any, reach? Attaining the exalted position of the perfect hostess does present obstacles, and that is why we find the species so rare. But the fact that there are admiration and distinction awaiting the women who approach some degree of success in the field is an incentive to acquire some of the charm, personality, and efficiency that make it necessary to qualify.

The ideal hostess is casual, kind, and considerate. She shows her cleverness first in the selection of her guests, persons whom she knows to be friendly, congenial, and compatible in tastes. She considers the inclinations of her guests and makes them comfortable without overdoing her hospitality. She makes their stay as pleasant as possible, planning entertainment that she knows they will enjoy, without crowding them and tiring them from rushing from one thing to another.

She plans her own household arrangements with such care and efficiency that they run along smoothly without any apparent anxiety or personal effort on the part of the hostess, so that her house and her own inclinations may be subordinated. Her attitude always is pleasant and calm. No matter what happens, she attempts to prevent any annoyances from disturbing the peace of mind and the comfort of her guests, and she keeps such subjects out of her conversation. To dwell on the small daughter's recent illness, or the fact that the cook left an hour before the guests arrived, or on the inefficiency of the new maid serves only to make the guests feel that their presence is adding to their hostess' worries and naturally makes them feel ill at ease.

The too ambitous or too anxious hostess is not the height of perfection, by any means. It is she who thinks her guests are not having a good time unless they are busy as beavers every minute. She can't realize that one might like to sit down quickly and read, or that one might prefer to sleep in the morning rather than get up at a very early hour to go riding. She is so worried that one will be bored if one is quiet for a split second, that she wears herself out, as well as everybody else, by fussing around, seeing this and that, making suggestions eternally, and giving her guests the idea that they would much rather be at home.

THE STORY TO DATE

● Joan Armstrong learns that Adelaide Noonan, with whom she'd attended secretarial school, has collapsed with tuberculosis just as she was about to start work as secretary to William Bowen, executive of an export firm. Dr. Deering, friend of Adelaide's father, has gotten the job for her and has now arranged to send her to his uncle's sanitarium in Arizona. Joan has longed to work, but agreed with her parents that she shouldn't deprive some needy girl of a job. She has refused to marry faithful Tommy Emerson, whom she doesn't love. Now Joan offers to hold down the job for Adelaide and send her the salary. With the aid of Bob Deering she wins the chance in spite of the misgivings of Bill Bowen, her employer. Joan moves into an apartment of her own. From Alice Daniels, Bowen's ex-secretary, who left his employment when she married, Joan learns that her employer is married and that his wife is in a sanitarium, insane except at intervals since the birth of her son. Her elder sister, Anita Hadley, takes care of Bill Bowen's child and household. At Christmas time Joan shops for little Bill Jr., as his aunt is ill, and dines with his father in the latter's den, where Joan has decorated a Christmas tree for her employer's son. The friendship between Joan and Bill Bowen becomes more personal. Tommy teases her about falling in love with her boss, and Joan begins to wonder. Yet she is happy in her work and the friendship of Bob Deering. When she tries to promote romance between the doctor and Adelaide, Bob shocks her by telling her that he loves not Adelaide but herself. Because she is rich, however, he does not ask her to marry him. Martha Larkin and Anita Hadley strike up a friendship that has the "defeat" of Joan for inspiration. Martha cultivates Anita and encourages the latter's jealousy of Joan. Joan accompanies Bill Bowen on a business trip to South America. The emotional attraction between them proves too strong. On their last night there Bill takes Joan into his arms, and she responds to his kiss. They admit their love for each other. Torn with conflicting emotions on her return, Joan agrees to go on working for him. Martha starts rumors of scandal. When Bill refuses to dismiss Joan, Anita Hadley leaves his home. Bill asks Joan to marry him. Joan fears his wife may recover, only to find her husband married to some one else. She asks Bob Deering's advice. He offers her a job with him. Then word comes that Adelaide has died. Bill takes a new specialist to see his wife. Anita kidnaps his son, promising to return him when Joan leaves. Joan sees Martha and promises her the job if she'll persuade Anita to return.

MARTHA said inadequately: "I'm so sorry——"

Joan said nothing. She knew Martha did not care; why should she? She was thinking of Adelaide and the battle she had fought, only to be defeated. As far as the lungs were concerned, every one concerned had had every reason to be assured of recovery. But another condition had developed.

She watched Martha putting on her hat and coat in silence. They went to the door together, and Martha looked at Joan, obviously embarrassed, her poise disturbed, quick color rising in her cheeks. She said finally:

"I know what you think, of course. But I swear to you, Joan, I didn't know anything about what happened today. I saw Anita Hadley day before yesterday, and she didn't say a word."

She did not tell Joan that she and Anita had talked over the situation at the office for the hundredth time. Or that Anita had said bitterly that she suspected herself of having been a fool — to dream that William Bowen would come to his senses.

And in the course of the past week Martha had learned and reported that Bowen was going out of town, taking a prominent specialist to see Ellen. And Anita had jumped to the inevitable conclusion. She said: "It's as I thought—he'll try to salve his conscience by a new medical opinion." She had looked at Martha with haggard, sunken eyes. "If he dares desert my poor, helpless sister," she said, "and marries that girl!" She added that it wouldn't be a marriage.

Joan, walking along the corridor with Martha, said tonelessly that she believed her. But the affair now lay in Martha's hands. Joan had done all she could.

She stopped at a pay booth downstairs to telephone and, waiting for her connection, watched through the glass door Martha's straight, slim back hurrying away from her.

When she had the Elsworth and Miss Williams on the wire:

"Miss Williams? This is Joan Armstrong. I have every reason to think that Miss Hadley and Billy will return—before very long. Before Mr. Bowen does, in fact. There was no way I could let him know, as he started for New York right after I talked to him from the apartment."

She listened to Miss Williams' exclamations of relief for a moment and then cut her short. "That's all right," she said. "But I think the best way to treat the matter will be to dismiss it. When they come you will be able to tell from Miss Hadley's attitude the best attitude to take yourself——"

Her voice broke suddenly. She added, "Give my love to Billy."

She took a cab back to her apartment, ate sparingly of the dinner Lily had provided, and afterward went to the telephone again and called Deering.

"Mind if I come to the office?" she asked.

He said quickly, "I was coming to you as soon as my hours are over, Joan."

"I'm too restless to wait," she told him.

"All right," he said, "come along."

Presently she called the garage where her car was kept and asked that it be brought around. She had used it very little since taking it out of storage and never drove it to the office. She left word with Lily that if any one called before she left she, Joan, would be home early. And when the car was announced she went out and drove to Bob's office.

It was a long, powerful car, and Joan handled it with ease. Driving, watching the heavy trafic and the lights, she tried not to think, but to concentrate on what she was doing. She'd like to get in the car, she reflected, and drive out of the city into the country, to take back roads and winding ways and drive until she was too tired to think.

There was one man waiting in the reception room. When Miss Deakin admitted her and looked at her with severe questioning Joan said pleasantly:

"I know the doctor is very busy——"

"There's just one patient," admitted Miss Deakin, "and one waiting."

"Well, if no one else comes in," said Joan, "I can go in after he does. But if other patients come I'll wait."

Miss Deakin smiled reluctantly. She had gradually unbent toward Joan. Now, she confessed to herself, she actually liked the girl—couldn't help it; despite her money and her crazy ideas she seemed a good youngster, sincere and winning. Miss Deakin disapproved of the new arrangement, of which she had been told. Dr. Deering didn't need a secretary any more than a cat needs two tails, she thought sourly, let alone a social register secretary. But she couldn't dislike Joan for that, either. There was something about her.

She said in her grudging way, which cloaked a dreadful vulnerability to all the ails and woes of mankind:

"You look tired, Miss Armstrong," and, taking her into the waiting room, plumped up the cushions in the biggest chair for her, under the best light, and endowed her with half a dozen magazines. "There," she said.

JOAN waited, and the man waited, too, an anxious man who sat on the edge of his chair with a dead pipe clamped between his teeth. She wondered about him, to keep herself from thinking of other things. He was thin and pale, with restless blue eyes. Had he come for help for himself, for a verdict which affected him solely, or for an entire family? His blue suit was shabby but well brushed, his shoes were scuffed but polished, his shirt was clean but frayed at the cuffs. White-collar man, keeping up appearances, worrying about rent and bills and food. Had a wife, perhaps, who was ill, or a child? Or was he alone, and in pain, and frightened?

Presently Miss Deakin came to beckon him and he rose and followed her. He walked, Joan saw, with a decided limp.

She waited half an hour, turning the pages she did not see, and trying to think but not succeeding. She kept looking at her watch. Had Anita and Billy returned? She thought of Bowen, driving steadily toward the city, the car rushing through the night, with Bowen sitting in that small moving space, alone with terror and bewilderment. Thinking of his child and of the child's mother. Not of her, she told herself miserably, never of her. And what had the doctor said, the Johns Hopkins man—had he held out—hope?

Hope for Ellen, or hope for herself?

The man who had waited with her walked out of Deering's office briskly. He was whistling, his hands were in his pockets. He did not seem as hampered by his limp. He had had hope prescribed for him in some form or other.

Miss Deakin did not return, but Deering came in. He came to the doorway and smiled at her. He looked, she saw instantly, very tired.

Joan rose and followed him into the office room. He shut the door and took her hands in his.

"Well, my dear?" he said.

To her utter confusion, she began to cry—she cried hard and hopelessly, with his arms around her and her head bowed on his shoulder. And he said nothing, letting her cry.

After a while:

"I'm so sorry," she whispered. Her eyes felt hot and swollen and she knew that she must look devastated, but she felt very much better.

"That's all right," said Deering. "Sit there." He turned away and presently came back. "And now drink this," he said.

Something sparkled and bubbled in a glass. She drank it obediently.

"I—I feel like Alice in Wonderland," she managed to say, "going around drinking things under direction. Will it make me smaller or bigger?"

He had a grave smile for that. And Joan added, womanlike, "I must look dreadful!"

"I've seen you look better," he agreed. "Now let's talk. You can repair all the damage later. Take your time. I don't expect any one else in, Miss Deakin has departed, and so far I've no calls."

She said, low:

"Tell me about Adelaide."

He told her all he knew and said that he had located Jim, her brother, who had been working steadily in the job Armstrong had secured for him and that he was already on his way west to make all the necessary arrangements. He added that if it were humanly possible he would go out and see Adelaide's mother himself, but he couldn't.

Joan said, as if to herself, "I can——"

Deering looked at her. Had she seen his eyes then—but she did not look up.

"You?" She did look up. She said softly: "Yes, I. Perhaps I could help. I feel so utterly useless again, Bob. Things have gone so dreadfully wrong."

"Hadn't you better tell me about it?" he asked her.

Sitting there, she told him about Martha and Anita Hadley, about Billy, and Anita's letter, about Bowen, rushing back to the city. She said after a time: "When I suggested putting the personal in the paper as Anita had said in the letter I—O, I don't know what I thought, Bob. But I didn't think he'd say yes. . . . It was selfish of me, of course; I was thinking of myself. He was thinking of the boy—as he should have—and I convinced myself that I would have hated him if he hadn't been willing to throw me overboard for his child—for that's what it amounted to."

"It's not so sure," said Deering evenly, his dark eyes thoughtful. "It was just a solution, you know. The immediate one. Can't you see that? He'd put the personal in the paper, promise anything his sister-in-law wished, get the child back—and then fight it out along other lines."

"You think that?" asked Joan slowly.

"It's a natural assumption."

She said:

"I'm not so sure." She looked at him very directly. "It made me understand my position a little better, Bob," she told him. "I'm a stop-gap. He's lonely, I was at hand. There's a good deal in propinquity. I think he's been deluding himself. For six years he's alternately hoped and despaired, and he'd got to a place where he couldn't hope any more.

"But if—if I'd told him, yes, divorce Ellen, and yes, I'd marry him—and afterward he'd had reason to hope again—don't you see how he would have loathed me, what a dreadful muddle it would have been? I was just a proxy, as I was on the job, and not a very good one at that. Now there isn't anything, not even a job. . . . I'm right back where I started."

"This job's still open," he said quietly.

She shook her head.

"I haven't any excuse now. That was for Adelaide's sake."

"You don't need an excuse," he said hotly. "You've a right to do with your life what you please. You're not depriving any one of anything. This particular job was created just for you—and it can still be for Adelaide's sake," he added.

"What do you mean?"

"You can look after her mother. Wouldn't you rather do it this way, work for it, put something of yourself in it, than simply write a check every month which represented money which you hadn't earned?"

"Of course," said Joan, her color bright again.

"All right, then," Deering said. He leaned over, took her hand. "Joan," he began. But the telephone shrilled; he released her hand and picked it up. She listened to him asking questions, and then to the inevitable "I'll be right along. . . . Yes, keep the ice packs. . . . Good-by."

"So that's that," he said ruefully.

She had risen, and so he rose and stood looking at her.

"Shall I prescribe for you?" he asked.

"I don't promise to fill the prescription," she warned him, smiling faintly.

"See Bowen as soon as you can. I can't prescribe what you'll do then, because I don't know. But after you've seen him, go out to Adelaide's mother. You will be able to help her and to assure her that everything possible was done for her girl. Then take a couple of weeks, or a month, or as long as you like, and give yourself the right kind of a vacation. Cram as much gayety as possible in it; see your friends, be with your father and mother.

"Then, after that, if you decide that you can't stick doing nothing, come back to me and we'll go to work. It may not be very exciting at first, and you may find it very dull. I don't know. But I'm taking the apartment next door and turning it into a laboratory of sorts, thanks to Aunt Mattie—and I can train you to help me. Think it over. But don't come to any decision too quickly, Joan."

"You're awfully good to me, Bob," she said, low.

"Nonsense!" he told her briskly. "And now get going. I've work to do."

HE LAUGHED at her, seized his bag, called the doctors' service to take his telephone messages while he was out, and went out of the house with her to her car.

"Nice little job," he murmured, looking at it.

"We might go on a picnic some day as soon as it's warmer," she suggested.

"I was afraid of that," he said, shaking his head. "You'll learn that doctors stand you up—picnic or no picnic. Mrs. Whoosit's liver or Old Man Whatsis' arthritis is apt to come between me and the finest hard-boiled egg in Manhattan. Good-by," he said, standing beside the car. "Let me know if you decide to go out to Mrs. Noonan. Jim is keeping in touch with me, you know."

He watched her as she drove away and then turned back to where his own shabby car was parked.

Joan returned to her apartment. No calls had come for her before Lily left. The telephone pad was there, white and blank; no large scrawl denoted a mesage. She looked at the clock. Surely Bill would be back in town by now.

She waited, dressed, for a long time. Finally she went to bed and lay restless, listening. Of course he would call her? He must know how she was feeling, how anxious and unsettled. But all night long the telephone remained silent, and finally she fell asleep, to wake dazzled by sunlight and startled by the realization that this morning, of all mornings, she would be late at the office.

She hurried with her dressing and her coffee, and when she reached the building was conscious of the most curious reluctance and fear. She did not want to step in the elevator, she did not want to get off at her floor, to speak cheerfully to the receptionist, to make a little joke about oversleeping and then enter her office.

Bowen was there before her. His door was closed. As Joan came in the anteroom and busied herself putting her things away, her buzzer spoke. It had an angry sound, as if he had rung it before.

She went in, nerving herself, her heart beating quickly, with her notebook in her hand.

"I'm sorry to be late," she began.

"That's all right." He was at his desk, looking at her impatiently. "I was a little worried. Close the door, will you, Joan? And sit down here."

Docilely she sat down and waited. He said at once:

"When I reached home last night I found Anita there and Billy sound asleep in bed."

She said inadequately, "I'm so glad."

"It appears," he said, "that my sister-in-law's repented—she admitted it was a crazy thing to do. But she's missed the boy very much. I didn't realize how much until I saw her." He was frowning, glancing away, not seeing the shadows under Joan's eyes, the unusual pallor which she had tried to disguise. "A tempest in a teapot," he added.

"I'm sorry," she said. "It was all my fault. I shouldn't have worried you. But Miss Williams seemed so alarmed. And after I'd read the note—I thought—but if we'd waited," she said mendaciously, "they would have come back and you would have been none the wiser."

"You were quite right," he said pleasantly. "I don't blame you in the least. But it was pretty bad, the drive home, not knowing what that"—he hesitated over a word and substituted "neurotic woman would do next."

He fumbled with some papers on his desk. Then he said, not looking at her, "I thought it best to tell Anita that you had resigned."

"Yes, of course," said Joan steadily. She waited a moment, and then, as he did not speak, she said: "I have been meaning to suggest to you—the proper person for my position is Martha Larkin. She hasn't half enough to do, with Mr. Allen away so much. And she's really most competent. I think she'll suit you very well. Then you won't have to get an outsider. She knows the work here as well as any one except Miss Harrington, and she'd be available at once."

"That's a very good idea," he said. "I'll see her today." Then for the first time he looked at her directly. "It's a fine kettle of fish," he said, sighing.

"Please don't feel that way——"

"I'll miss you—so much——"

He had said nothing about seeing her after she left. Her heart tightened. She said evenly: "It's best this way. I'm glad you've come to realize it, Bill."

"It's just Anita," he said, shrugging. "It will all blow over. But I thought for the time being——"

"I haven't any excuse to work here any longer," she told him, one hand tight in the other. "Adelaide Noonan died in the sanitarium yesterday."

"Adelaide?" For a moment he looked utterly blank, having forgotten. Then his face cleared. "O," he said. "Poor kid!"

"Yes. We all thought and she believed that she was getting better," said Joan.

"Then you'll not take the position Deering offered you."

"I may," said Joan. "But not for a while. There are some things I want to do first."

● ● ●

HE SAID, "Well," uneasily, and then: "Billy, when I saw him this morning, sent you his love. He wants to see you." He paused, added haltingly: "I said you were away. I thought, after this blows over——"

"I'd love to see him," she said.

But why—why? Was it the threatened loss of the boy, the anxiety, was it Anita? But he hadn't been afraid of Anita before, and Billy, after all, had been perfectly safe. What was it?

He had some letters in his hand, and now he gave them to her. He said, looking at his desk clock: "I think that appointment with McFarland is for eleven, isn't it? You can answer these; they are routine. I thought after McFarland goes I could have a little talk with Miss Larkin." He added, as if thinking aloud: "I got her the job here, feel responsible for her in a way. She's always seemed a very clever girl."

"Very clever," said Joan, but the irony was lost on him.

He rose as she did and stood looking at her. Suddenly his face changed and he said huskily, "It's been pretty much of a muddle, hasn't it?"

She said nothing. There was nothing to say. Bowen walked across the room and stood at the windows with his back to her and his hands in his pockets. He said rapidly: "I haven't any right to ask you to forgive me. . . . I was desperately lonely, Joan. And you are very lovely . . . and I'd ceased to hope."

So that was it. She asked as steadily as she could:

"What did Dr. Dempster say?"

He answered without turning, and selfishly she was glad that she could not see his face. But it was all in his voice, youth again and laughter and the hope of happiness.

"He said that we could be almost sure—you see," and now he wheeled about and she did see his face, "this time she knew me again. She was—like herself. These periods are coming more often, and close. She asked when she might come home. And the sanitarium heads agreed with Dr. Dempster that she could come home within the next few weeks. There would be a nurse with her, of course; she would have to have care and constant watching. But I am assured that it will be only a matter of time——"

Joan drew a long, tremulous breath. When the gods arrive the half-gods go, she thought. She said, "I'm so happy for you, Bill."

Now he came toward her and took her hands. The letters fluttred to the floor. He said: "I believe you are. . . . You've been—very wonderful to me, Joan. But you knew better than I did, you funny little thing; you were wiser than I."

Well, she'd tried to be, and he had saved her face. She couldn't tell him now, she would never tell him, that she had doubted her own wisdom.

He released her hands.

Joan stooped to pick up the papers and made her way toward the door, blind with tears. He did not notice, she thought, that she had gone. She sat down at her desk and dried her eyes. Mr. McFarland would be along presently, and she must find Martha and tell her that Bowen would see her before noon. There was no reason why this should not be her last day at the office. It was the end of the week. Next week Martha could have her job.

She sat staring at the letters she must answer and thinking how strange was the human heart, how unexpectedly faithful—even during its brief infidelities it so often remained loyal.

THE long day drew to a close. Martha had stopped by her desk after leaving Bowen's office. Her face was radiant with triumph. But she had the grace to pause a moment and say, "It's all right—thanks to you."

Joan looked at her coolly. She could only have the utmost hostility toward her. There was nothing in Martha to cause her to change her early impressions, and she despised her for her insincerity. But Martha might be, in a sense, hoist by her own petar. If in her case it was the man and not the job—she stood no chance. But Joan was willing to believe that to Martha the job came before the man.

She said: "I didn't suggest you voluntarily or from friendliness, Martha. There's no use pretending, is there? My hand was forced. But I do ask you to remember that we made a bargain. Please keep it. I think you will, for your own sake, at any rate."

Martha's chin went up in the air. She said, "Thanks, I know my way around."

So that was that, too.

Going into Bowen's office unsummoned just before closing time, Joan said quietly:

"Miss Larkin has told me that you think she will be satisfactory, Bill."

"She seems very competent," he said.

"She is. And there's no reason why she shouldn't start next week. Isn't that the understanding? After all," she said, trying to smile, "when I spoke of my resignation I promised to stay on only for a week or two at the most. And the time's up."

Bowen came over and took her by the shoulders. He murmured, "You've a lot for which you must forgive me, Joan."

"There's nothing to forgive," she said. "We were both confused. You confused a shadow with the substance, and I confused a man with a job. So—shall we be friends?"

She held out her hand, and his dropped from her shoulder. He took her hand in a warm clasp and held it. He said presently: "This can't be good-by. What am I to tell Billy?"

"I'll come and see him now and again. Maybe Miss Hadley won't mind—now. And it is good-by," she said steadily, "because it's so much better that way." She added in her heart, After all, what have we to say to one another now?

Since this morning every one in the office knew that Joan was leaving. She made her rounds and her farewells. She would not lose track of Miss Harrington; they liked one another too well. And there were one or two others with whom she would keep in contact.

She thought as she left Miss Harrington's office, I must ring up Alice Daniels. She hadn't seen Alice for some time, nor was Alice as interested in office news and gossip as she once had been. She had other things to think about—as she had told Joan the last time they had met. "Isn't it absurd?" she said. "Much as I wanted a baby, I'm still amazed to be looking forward to one and wishing time would hurry. And I've been married only six months!"

In the corridor Joan ran almost directly into Remsen Kirk, who steadied her with a hand on her arm. "Hey!" he said mildly.

"I do beg your pardon," said Joan, flushing. "I was thinking of something else and didn't look where I was going."

"No harm done. I hope I didn't knock you out. By the way, I hear you're leaving us," he said. "I'm sorry, personally." He emphasized the last word just a little.

"So am I," said Joan soberly.

"Aren't you afraid they'll say that you couldn't take it—or got bored?" he asked, smiling.

Joan nodded. "Not that it matters," she said, but she knew that Martha had been quick to spread that rumor. Miss Harrington, without demanding or receiving explanations, had already told her that.

"How you could quit and hand over your berth to that girl," she'd said disgustedly, "is beyond me!"

"Don't let it worry you," advised Kirk kindly, "and—permit me to say I think you are very wise."

Understanding from that unexpected quarter shook her. She managed to smile, to thank him, to shake hands and say good-by before she escaped.

WALKING home in the soft spring air, she told herself it was all over. A little more than six months ago she had walked into William Bowen's office. Now she was walking out again. So much had happened in half a year. She felt she was a different person. She looked back on the girl she had been and could not believe her mental eyes. She h:d told hrself, Well, I'm just where I started. But that wasn't true. You never went back. You went on from wherever you were.

At home in the apartment, with Lily fussing over her, she tried to make her plans. But she hadn't any of her own. She had Bob's prescription, however. Perhaps—perhaps if she tried that?

"Lily," she asked, "how would you like a little vacation?"

"I'd like it swell," said Lily, rolling her eyes.

"I've got a new job," Joan told her. "I'm going home for a little while, and I have to go west for a short trip," Joan explained. "We'll close the apartment, but you can run in once a week or so and see that things are in order. I'll be back in a couple of weeks, Lily, and I'll let you know beforehand. How's that?"

"Well," said Lily, looking at her sidewise, "it's okeh by me, Miss Joan—except I can't rightly afford it."

Joan burst out laughing. It was the first time she had felt like laughing in a good many hours. She said: "You're an old fake, Lily. I'll pay you, of course."

Now that she had made up her mind, she wanted things to happen at once, immediately. She had Lily get out her bags, and she packed them helter-skelter. The summer clothes, those she had taken to South America, stayed in the closet. The dress she had worn that night in San Juan. She put out her hand and touched it. It was just a frock, after all, a charming, expensive frock. But it had had a glamor in which the designer had had no part—a glamor of moonlight and stars, of song and quickened pulses, of fear and delight.

She thought, I'll give them all away. I don't want to wear them ever again. And closed the door softly as if she closed it on a ghost.

Her car was outside, and she drove Lily to the subway. Then she started uptown — she was going home. For a little while. For refuge, for sanctuary, and in order to examine her wounds, to see if they were as bad as she had thought, and in order, she hoped to heal them.

(To be continued.)

"I was desperately lonely, Joan, and you are very lovely."

Your Stars ★ Today ★

By WYNN

Sunday, April 9

The week ahead has its share of minor irritations, but it also is full of opportunity to do good and constructive work. Make it count by being alert to all openings. Today: Plan ahead, be social, but slow down the brain speed in the evening.

Controling the Ignorant

An individual, a city, a state, or a nation can be controled only by those powers which it can understand. A person of low development and low ideals, such as those of physical force, threats, and selfishness, cannot be controled by sweet thoughts and loving kindness. It is sometimes necessary to spank the baby. Explaining the philosophy of love to a wild horse doesn't get results.

Your Year Ahead

Your year ahead until next birthday is ambitious. Take care with superiors, elders, watch own health, no carelessness. Don't force Oct. 20 to end of year—pay old debts. Danger: April 15 to May 1 and Jan. 18-Feb. 5, 1940.

Tomorrow

Be practical, particularly with your boss; don't permit feelings to dictate.

"Philadelphia Story" Boosts Miss Hepburn to a Modern Cinderella Stage Triumph

By Burns Mantle.

NEW YORK.—Katharine Hepburn is that independent that I don't suppose her New York success in "The Philadelphia Story" means much to her. But it has boosted her to a sort of modern Cinderella triumph with both the play reviewers and her first audiences and they, at least, are well pleased.

Miss Hepburn has always been a No. 1 individualist. It is, I suppose, a kind of natural exhibitionism to which she has frequently confessed. But to me it has a lot of New England in it, too. A kind of protective overlay of arrogance that is not intended as arrogance at all. Never having been really sure of herself she has been determined that no one would ever guess. And when she has seemed the most completely casual and indifferent she has really been the most desperately courageous.

Miss Hepburn's entire stage career has been one of alternate failure and success. So far as I know she never has done much cheering when she won, or much sulking when she lost. Today she may or may not be literally exultant over reconquering Broadway. In 1933 she failed a little pathetically when she came back from her first screen triumphs to play in "The Lake" against such seasoned old-timers as Frances Starr and Blanche Bates. But if she is exultant she has avoided all public demonstrations of the fact.

Nor is hers a triumph quite as great as it sounded next day. She has done well as the heroine of "The Philadelphia Story" because it happens to be a part written perfectly to her measure by Philip Barry, the author. She plays it with complete assurance because she knows the type, and in the end she is helped a good deal by the natural sympathy the heroine builds for herself through Mr. Barry's situations.

Ninety-nine and a fraction of every hundred actor successes are won with the help of authors, plus the normal reactions of audiences, and not through the sheer genius of the players, as many believe. And a fairly heavy percentage of failures are scored the same way.

By persistent and honest effort, Miss Hepburn has acquired a sound technical equipment. She has improved her speaking voice noticeably. She now has more to give any character she undertakes to play than she ever had before. Therefore, her success is well earned and entirely legitimate. But she still is an actress who has to be cast with discretion and understanding if she is to do herself and her authors justice. I venture she knows that and is content. She would never want to be the "isn't she sweet?" "isn't she cute?" "isn't she darling?" "isn't she marvelous?" "don't you love her?" type of stage favorite. Nor could be.

In "The Philadelphia Story," Miss Hepburn is the chaste and chilly daughter of a family of Philadelphia Tories who probably have an estate on the Main line. Tracy Lord by name, she has disappointed one husband and divorced him when he took to liquor. Now she is about to take another, a handsome young prig who has lifted himself from the mines to a position of financial and social prominence.

The day before the wedding a New York magazine called Destiny sends a reporter and a camerawoman to report the event in connection with a series of articles that are to reveal Philadelphia's upper classes, (Continued on Page 2.)

A Rodgers and Hart Song Hit—Product of Two Men's Respect for Each Other

By Cecil Smith.

"SOMETIMES a whole song, words and music, rolls off as though it had a life of its own inside of us and just needed to be invited out onto paper and score sheet. Sometimes Dick will work hours before getting the melody or rhythm he wants, while I work equally long getting the right lyric. It's a matter of luck, of chance, of fluency or inspiration at a particular moment. Sometimes it comes hard; sometimes it comes easy. If we stick with it long enough it usually comes along."

The foregoing paragraph is a description by Lorenz Hart of the way he and Richard Rodgers work during the frenzied weeks preceding the production of a top-flight musical comedy. "Dick" Rodgers and "Larry" Hart are, of course, the teammates of so many Broadway hit songs that they themselves must long since have lost count.

The present stage of their extraordinary partnership is now represented at the Grand Opera house in the words and music of "I Married an Angel." Their collaboration stretches back more than two decades to their student days at Columbia university in New York City. At least they were Rodgers' student days. Hart, who had been graduated the spring before, came back to the campus to work on a student show with Rodgers, who was then only a freshman. Their joint inspiration met with such success that their future together seemed inevitable, and Hart could only "sit around waiting for Dick Rodgers to graduate."

"The Garrick Gaieties," a scintillant revue put together by young members and hangers-on of the Theater guild in 1925, first introduced the pair to New York theatergoers. Their songs possessed such an unusual give and take between words and music that their popularity was immediate. The catalog of later successes is sizable, including among other items such memorable shows as "A Connecticut Yankee," "Simple Simon," and "On Your Toes."

Probably Lorenz Hart would thoroughly resent being called literary, but in an important sense he is just exactly that. He places exacting demands upon the words he uses, requiring them, as any good writer must, to carry a precise shade of meaning and mood and to create interesting sound patterns. His lyrics are not carelessly thrown together to fill out a rime scheme and to match thirty-two measures of music.

Consider that triumphant early work, the song "Thou Swell" in "A Connecticut Yankee." For Broadway consumption the original Mark Twain story was brought up to date, with modern slang introduced into King Arthur's court and with topical references to modern ideas and modern scientific invention. Mr. Hart's problem was to write a song in which the anachronisms of the tale would be concentrated into a single expression. "Thou Swell" turns the trick neatly by mixing up the slang locutions of 1927 with the archaic use of the old "thou" form of the second personal pronoun:

Thou swell! Thou witty! Thou sweet! Thou grand!
Wouldst kiss me pretty? Wouldst hold my hand?

In "I Married an Angel" Mr. Hart demonstrates once again some of the same facility in translating the central theme of the story into a few lines. See how, with a light touch, he kids his hero about the (Continued on Page 2.)

Above: Two men with two guns can work a lot of havoc. Here are Alan Hale and Errol Flynn prepared for offense and defense in a scene from "Dodge City." (Chicago.) Olivia de Havilland and Ann Sheridan are the leading ladies.

Rodgers-Hart Hit Is Tribute to Teamwork

improbability of any one's actually marrying a flesh and blood angel:

Have you heard? I married an angel!
I'm sure that the change'll
Be awfully good for me.

Half the fun of the Hart lyrics lies in their unexpected twists of rhyme. One of the most spontaneous examples of a text bristling with rhymes and near rhymes occurs in "There's a Small Hotel," from "On Your Toes":

"Looking through the window you can see a distant steeple;
Not a sign of people; who wants people?
When the steeple bell says,
'Good night, sleep well,' we'll thank the small hotel together."

Perhaps the rhymes are not so brilliant in themselves, but they are unusually interesting because they pop up unexpectedly all through the lines instead of waiting for their usual place at the end. "Sing for Your Supper," in the current New York hit, "The Boys from Syracuse," provides another similar example of the typical Hart fluency:

"I heard from a wise canary,
Trilling makes a fellow willing;
So, little swallow, swallow now.
Now is the time to sing for your supper
And you'll get breakfast;
Song birds are not dumb.
They don't buy a crumb of bread,
It's said,
So sing and you'll be fed."

Yet these songs, even though they look reasonably clever on paper, do not become wholly themselves until they are wedded to Richard Rodger's bright tunes. Mr. Rodgers has a great gift for avoiding the bromides of the feebler Tin Pan Alley tunesmiths, without losing hold of his popular audience. There are passages of considerable musical subtlety in "I Married an Angel"—passages a beginning harmony student in school would never learn from his textbook. But Mr. Rodgers' lyric gift is so persuasive and his feeling for rhythmic structure and unity is so infallible that he does not need to be overconventional to be popular.

Then, too, he respects Mr. Hart's words. He never distorts their accent or inflection, and he manipulates his musical ideas in a hundred clever ways, just to keep the lyrics uppermost in the attention of the audience. Indeed, the basic reason for the success of Rodgers and Hart—apart from their innate talent and showmanship—probably lies in the healthy respect each has for the accomplishments of the other.

For the first item in a Shakespearean repertory of three plays, the Federal theater project offers "Othello" at the Blackstone theater beginning Tuesday evening. Ian Keith, who appeared here earlier this season in a revival of "The Copperhead," has directed the production. This week he will be seen as the plotting Iago. Next week he will play Othello. Another outstanding member of the cast is Albert Carroll, a versatile actor whose recent Chicago engagements have been in "As Thousands Cheer" [replacing Clifton Webb], and as Osric in Leslie Howard's version of "Hamlet." Mr. Carroll won most of his success in revues, having also come to Chicago with the "Grand Street Follies" and "The Garrick Gaieties." He and Mr. Keith were once fellow students at the Francis W. Parker school.

This week John Connor will play Othello, Margarette Shanna will be the Desdemona, Tom McDermott the Cassio, and Peggy Joyce the Emilia. Don Koehler is assistant director. Sets and costumes are by Clive Rickabaugh.

All unexpectedly the spring season has developed a conflict of openings on April 24. First nighters will have hard going making up their minds whether to attend the initial performance of Gertrude Lawrence in her new play, Samson Raphaelson's "Skylark," at the Harris theater, or to trot over to the Grand Opera house for the first showing of "Knickerbocker Holiday," with Walter Huston.

"Skylark" comes to Chicago before its New York première. Since a definite commitment has been made for an early May opening there, the Chicago engagement will be limited to two weeks. This pre-Broadway booking comes to us as a reward of merit for responding so enthusiastically to Miss Lawrence's autumn run in "Susan and God," which packed the Harris theater for twelve weeks.

Walter Huston, whose greatest success was in the title rôle of Sinclair Lewis' and Sidney Howard's "Dodsworth," undertakes his first musical comedy assignment in "Knickerbocker Holiday." The piece is also the first venture into the musical comedy field of Maxwell Anderson, noted American playwright. Kurt Weill, composer of the score, was responsible for the music of the Group theater's production of "Johnny Johnson," and for a German version of "The Beggar's Opera" called "Die Drei-Groschen Oper." He also has been active in the composition of incidental music for the films.

In the course of a restless tour before they settled down here at the Erlanger theater, the members of the "What a Life" cast suffered many a contretemps. At one time Eddie Bracken suffered an attack of appendicitis. Lora Rogers broke her leg in Philadelphia. One of the boys missed the train in Buffalo, and had to fly to Cleveland for the following night's performance. Another boy had his ears frostbitten in Minneapolis.

Tomorrow night at the Woman's Club theater, the Chicago Mummers theater production of "The Bishop Misbehaves" will be repeated, with Francis X. Bushman in the central rôle. Another important member of the cast is John Goldsworthy, experienced actor of the London and New York stages. Here is Chicago he played Capt. Tarnitz in the memorable sixty week run of "The Student Prince" at the Great Northern theater. His voice has been heard on many radio programs originating in Chicago.

The Uptown players present their most lavish production of the season at the Woman's Club theater Friday and Saturday evenings. Maxwell Anderson's "Elizabeth the Queen" is their choice of play. The heroine will be Lenore Brown. Others in the cast are Joseph Nellis, Matt Gettings, Leslie Walker, Patricia Fagen, Robert Lesser, and Wilms Herbert. J. Bradley-Griffin is the director.

The Repertory Group's highly commendable production of "One Third of a Nation" continues at the Repertory theater, 29 East Balbo street, every Friday, Saturday, and Sunday evening. The direction and many of the individual performances in this "living newspaper" reach a level of creditable professionalism. The subject matter deals with the housing problem in Chicago, outlining the history of slums and tenements, passing through the exciting period of the Chicago fire, and arriving at a consideration of the contemporary need for improved housing in low income areas.

Describing his New York engagement this year as "a passport throughout the country," Maurice Evans promises to make a long cross-country tour next season with his two current Shakespearean vehicles, "Hamlet" and the first part of "King Henry IV."

Thornton Wilder's "Our Town," summarily snuffed out in the middle of its Chicago run, will reopen at the Biltmore theater, Los Angeles, tomorrow night. Frank Craven and a fair number of others from the original cast will resume their parts. John Craven is now busy in New York in "The Happiest Days."

When the new Pan-American theater in Mexico City opens Thursday evening the first offering will be "Strange Bedfellows," by John McGee, former director of the Federal theater project in Chicago. Under government patronage, the Pan-American theater plans a répertoire of twenty-two plays this season. "Strange Bedfellows" should not be confused with a play of the same title by Barry Conners, given in New York in 1924.

KNOW HIM?

Francis X. Bushman has the leading role in the Mummers Theater production of "The Bishop Misbehaves." The comedy will be given at the Woman's Club theater on Monday night.

Notes of Music and Musicians

Two Chicago composers, Albert Noelte and Felix Borowski, will be represented on the Illinois Symphony orchestra's program, which is devoted to music appropriate to Easter. Mr. Borowski's tone poem, "Ecce Homo" ["Behold the Man"], written in 1923 and played here for the first time a year ago by the orchestra, will be repeated. "Ahasuerus," a solo cantata for baritone and orchestra, by Mr. Noelte, is based on the story of the Wandering Jew.

Roy Schuessler will be the soloist in the latter composition. As winner of the Society of American Musicians' award he made his debut in Kimball hall last season. He has appeared with several of the midwestern symphony orchestras.

As usual the Great Northern theater will house today's concert, conducted by Izler Solomon and listing the following numbers:

Overture to "The Marriage of Figaro" .... Mozart
Symphony No. 1, B Flat Major ["Spring"] .... Schumann
"Ahasuerus," cantata for baritone and orchestra .... Noelte
Roy Schuessler.
"Ecce Homo" .... Borowski
"Death and Transfiguration" .... Strauss

Anita Aaron Braude, soprano, will present a recital in Kimball hall on Tuesday. Scattered through the program are arias from "The Marriage of Figaro," "Carmen," Auber's "Manon Lescaut," "Louise," and Johann Strauss' "Die Fledermaus." Bainbridge Crist's popular suite, "Chinese Mother Goose Rhymes," and representative Italian, German, and French songs fill out the rest of the program. The accompanist will be Robert Fizdale.

The son of an organist and now an eminent organist in his own right, Prof. Fritz Heitmann will give his first Chicago recital on Tuesday evening at the Rockefeller Memorial chapel, Woodlawn avenue and 59th street. His concert tours have taken him over all of Europe; he has participated in numerous Bach, Reger, and Schütz festivals, and has given comprehensive lecture-recitals on organ music. Since 1932 he has been organist of the Berlin Dom, the first Protestant church of the reich. At present he is writing a large scale work for the Göschen collection on "The Nature, History, and Literature of Organ Music."

At 11:30 o'clock on Tuesday morning the American Opera society will present a program to its members and friends at the Arts club. The Stetson quartet will sing part songs and excerpts and arias from operas by Eleanor Everest Freer. Members of the ensemble are Bernhard Van Hefte, James Mitchell, John Thut, and George H. Weber. Leo Heim is the accompanist.

Bach's A major piano concerto will have a place on the recital which Mae Doelling Schmidt will give for the Oxford Guild of piano teachers on Tuesday. Open to the public, the recital is announced for 8 o'clock in room 621 of Kimball hall.

Starting at 12:10 the regular Friday lunch hour organ recital will be given in Kimball hall by Dr. Wilhelm Middelschulte. Handel's Concerto No. 1, selections from Bach's "Goldberg" variations, Thiele's Theme, Variations, and Finale, and the performer's Passacaglia will comprise the program.

On the Chicago Bach chorus' spring program in Orchestra hall on May 4 three church cantatas will be sung—for Easter, Pentecost, and the tenth Sunday after Trinity. The concert will begin with the Overture from the B minor Suite and finish with the closing chorus from the cantata, "Ich Hatte Viel Bekuemmernis." Esther Hart, soprano; Marcia Sandahl, contralto, and Raymond Koch, bass, will be the soloists. Theodore Lams is the conductor.

Also a week away is a performance of Rossini's "Stabat Mater," slated for Thorne hall. Presenting the work will be the chorus and orchestra of the Central Y. M. C. A. college led by Dr. Beck. The soloists will be Henrietta Chase and Pauline Zwayne, sopranos; Julian Miller, tenor, and Ried Hillyard, bass.

Typical of the soloist's programs is the one Alice Tully will present in Orchestra hall next Sunday afternoon. The soprano will sing five of the less well known songs by Wolf, six by Fauré, three by Satie, three by Ferroud, and four folk songs.

Chicago Gives Miss Moffett Chez Welcome

Chicago café crowds have long applauded the work of Mary Raye and Naldi, of Cross and Dunn, and of Russ Morgan's orchestra, but they added new favorites to the list last week when Chez Paree launched its five star spring revue.

Until her debut at the Chez, Adelaide Moffett was known to the average Chicagoan only as a member of a prominent family who had achieved a reputation in the east as the best of the glamor girl night club singers. After her debut she had achieved for herself a neat little triumph as an entertainer, regardless of background. Quiet, entirely unpretentious, and sincere, Miss Moffett sang a répertoire of songs ideally selected to fit the range of her rather deep throated voice.

Number one surprise on the program was the act presented by the Weire brothers, a very European comedy dance routine in which deft mimicry follows speedily upon hilarious buffoonery.

Mary Raye and Naldi presented again their very individual style of dancing with its many graceful lifts and turns, but their greatest achievement was the musicless dance to a recitation of Poe's poem, "Annabelle Lee." It is a beautiful innovation that can hardly miss having many imitations.

Cross and Dunn's comedy songs are well known to Chez Paree patrons, and the new numbers—especially the political commentary called "It Can Only Happen Here"—added to the team's high rating.

Key Taylor, a tiny dancing star, was well received as the feature dancer of several of Fred Evans' typically original ensemble numbers. A political satire in which Mussolini, Hitler, Stalin, Chamberlain, Daladier, and Roosevelt climax a successful disarmament conference with folk dances of their respective nations, is the highlight of the six productions. Stressing beauty are the Pierrot and the fashion numbers. Swing has its turn in the world's fair and Broadway routines.

Fifth star of the Chez constellation is Russ Morgan, whose music has proved to be a drawing card. In addition to playing what the performers call "a very swell show," Morgan presents two specialties. Something of a personal triumph is the one in which Russ and his trombone; Phil Cappicatti and his trumpet, and Gene Prendergast and his clarinet form a harmonious trio.

Perhaps the "littlest big name" in the show business is Jerry Bergen, double talking pantomimist, who, with his emcee partner, Billy Gray, opened the refurbished Harry's New York CaBARet last week. Bergen is not even as big as the proverbial minute, rating about forty-three seconds, but his native sense of the ridiculous and Gray's excellent straight technique furnished more fun than the Bar has seen in many seasons. Bergen and Gray, with their stooge, Emma Calder, are the first name act in the Charlie Hepp's newly adopted show policy. Their comedy is ably complemented by the singing of tall Violet Love, the song and dance of Maxine Kirk, the graceful routines of Galente and Leonarde, the fast, well executed dances of the Winnie Hoveler Girls, and Charlie Engels' music.

Four smooth Californians, just in from New York, are back at the Glass Hat of the Congress hotel. The Californians swing from waltz to rhumba to fox trot without a lost beat, and point up their dance music with vocal arrangements notable for their tuneful simplicity.

The turreted castle on Wellington and Clark streets known as Ivanhoe is back in the spotlight with the advent of Keith Beecher's orchestra in the forest ballroom. Eleven years ago, when Ivanhoe was just a locked door, a bar, a highly favored kitchen, and a room full of booths named for characters in Walter Scott's novel, Beecher worked for Ralph Jansen, the proprietor. His recent opening at Ivanhoe was something of a homecoming, for Jansen still runs the picturesque spot. Runs it and has built it into a show place, with its gardens and their running streams, its catacombs and trick elevator, its spooks and its novelty bars.

A business man athlete who still wonders at his luck in being paid for dancing, and the partner who creates that wonderment, opened an engagement Friday night in the Continental room of the Stevens hotel. They are Josephine Bernhardt and Clive Graham. Eddie Brandt and the Rhythm Boys, whose engagement has been extended to May 14, presented as well a new routine of specialties, featuring Jules Mendelson, impersonating drummer boy.

The tapering and talented fingers of Eddy Duchin moved across the keyboard of the Empire room piano again Thursday night, and Palmer House patrons responded for the third successive year with a sincere welcome. Duchin is the star of any show he plays, but he has able competition this time in Rufe Davis, rube comedian; Dick Barstow, Chicago dancer; Anderson and Allen, alliterative acrobats; the Abbott Girls, and Phil Dooley's intermission music.

Lita Grey Chaplin joined Lou Holtz as a co-star of the Hi-Hat club show Thursday night. Holtz, scheduled to close Wednesday, has been held over.

Expectations: Phil Levant and his orchestra, absent from Chicago night spots for two years, moves into the Walnut room of the Bismarck hotel Friday. With him comes his own vocalist, Patsy Long, and a new show including Bert Granoff, tenor; Virginia Gibson; Mel Ody, juggler; Betty Grey, organist, and the Anne Adair dancers.

Ted Weems and his orchestra follow Wayne King into the Gold Coast room of the Drake Friday. With Weems comes his own group of entertainers including Marvel Maxwell, new vocalist; Elmo Tanner, popular whistler; Country Washburn, Perry Como, and Red Ingle.

The Yacht Club boys, with one new member, take over the Colony club Friday. Larry Adler, George Kelly, and Billy Mann have handsome young Jimmy Craig as their glamor department now. Lew Fidler's popular dance music continues, as do the rhumba rhythms of José Manzanares.

Artie Shaw, called the new swing king, plays at the Trianon ballroom Saturday night and at the Aragon Sunday. Freddy Martin moves to the Trianon Sunday, and Dick Jurgens takes over the Aragon again on Tuesday, April 18.

Boswelling and Bistros: The Yacht club boys, with Benny Baker, movie comedian, breaking in old songs and breaking down new pianos at Gibby's, while Sammy Williams, the pianissimo pianist, looks on with a strange gleam in his eyes. . . . Stuff Smith Jr. getting poppa's name in the paper by squeaking out an eight year old's version of "Ise a Muggin,'" but way back in Harlem. . . . Eddie Miller of the Crosby band grinning because he is a daddy who belongs to a new heart, named Diane. . . . Speaking of Crosby, the Blackhawk maestro will present a new audience participation show called "Bandstand Grandstand" starting Monday night. . . . The weekly air-floor show is a variation on the quiz theme, with clews to the nontechnical baseball questions being played by the band. . . . Ennio Bolognini, the athletic cellist of L'Aiglon restaurant, seen trotting up Michigan boulevard, a throwback to the days when he was an amateur sparring partner of Luis Angel Firpo. . . . Easter improbability—an Easter egg served on one of the Panther room's flaming swords.

UPTOWN ROYALTY

A revival of Maxwell Anderson's "Elizabeth the Queen" will be given by the Uptown players at the Woman's Club theater on Friday and Saturday nights. Lenore Brown plays the title role.

A New Opera

La Scala in Milan recently presented Ermanno Wolf-Ferrari's newest opera, "La Dama Boba" ["The Foolish Lady"]. Adapted from the famous Spanish comedy of Lope de Vega by the composer and Mario Ghisalberti, it relates the misfortunes of two sisters, a starving poet, and a second gentleman, each in love with the wrong person. Everything, of course, turns out satisfactorily in the end. The music is in the light, transparent style that Wolf-Ferrari has adopted in the last decade for his operatic comedies. Unlike these successes, the present work received only a lukewarm reception, both critically and popularly. In the cast were Mafalda Favero and Serafina di Leo, sopranos; Bruno Landi, tenor, and Augusto Beuf and Salvatore Baccaloni, baritones. [Di Leo, Beuf, and Baccaloni have sung in past years with resident companies in Chicago.] Umberto Berretoni was the conductor. Wolf-Ferrari's popular melodrama, "The Jewels of the Madonna," is slated for revival next fall by the Chicago City Opera company.

Folk Festival

Approximately 700 persons from thirty states will gather in Washington, D. C., at the end of this month to take part in the sixth annual National Folk festival. Two performances will be given each day on April 27, 28, and 29. The estimable Sarah Gertrude Knott, founder and director of the festival idea, will be in charge as usual.

The performers on these programs are nonprofessionals, invited by the festival committee to take part because they best represent various regional folk arts. A sample selection of items on a program might include the following colorful presentations: Kiowa Indians from Oklahoma; Mexican and Spanish music and dances from Guadalupe center, Kansas City, Mo.; French folk songs and dances performed by a group from Lafayette, La.; German folk songs and dances from Pa.; a town crier from Provincetown, Mass.; ring games, play party and singing games from Tennessee; fiddle tunes from the Great Smoky and Blue Ridge mountains; lumberjack and miners' songs and dances from Mich., Wis., and Pa.; sea chanteys, sacred harp songs, Negro religious and work songs.

The goal of the festival is, according to the director, "to get down to what America really is" by examining the cultural heritages of the nation as they exist today, and to perpetuate as far as possible these traditions through "the vital spark which oral transmission gives."

Hedge Row Theater.

The famous Hedge Row theater at Moylan-Rose Valley, Pa., directed by Jasper Deeter, will celebrate its sixteenth birthday by presenting on April 21 the world première of William McNally's "Beloved Leader." It's another play about dictators.

Miss Hepburn Triumphant in Her New Play

industrially, socially, and economically.

The reporter happens to be handsome and hard-bitten; not a communist, but "a pinfeather from the left wing," and he, scenting Tracy's uncertainty of mind and getting a little tight with her on champagne the night before the wedding, accepts her daring invitation to take a dip in the pool under the moon and without the benefit of chaperone or formal bathing costume.

Champagne always did go to Tracy's head. When the bathers are discovered Tracy's fiancé will not believe that the reporter has acted as a gentleman should under the circumstances and walks out on the wedding. Whereupon Tracy turns again not to the reporter but to the first husband, who has edged himself into the list of pre-wedding guests and made her see that she was all wrong in her attitude during their first wedding.

A pleasant comedy about pleasant, believable people, written in the best Barry manner, with dialog that is both smart and polished. Miss Hepburn, as said, while a bit distant through the early scenes, makes progress with the softening of the heroine's character and is greatly appreciated at the play's end. There were many curtain calls and a good deal of friendly cheering the first night.

In support there is an excellent cast, headed by Van Heflin as the newspaper man; Joseph Cotton, the first husband; Vera Allen, Nicholas Joy, and Shirley Booth. "The Philadelphia Story," incidentally, promises to be the Theater Guild's first hit of the season.

You will be seeing shortly "The Story of Vernon and Irene Castle," which has been made into a motion picture romance, with occasional song and dance, for Fred Astaire and Ginger Rogers. And you will be liking it, I think. Particularly those of you who were around when the Castle walk was a sensation of the ballrooms and a lot of ladies were trying to look as Irene did wearing a Dutch cap or a hair-bob, or both.

They were a glamorous pair, the Castles, from the season of 1911-'12 on through the early war years, and legend has added to the glamor. They were, as I remember them, about the most graceful of the dancing couples who swept us into such a dancing craze that otherwise perfectly sane men of business frequently took an extra hour at lunch time to get in a lesson in such hops, and walks, and dips as no human ever had seen amateurs attempt before or will ever see again.

Later such couples as Maurice and Florence Walton may have topped the Castles, and I daresay there are many more gifted pairs today, but in their day the Castles were supreme. They set styles, popularized customs, had expensive dance establishments built in their honor and managed, with it all, to hold the respect as well as the admiration of the followers.

Vernon, who had been thought as a good deal of a dancing dand proved himself to be of sterner stu once war was declared. English b birth, he could not stand appearin at the Canadian recruiting gathe ings without signing up. He enliste in the air corps. Not too much made of his sacrifice in the pictur He is sent finally as an instructor America after we got in and wa killed at a flying field in Texas.

Astaire and Rogers are, particular in the long shots, bewilderingly lik the Castles. I wouldn't know whethe they are better dancers or not. Ve non, as I recall him, was no grea shakes as a tap dancer, and Astair is. But they have the same sli bodies and the same rhythmic grac And, seeing them in the old dance and hearing the old music, is thril ing as a theater memory.

They do well with the emotiona episodes, too. Particularly Miss Ro ers. She has had good direction b H. C. Potter and George Haight.

Week Promises 4 Concerts at Orchestra Hall

By Edward Barry.

This second last week of the Chicago Symphony orchestra's season promises four Orchestra hall concerts. Interest is divided between three appearances by José Echaniz and two performances of the Van Vactor prize winning symphony.

Mr. Echaniz is a Havana born pianist now 33 years old. At 16 he made a New York debut. American engagements were followed in 1929 by a European tour which included Spain, France, and Holland. He has lived for years in the United States and has done educational as well as concert work. This is his first appearance in the Orchestra hall subscription series of the Chicago Symphony orchestra. Mr. Echaniz's last downtown recital was given at the Arts club a year ago under the auspices of the Musicians' Club of Women.

For his vehicles this week the pianist has chosen the most popular of modern concertos and one of the standard mid-nineteenth century works in this form. Tuesday afternoon he will play Rachmaninoff's second concerto in C minor, Thursday night and Friday afternoon Liszt's second concerto in A.

A great many persons will object to calling Rachmaninoff's second concerto "modern." It deserves the epithet principally because it is able, just by the skin of its teeth, to rate as a twentieth century work [1901]. It is not modern in the sense that there is anything puzzling or cacaphonous about it. On the contrary, the work is packed with wonderful, hummable melodies. Their pleasantly melancholy contours and texture give them intense individuality and interest.

Liszt knew better, perhaps, than any other nineteenth century composer how to write effectively for the piano. Even when he had little to say his manner of saying it was polished, sensuously beautiful. This A major concerto is poised, debonair, and a delight to the ear. It is neither the best nor the worst of his works, but finds its place far closer to the top than to the bottom of the scale.

The new Van Vactor Symphony in D, which is to be presented for the first times locally Thursday night and Friday afternoon, is of much more than passing interest.

David Van Vactor, still in his early thirties, comes from Plymouth, Ind. Study in this country and in Europe led to a position in the flute section of the Chicago Symphony orchestra and to a place on the faculty of Northwestern university. His activities as a composer have drawn wider and wider attention and he has been very fortunate in the number of performances which his works have chalked up.

Three times the Chicago Symphony orchestra has presented Mr. Van Vactor's concerto grosso for three flutes, harp, and orchestra. A passacaglia and fugue was widely broadcast. His compositions for smaller ensembles have had numerous performances, notably by the Saidenberg symphonietta of this city and at an all-Van Vactor concert in the foyer of Orchestra hall about three years ago.

A major climax was reached when Mr. Van Vactor submitted the score of a Symphony in D in the 1937-'38 American composers' contest sponsored by the New York Philharmonic-Symphony society. It won the $1,000 prize and gave its composer immediate national recognition. A few weeks ago Mr. Van Vactor conducted the première of his symphony in Carnegie hall, New York, and was cordially received by the audience. Critical opinion was somewhat divided, but the performance undoubtedly ranked as a success. It is this prize winning symphony which the Chicago Symphony orchestra is to play next Thursday and Friday.

Current Music News

Although Carla Bradley has had extensive training and experience in ballet, she has forsaken this idiom to become an exponent of modern dancing. It is in this capacity that she will perform when she makes her Chicago debut as a solo dancer at the Arts club on Monday night. She is not a newcomer to this city, as she was a member at one time of the Ravinia opera ballet. Subsequent appearances have taken her to Paris and London and to San Francisco as principal dancer of that city's opera ballet. For her program tomorrow night Michael Fokine and Adolph Bohm have choreographed the dances Miss Bradley did not compose herself. The accompanying music is drawn from the works of Scriabin, Campos, Liszt, Poulignac, Rummel, and Schubert.

On Wednesday night Helen Levine will offer a piano recital in the Auditorium recital hall. The Corelli-Godowsky pastorale and a Mozart sonata will open the program. Following several items by Leschetizky, Debussy, and Chopin the young Chicago pianist will conclude her recital with an American group—pieces by MacDowell, Griffes, Gruenberg, and Guion.

An innovation in the form of a children's day program will greet visitors to the Beaux Arts salon in the Medinah club this afternoon. Not one of the performers is more than 10 years of age and the youngest is only 5. Enid Winchell, the 10 year old, will sing eight of the best known arias and songs in the coloratura soprano répertoire. Mary Ella Whitney, 9, will play two groups of violin solos, and with her sister, Naomi, 5, and her brother, Edwin, 7, will contribute some trio music.

Two classical compositions and one romantic will be played on the "Masterpieces of Chamber Music" series' next program, Tuesday at 8:15 o'clock. Handel's sonata in G minor for two violins and cembalo will be performed by Israel Baker and Albert Blacker, violinists, and Alexander Joseffer, pianist. Baker and Joseffer will join with Harry Wogman, cellist, to play Schubert's trio in E flat, and the Federal String quartet will contribute Mozart's quartet in A major [Köchel 464]. The series is held in the federal music concert hall, 632 North Dearborn street.

At the same place on Saturday at 2 o'clock Ralph Cissne will conduct the American Concert orchestra in request selections from the nine previous programs on the "Musical Matinées for Young People" series.

Winning contestants in the annual contest held by the Chicago Woman's Musical club for young musicians are Eddy Eppstein, pianist; Mary E. Coleman, double bass; Robert Spiro and Harry Swanson, baritones, who tied for first place. These four successful musicians will be presented in recital next October.

Celebrating its twentieth anniversary, the Musical Guild will give its last artist program of the year on Wednesday in the guild studio, room 825 of the Fine Arts building. The affair is scheduled for 8:25 o'clock.

On its next to the last program the Civic orchestra has chosen Brahms' second symphony as the major work which it will play. Noelte's suite for wind instruments, percussion, and harp, along with items by Gluck and Mendelssohn, will complete the program. Hans Lange will conduct this program as he has the others, with Lela Hammer and Sam Raphling of the conducting class directing two of the pieces. The concert is two weeks away, on April 23, and is in Orchestra hall.

A third performance has been added to the two already scheduled of "Pimpinone." This is the two character chamber opera by Bach's contemporary, Georg Philipp Telemann, which will be given at the Reynolds club theater, University avenue and 57th street, on April 16, 18, and 23. Joy Fairman and Roy Schuessler are the protagonists, and Sigmund Levarie will be both conductor and harpsichordist for the performances.

Hearing Nadia Boulanger and Jean Françaix play Lennox Berkeley's polka for two pianos last Sunday night at the Arts club revealed the fact that the piece was not receiving its first performance in Chicago as labeled but that it had been introduced here a year ago by the English duo-pianists, Ethel Bartlett and Rae Robertson, to whom incidentally the piece is dedicated.

Ernst Krenek, the noted Czech composer, conductor and pianist who appeared with the Chicago Symphony orchestra early this year in all three capacities, will give two lectures at the School of Design, 247 East Ontario street, on Wednesday and Friday at 8:30. The first lecture, "My Way as Composer," will relate the composer's development from performer to creator. The second, "The Twelve Tone Scale," will explain the musical technique he is using at present.

Spring Brings City's Choirs Into Limelight

By Cecil Smith.

With the coming of spring all the choristers in Chicago emerge into the sunlight of publicity. The church choirs, expectant of the year's largest attendance, present impressive quantities of Easter music. The various choral societies prepare to demonstrate the fruits of a winter's rehersing.

The Chicago Singverein, ten days ago, gave its spring performance, Max Bruch's "The Lay of the Bell." Next on the list is the vigorous Swedish Choral club. In Orchestra hall Wednesday evening, under the direction of Harry Carlson, the club will offer a tripartite program consisting of Schubert's Mass in A flat, Gustav Holst's "The Hymn of Jesus" and Verdi's "Te Deum." Then six days later on April 18 the Apollo Musical club, Edgar Nelson, director, will present the first Chicago performance of Beethoven's long neglected Missa Solemnis.

With representative items from three musical epochs, the Swedish Choral club's program is unusually well balanced. Almost a century separates the date of the Schubert mass from that of the Holst work. The Mass in A flat was finished in 1822, shortly after the composer had finished the existing portions of the "Unfinished" symphony. "The Hymn of Jesus" was completed in 1917. In between falls Verdi's "Te Deum," his last work, composed in 1896 and first conducted at the Paris World's fair in 1898 by Arturo Toscanini. Thus the program includes a lyric work from the early dawn of German romanticism, an example of late nineteenth century Italian eloquence of the operatic variety, and an English composition of relative modernity.

For a text for "The Hymn of Jesus" Holst hunted out a little known passage from "The Acts of St. John," one of the books of the Apocrypha. The main body of the text consists of a description of a mystical dance in which Jesus and the twelve Apostles were supposed to have taken part. "The Holy Twelve are dancing; dance ye all! Ye who dance not know not what I am telling." The text is replete with unusually provocative, and sometimes unfamiliar, theological symbols which bear considerable resemblance to those found in the Book of Revelation.

Holst's musical style is as unique as his text. A solemn prelude prefaces the main body of the work. A trombone intones the Gregorian chant, "Pange lingua," and the male chorus takes it up. Shortly another plain chant, "Vexilla regis," is introduced. Throughout the hymn the plain chants heard in the prelude recur from time to time, giving a soberly liturgical cast to the music. The rest of the music, however, is modern in style. There is a good deal of effective dissonance, and unusual five beat rhythmic measures are used extensively.

The score calls for two mixed choruses, a small additional semichorus of women's voices, full modern orchestra, and organ. In richness and novelty of orchestral color the score rivals that of "The Planets." The choral parts are magnificently written, with a big, full blooded sonority.

Since "The Hymn of Jesus" is difficult to perform, it has not often been given in America. One of the May festival programs at Ann Arbor introduced it to this country. In 1928 it was sung by the Radcliffe Choral society, the Harvard Glee club and the Boston Symphony orchestra under the direction of G. Wallace Woodworth, who last week conducted the glee club in Orchestra hall.

The Schubert and Holst works do not require soloists. Assisting vocalists in the Verdi "Te Deum" will be Esther Hart, soprano; Gertrude Hanson, contralto; Edwin Kemp, tenor, and Duwayne Carnes, bass. Stanley Martin is organist. Fifty members of the Chicago Symphony orchestra will play.

Central church, which meets in Orchestra hall each Sunday morning at 11 o'clock, announces that Vivian Della Chiesa, lyric soprano, will be guest soloist this morning, singing Gounod's "O Divine Redeemer" and Lambillotte's "Regina Coeli." The Central Church chorus, under William Hughes, will sing a number of seasonal carols, as well as MacFarlane's "Jesus Lives" and "Worthy Is the Lamb," from Handel's "Messiah." Archer Lambuth, organist, will play voluntaries by Candlyn, Claussmann and Purcell.

Fourth Presbyterian church, at Michigan avenue and Chestnut street, offers four Easter services. Barrett Spach is musical director:

New England Congregational church will have its Easter service at 8 o'clock in the evening. Since the church edifice was destroyed by fire in 1936, the congregation now meets in St. James' Episcopal church at Wabash avenue and Huron street. Porter Heaps is organist and choir director. The vocal music is as follows:

"Let Us Rejoice" .... Heaps [Sung from manuscript.]
"I Know that My Redeemer Liveth" .. Handel
Mildred Boberg, soprano.
Russian Easter Carol of the Trees .... Gaul

The Sunday Evening club, meeting in Orchestra hall this evening, also celebrates Easter with special music. The choral music, sung by the choir of 125 under Edgar Nelson, includes Lewandowski's "Praise the Lord," Bairstow's "The Promise Which Was Made Unto Our Fathers," and Camp's "The Angels' Song." Mary Ann Kaufman, soprano, and Virginia Auyer, contralto, will sing a duet, "An Easter Alleluia," by Gaines. Stanley Martin, organist, will play works by Miles and Buck.

AT THE STEVENS HOTEL

Josephine Bernhardt and Clive Graham, one of the country's newer dance teams, brought their popular interpretations into the Continental room of the Stevens hotel Friday.

Back for Fete

Rosa Tentoni, Elizabeth Wysor, Frederick Jagel, Friedrich Schorr, and Mark Love will be soloists in the performance of Bach's "Passion According to St. Matthew" at the North Shore Music festival on May 16. This announcement was made recently by Arthur G. Cable, president of the festival association.

The Chicago Symphony orchestra and a chorus of 500 will support the soloists and Frederick Stock will conduct. The performance of the Bach "Passion," like the three other performances which will follow during the same week, will be given in the new indoor choral theater at Dyche stadium, Evanston.

Wolf-Ferrari's "The New Life" will have Miss Tentoni and Igor Gorin in the solo parts when it is presented on May 18. On the 20th Marian Anderson, contralto, will appear on the afternoon program with a children's chorus of a thousand voices. In the final concert that night Kirsten Flagstad, soprano, will sing a group of songs, and Beethoven's ninth symphony will be given. Soloists for the choral finale of the latter will be Agnes Davis, Miss Wysor, William Miller, and Mr. Schorr.

Despite the increased roster of performers course tickets for the four concerts are lower than in previous years. This is made possible by the increased seating capacity [6,500] of the new theater.

Recordings

Columbia has taken pity on those ballet fans who could never get enough of Massine's new "Gaité Parisienne" and has recorded the tinselly, exhilarating music which was lifted from Offenbach for its score. Here is the giddy can-can, the glorious Danilova-Franklin waltz, the pittery-pattery tune which accompanies Massine's entrance. The recording was made by the London Philharmonic orchestra under the direction of Efrem Kurtz, principal conductor of the Ballet Russe.

The overture to Wagner's "Tannhäuser," played by the London Philharmonic orchestra under Sir Thomas Beecham's direction, is incased in a small new Columbia album. Sir Thomas' patrician restraint does not preclude some highly effective handling of climaxes. The overture fills three record faces, and the odd side is given over to the Rimsky-Korsakoff arrangement of the Polovtsi march from Borodin's "Prince Igor."

A new recording of Brahms' Third Symphony is available. Columbia's version communicates the bigness and the heroic qualities of the work with less attempt than usual to dramatize big climaxes. The orchestra is the London Philharmonic, conducted by Felix Weingartner.

Mystery Opera.

During the annual summer season of opera at the Zoo in Cincinnati, "The Lady of the Lake" will receive its world première. It is the work of an unnamed Louisville composer.

Engineers Aim to Meet 'Social Responsibility'

[The final article of the series by the Rev. John Evans on the sesquicentennial of the Presbyterian Church of the U. S. A. in its relation to higher education will appear in an early issue of the Sunday Tribune.]

Many of today's economic ills have been blamed on engineers, whose advances in mechanical science are said to account for much of the current excess in unemployment. Some people have even gone so far as to suggest a moratorium on research to allow the mind to catch up with the machine. Engineers themselves, of course, are aware of their social responsibility and leaders among them have long advocated an educational policy aimed to develop this aspect of their profession.

Cooper Union recently inaugurated an educational scheme consonant with this "social responsibility" idea. As an initial step it has just compiled the first bibliography on "The Non-Technical Aspects of Engineering Education" available in any language. The new policy of Cooper Union might be termed "scientific humanism" because its engineering courses henceforth will be so balanced as to give future generations the vision and flexible technical equipment necessary to cope with the full range of engineering responsibility.

This bibliography was prepared under the direction of John H. Moriarty, Cooper Union librarian, and Dr. Edwin Sharp Burdell, director of the union, says that scientific humanism "will be the driving force of the schools of the future." He points out in his foreword to the bibliography that increasing pressure is being put upon engineering schools to enlarge their vocational training program to afford a broader educational background.

"The importance of the engineer in a society based primarily on science and technology is being realized more acutely today than in the past," says Dr. Burdell. "The engineer is blamed for everything from technological unemployment to frightfulness in warfare."

It is being increasingly demanded of engineering schools that they take stock of the moral as well as the mental equipment of their young graduates. Therefore, Dr. Burdell urges, it is important that engineering faculties keep abreast of what changes have been made in the various schools, and what leading educators think about the modification of the present conventional technical curriculum.

"I call this new policy 'scientific humanism' because," says Dr. Burdell, "I regard it as the marriage of science with the accumulated culture of the past." This, he explains, means that graduates of the future will not be merely engineers, artists, or social philosophers, but well-rounded men with intellectual associations in fields other than their own.

Mr. Burdell is establishing at Cooper Union what he attempted to solve while at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology—to take existing curricula and, by skilful combination, not only to introduce more instruction in the social sciences and the humanities, but particularly to improve what is now being done in these non-technical fields. This endeavor meant that evidence had to be collected that such improvements were desirable. This evidence is incorporated in the bibliography just published, and it is a convincing synthesis of science, art, and society, forming a core from which to cast a vivid scientific humanism.

The bibliography collates books and articles of contemporary American interest from 1920. It was not found feasible to complete the historical record of educational experiments abroad, according to Byron C. Hopkins, reference librarian of the union. But authoritative journals in engineering, industry, and education in these fields were thoroughly analyzed.

There are listed 170 published writings by 125 authors which are classified under general treatments, guidance for junior engineers, what industry expects, and engineering schools.

This last division embraces seven special training programs employed in industry and educational institutions, including Cambridge university, England. There are also listed nine special courses classified with respect to general and inclusive treatments, economics, English, humanities, political, social science, and speech.

Mexican Theater

An undertaking by the Mexican government similar to our federal theater project will be launched this month. It is known as the Pan-American theater, is located in Mexico City, and will give twenty-two plays by sundry American and Mexican dramatists during the season, all under government patronage. The first offering is "Strange Bedfellows," by John McGee, former head of the federal theater project in Chicago. It is a comedy about a southern family in which an actress daughter upsets the political careers of her relatives.

Good Morning!

Songs and sights of other days! . . . Days when the automobile was a novelty . . . and the bands were playing "Too Much Mustard" . . . the days when vaudeville was in its prime. . . . Later—days of the world war. . . .

And along the path of these days tripped the dancing Castles—introducing night spot entertainment of a new and glamorous sort.

"The Story of Vernon and Irene Castle"—a pretty tapestry, embroidered with threads from the experiences of Mrs. Castle [now Mrs. McLaughlin], who was adviser in chief while the film was in the making—takes up Vernon when he was stooging for Lew Fields in vaudeville, and with Irene when she was just a stage-struck New Rochelle schoolgirl with a passion for dancing.

The two meet through their mutual efforts to rescue a drowning dog. . . . Irene takes Vernon home to dry off. . . . And that's the start of one of the world's most famous romances.

It's Irene's reading of the riot act to Vernon, because he's content with being a stooge when he COULD be a great dancer, that's the start of what might be termed the Castle craze, during which period the Castles presented to the world those sensational terpsichorean innovations, the "fox trot," "Castle walk," etc.

Irene and Vernon learn to dance together, refuse to accept separate engagements, and finally are rewarded by fame and glory on two continents.

Then—the war! Vernon, a Briton, enlists with the Royal Flying corps. . . . Irene carries on without him, save for brief reunions when he's on leave. Standing by always is Walter, a devoted soul who had worked for Irene's folks, "raised her"—to quote him—and had, after her marriage, been retained by the young Castles as a sort of guardian for them both.

Just when the clouds of conflict are rolling away and the sun of happiness seems about to break through and again shine on Irene and Vernon fate intervenes and tragedy ensues.

The tale is simply and effectively presented. Miss Rogers is an appealing impersonator of Mrs. Castle. Fred Astaire, who looks much like Vernon Castle as I remember him [I'll never forget the time I interviewed the Castles and a monkey in their dressing room [at the Studebaker, I believe!], portrays the late and great dancer and flyer with pep and sympathy.

Walter Brennan as Walter is a friendly and lovable soul. . . . Other rôles are nicely turned out, and technically the film is a darb.

O those dancing feet of Rogers and Astaire! They SAY "The Story of Vernon and Irene Castle" is their last movie together.

I HOPE NOT!

See you tomorrow.

"In Memoriam," a musical tribute to the late Gabriel Fauré by his fellow countryman, Florent Schmitt, was recently given its first performance at the Concerts Lamoureux in Paris.

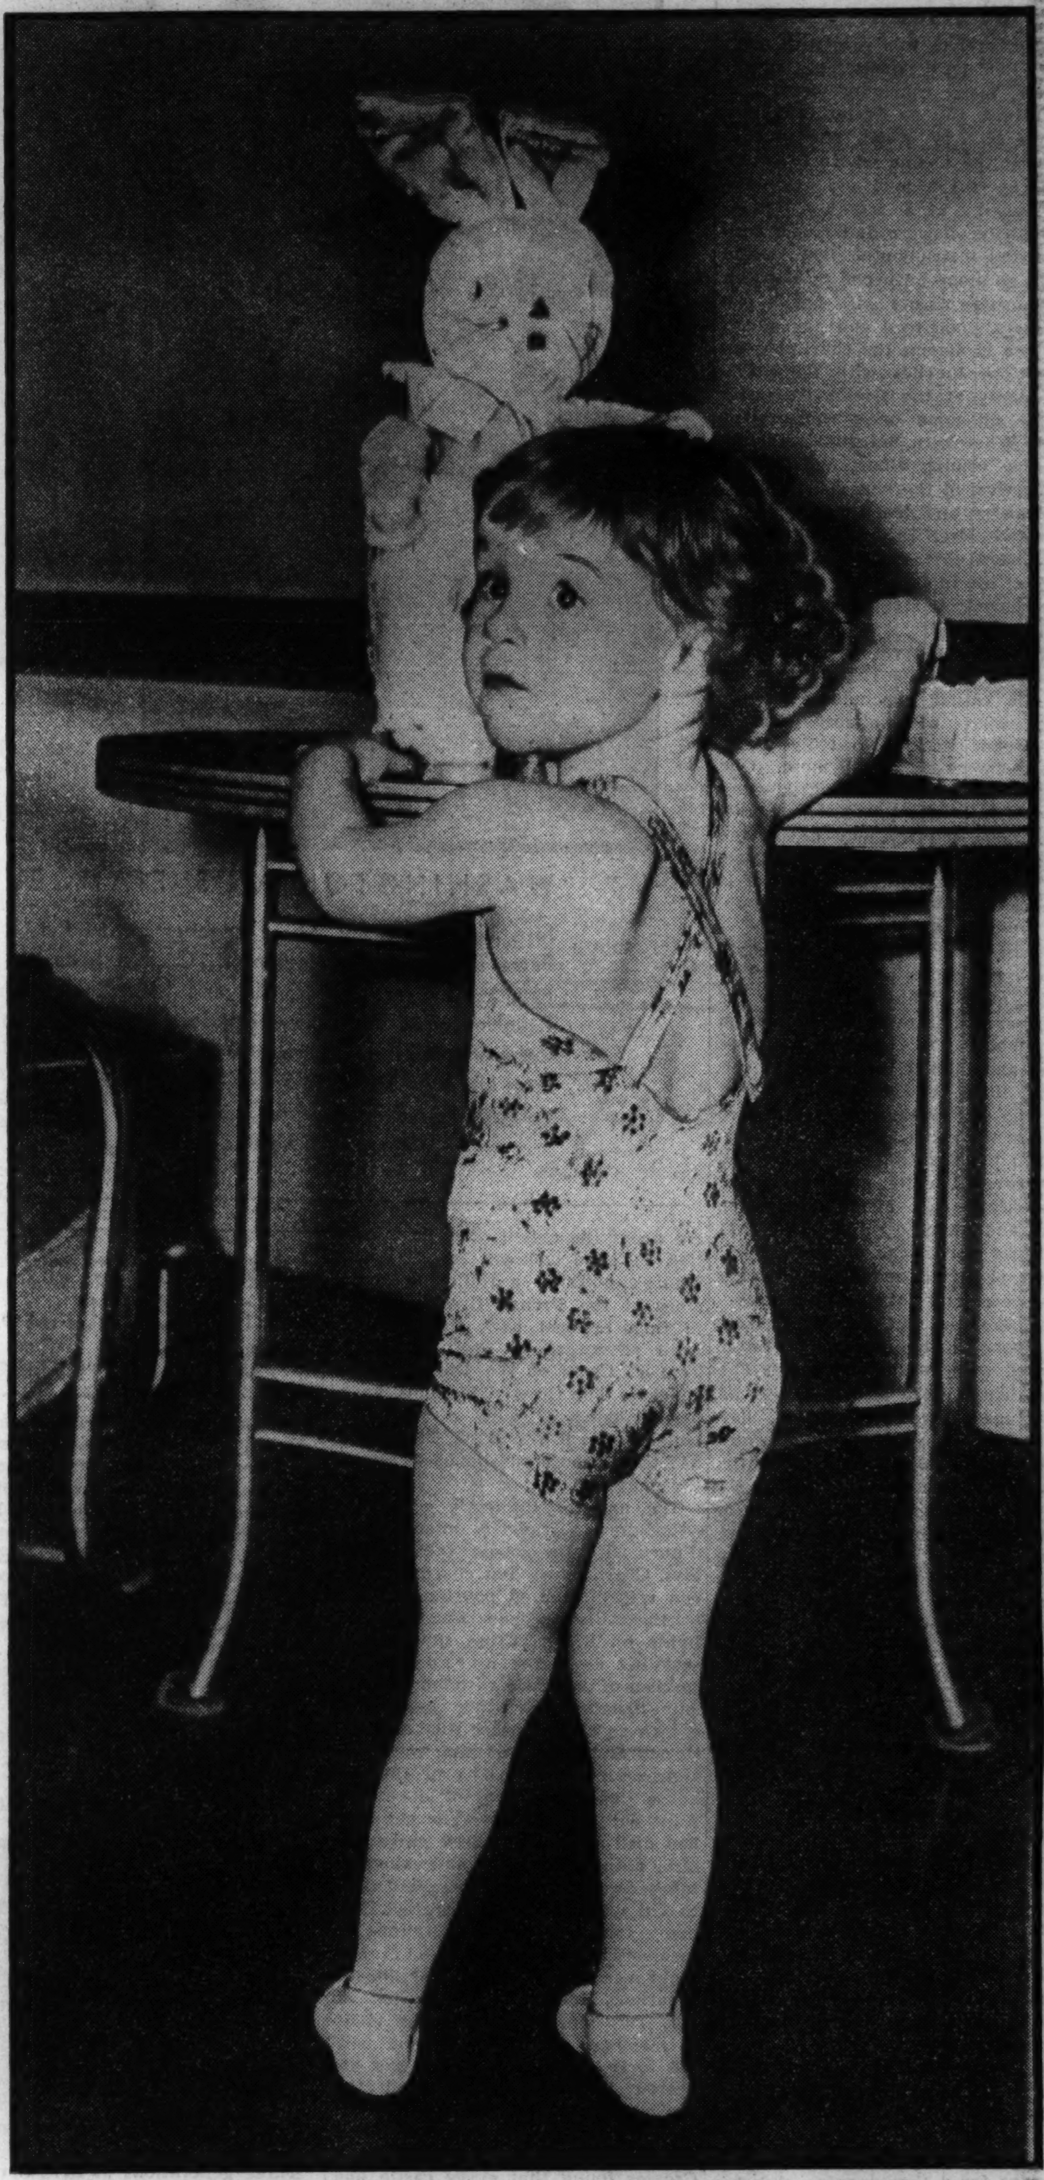
Chicago Sunday Tribune
THE WORLD'S GREATEST NEWSPAPER
APRIL 9, 1939.



Above: Elizabeth Van Alyea's mother, Mrs. O. E. Van Alyea, is interested in the Easter bonnet breakfast to be given today at the Drake for the benefit of the Salvation Army Woman's Home and Hospital

Barbara Skahen was modeling a bathing suit in a juvenile fashion show on the near north side when this picture and several others on this page were taken, but she was far more interested in the Easter bunny on the table than she was in displaying to an admiring audience the diminutive suit.

Suzanne Skahen, being older than her cousin Barbara, finds modeling amusing, but she is not too old to be interested in an Easter bunny also.
[TRIBUNE PHOTOS]

Richard Allen Rosenfield is not certain that he enjoys being a fashion model, even when he wears such a cunning suit as this one.

Daphne Hersey wears a frock of dotted swiss trimmed with lace, insertion and velvet ribbons as part of her Easter outfit. She is one of the two daughters of Mrs. Edward Hart Jr.

If One Is Social One Lunches at Casino Today

By Cousin Eve.

Easter arrives this year with more than the usual quota of bright flowers, many charming vistas into the future, and no Easter weddings. If one is very social, one lunches today at the Casino where two hundred cheerful friends and neighbors are feasting at a score of tables, with Easter flowers and music both vocal and instrumental. The Casino leaves no stone unturned to brighten up Chicago's corner with happy get-togethers, good food and gay music.

If one is among the charitably inclined one lunches with the Salvation Army at the Drake, balancing a new lid upon one's well coiffed head. What with Salvation's Doughnut day coming along, and the recent arrival of the new central states commander and his attractive wife, Mr. and Mrs. Ernest I. Pugmire, who have just come from twelve years of life in China and Japan, this great charity is staging much spring activity.

If one is conservative one lunches "in the country." This phrase has all the casual nonchalance of the time worn, now almost obsolete "week-end party." No truly smart person "week-ends" any more. One simply "goes to the country"—and nobody presumes to ask where this mysterious country may be, as the subject is far too delicate and elusive. To "go to the country" on Easter is therefore tops in high fashion.

Easter was ushered in by style shows, numerous and nice. I went to one at the Ambassador where the tables spread all over the Pump room and lobby, and mannequins were taller and thinner than ever and carrying little wicker lunch baskets. But the matter that really intrigued me was the polka-dotted bride.

Even the beautiful long white veil was covered with snowflake polka dots. Hats had much flora upon them and likewise some fauna, that is, flocks and flocks of birds.

You pay your money for clothes this year and take your choice—frocks are slim and nine inches from the floor. Or they are all-pervading covered with ruches and ruffles and long. There were also at this style show many gypsylike stripes, harboring as many colors as Joseph's coat. Brazil, which I visited recently, was awash with these striped silks—they called them carnival silks—of lovely quality and wild combinations.

One did not see cotton evening evening gowns, but I hear Paris still features them. Viewing these fantasies of spring were Mrs. Potter Palmer, Mrs. A. H. Patterson, Mrs. Barrett Wendell, Mrs. Edward R. Bacon, Mrs. Otis Chatfield-Taylor, Mrs. Leander J. McCormick, also Mrs. Harry Spencer-Brown, lately landed from Paris and looking, as usual, the chic Parisienne.

Otis Chatfield-Taylor is a true son of his father, with so many of the qualities that made Hobart C. Chatfield-Taylor a leader of Chicago society. This was in days long past, when society liked to have "leaders," cotilions had to be "led," and nobody did much independent thinking on this many-headed subject. So Hobart C. Chatfield-Taylor was the big boss of Chicago's dancing set, and a most popular one.

Otis Chatfield-Taylor likes people, music, the stage, dancing, and the entire gamut of get-togethers, and his idea for a theater-going club has caught on like wildfire. The mere outline of the new club [the idea was born in the Charlie Wiman living-room] is for members to attend a good play première in a body. Everybody naturally would be in grand gala and on his toes. No dinner would precede the play, but only a meeting for aperitifs and hors d'œuvres.

Supper and dancing would follow at some well chosen rendezvous, and actors of the visiting company will be be invited to join the party. This would all be strictly Dutch treat and no great burden on the privy purse.

Mrs. Richard T. Crane rushed east last week to meet up with her first grandchild, a son of Florence Crane and William Robinson, or "Robbie," as they call him. This son, born of a father who loves to explore the earth in a rowboat and of a beautiful mother, "divinely tall and most divinely fair," who likes to build ships and does build them, should be quite a boy. The Robinsons own an estate with a house upon it at Tahiti, and so do Cornelius Crane and his wife. But maybe, after all, the baby will get his first teeth at Ipswich, where is Castle Hill, the very magnificent Georgian estate by the sea. This David Adler built for Richard T. Crane, who never cared for the Italian castello which preceded it.

The week before Easter is a quiet week, rather, when foursomes at bridge and a little run to the movies are about the extent of one's frivolities. By good luck one saw "Topper Takes a Trip," a rollicking ghost story of the French Riviera, which in turn brought back the thrilling Irish adventure of Prof. and Mrs. Tom P. Cross of the University of Chicago. The Crosses, it seems, have been making a round of visits in Ireland, and it was Prof. Cross who had the pleasure and honor of seeing the ghost.

The hero of the eerie adventure entertained a friend of mine during dinner with the spooky tale. It was Mrs. Cross, when that charming person was discovered pouring out tea at the Alliance, who put the high lights on it. Dr. Cross saw a lady scuttling down the narrow upper corridor of the castle, with long, bright hair hanging down her back. Her dress was a vague loose robe and she turned and looked at him, then disappeared. The owners of the old house made nothing of it—"Just Aunt Sally" said they. The old lady had died about a hundred years ago after hiding her money and valuables safely away, but before she had time to tell where they were buried. For many years she made visitations to members of the family until one night a nephew, bored by the ghost's gyrations, hurled a candlestick at her. This stopped the ghostly visits to members of the family and now for forty years Aunt Sally has appeared to visitors only, and the broken candlestick and dented wall are still shown to doubting Thomases. On their round of house parties the Crosses found that every castle had its spook, and the owners are rather proud and pleased about it than not.

The funniest ghost of all is the one who drags the bed clothes off the guests in the night.

Of interesting matters next week, I am planning to hear George W. Shepherd, fresh from Chung King, temporary capital of China. Mr. Shepherd calls himself "confidential adviser" to Chiang Kai-shek, and that alone would be worth the journey to the Palmer House on April 11, where the Foreign council holds forth.

Further news about Mr. Shepherd is that he has been active with the able and fascinating Mrs. Chiang Kai-shek in the "New Life" movement, of which the general is president. Having heard much of George Shepherd during my stay in China, but never having seen him, it is certainly wonderful to have him come upon our doorstep.

Coming this way in April is Ronald Tree, M. P., who will speak once more at the English Speaking union, where he made a sensation as a speaker two years ago. Coming also from England in May is Mrs. Algernon Burnaby, Henry Field's mother, who will spend six months in this country. Mrs. Burnaby was Minna Field, a daughter of Henry Field, brother of Marshall Field senior, the great Chicago merchant. She married Algernon Burnaby en secondes noces, and lived very happily at Baggrave hall in the hunting country of England near Leamington.

Three generations of British royalties have been friends of the Burnabys and visitors at Baggrave hall. Since Mr. Burnaby's death in the early winter, this beautiful house and its wonderful gardens were sold, and the widow was free to make her home abroad. But it seems that after all she will take another house in England, and occupy herself with making new gardens, which is a very absorbing occupation.

The Arts Club supper with music on Sunday night was one of the best, and there was less crowd, with more real patrons of music than usual. A remarkable showing of pictures is going on in the Arts club gallery just now, a great number of Henri Matisse's paintings, and the smaller gallery full of canvases by Jean-François Thomas, who died in January in Paris, of privation, alas! And many people are now buying his works, which show a superb technique and ability to paint, now that it is too late to help him.

Pierre Matisse, an attractive Frenchman, came on from New York to open the exhibition of his distinguished father's paintings, and it was the largest tea of Lent, with all the leaders of Chicago's artistic set. Pierre Matisse has a gallery of his own in New York in 57th street.

The Arts club musical went with much style and distinction. After dining there was the usual rush for seats in the lounge below, and finally the artists took seats at two pianos on the small stage and began a choice program. It was one of those occasions when one felt supremely selfish and would have liked to be listening to Nadia Boulanger and Jean Francaix with not more than six others.

They played some Mozart and Lennox Berkley's Capriccio, Nocturne and Polka. The latter composer is an Englishman living in Paris. Then Bach, Schubert, Lipatti, a young Rumanian, and finally the Concertino of Jean Francaix, a piece as brilliant and changeable as a violent summer shower with lightning, soft patter of drops, rainbows and things. It was a vastly appreciated concert. The audience thundered their applause and crowded into the small library to meet the artists afterwards.

Francaix is a charming young man, unspoiled, perfectly natural and delighted with his success. As for Mlle. Boulanger, she is one of those rarely fascinating beings one feels sure is IT wherever she goes and that she is courted like a queen. There is a shining something about the Frenchwoman, an aura of pure gold. Beside Mrs. Goodspeed in delicate gray lace dress, high and long, were Dr. and Mrs. Frederick Stock. Mr. and Mrs. Edward L. Ryerson Jr., René and Mrs. Weiller, Mrs. Cyrus Bentley, Mrs. Tiffany Blake, Mr. and Mrs. George Mason, Mrs. Robert Orr, Adair and Nancy Orr, John Palmer, John and Mrs. Storrs, Mrs. Walter Paepcke, and Arthur Meeker Jr., Mr. and Mrs. Louis Boysen, Mrs. Edward Leight, Mrs. Andrew Sherriff, and Mrs. A. F. Callahan.

The next large celebration at the Arts club will be the annual play written and given by members. The play, re-adapted by Helen Walton Stambaugh from a romance called "The Monk and the Dancer." This snappy piece, in which Mlle. Rodier and the dashing Emily Goebst, president of the famous Service club, have leading rôles, has a quite large cast.

Miss Alice Gerstenberg's library has been the scene of rehersals during March and, having seen one session, I prophesy large box office receipts.

An interesting and unexpected piece of news for people who are in the collecting stage of life is Miss Elizabeth McCormick's sale early next month of her entire Venetian collection. For ten years this greatest of Chicago collectors has maintained an expensive apartment in a fashionable building to house many of these beautiful pieces. Seventeenth and eighteenth century pieces were carved and painted, were inset with glass, enameled, and quite divine. Of late years Miss McCormick's affections have been diverted to things older and more curious than these made in the heydey of Venetian life, so she has determined to sell what she has of this collection in order to buy other things.

Miss McCormick is supposed to know every reputable antiquary in Europe, and in June she sails for France after the Venetian sale is over, to pick up the things she has ordered from the hinterland, meaning perhaps Greece, or maybe Spain—who knows?

Mission Society Will Celebrate 70th Anniversary

The seventieth anniversary of the founding of the Woman's Foreign Missionary society of the Methodist Episcopal church will be observed when the northwestern branch, largest in the country, holds its second quarterly meeting Friday at Rockford, Ill. The auxiliary of the Centennial church of Rockford, which will be hostess, also celebrates its seventieth anniversary this year.

The society now maintains 4,732 missionaries, including native workers in seventeen countries. Its 350,000 members will celebrate the society's seventieth anniversary at a general meeting next October in Pasadena, Cal.

British Housemaids Form Their Own Trade Union

A housemaid's trade union, working under the direction of the Trades Union Council of Great Britain, has been organized in London. The union will make the following demands to all housewife employers: A fixed number of working hours, probably a 48 hour week; minimum weekly wage, expected to be fixed between $3.75 and $5; regular days off, and no interference in private lives.

To prove that women are as good musicians as men, 32 year old Antonia Brico four years ago organized the New York Women's Symphony orchestra. She is conductor of the Brico Symphony orchestra, a mixed group of 55 women and 25 men.

Women employed in various occupations in the United States today or seeking employment are estimated at nearly 15,000,000, as compared with 4,500,000 about 50 years ago.

Miss Bassett's Debut Enlivens a Quiet Week

By Helen Van Hoy Smith.

PALM BEACH, FLA.

The Romany chorus, wearing white robes in lieu of gypsy costumes, will sing today at the Easter sunrise service on the Breakers hotel golf course. With the exception of the debut party of Miss Marie Bassett Monday night at the Everglades club and the closing dinner-dance at the club, events of the week were quiet and informal.

A live calf was an astonished spectator at the debut party viewing festivities from the vantage point of a small pen on a balcony overlooking the milk bar. Refreshment tables were arranged with fruit and flowers to represent Della Robbia plaques. Miss Bassett, daughter of Mrs. Francis Shaughnessy of Jackson, Mich., wore white marquisette appliqued with gold leaves, shirred bodice, and extremely full skirt. She carried white orchids.

Members of Chicago's younger set attending included Miss Helen Dick, a classmate at Finch Junior college; the Misses Florence Wyeth, Alice Wyeth, Patricia Meredith, Mr. and Mrs. Gilbert Drake, Bruce Macfarlane, Arthur Reed, John Shedd Reed, George Albert Eddy, George Noyes McLennan, and Albert B. Dick III. After the debut, George Albert Eddy Jr. of Evanston entertained thirty at a milk punch party in an Everglades maisonette.

Miss Bassett was introduced to a large group of her mother's friends Sunday afternoon at her home on the ocean front. Miss Dick was among those assisting.

Mrs. George A. McKinlock gave a dinner for the younger set in honor of the Misses Mary, Annie Laurie, and Ellen Ryerson of Lake Forest, who with their parents, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph T. Ryerson, are guests at Casa Alejandro.

Mrs. Lucius Pond Ordway is not one of those who are hurrying away from Palm Beach, but will remain here until May.

A well attended event of Holy Week was the musical Wednesday afternoon at the home of Mrs. O. Nelson Tevander on Barton avenue, sponsored by the woman's guild of Bethesda church.

Naomi and Barney Donnelly, small daughter and son of the Thorne Donnellys, are at the Brazilian Court with their governess awaiting the return of their parents, who are cruising on board the Mako.

Mrs. Paul Healy entertained with a luncheon at the Beach club on Thursday for her sister, Mrs. John E. Baker. Mrs. Healy is leaving next week for Washington, and Mrs. Baker is returning to her home in Lake Forest.

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph M. Cudahy and Mr. and Mrs. Donald R. McLennan were among those giving dinners this week.

Mr. and Mrs. Marvin Hughitt gave a cocktail party at their home on Sea Spray avenue, having a number of fellow Chicagoans among the guests.

Opportunity, Inc., aptly describes a philanthropic project undertaken by a group of Palm Beach society women. Mrs. Oscar W. Johnson of Chicago is president of this company, whose object is to help the needy to help themselves. At present the wives of fishermen in Riviera, a small fishing village across the lake from the resort ,are being aided. These fisher folk, known as "Conks," have inherited the knack of working the shells from long lines of Bahaman ancestors.

The vogue for shell costume jewelry came just at the right time. Fish scales, once relegated to the dump heap, are utilized for making flowers. Red snapper scales are fashioned into violets. Realistic roses are made from scales of the jew fish, while oyster shells emerge as tulips. Tarpon scales are used for larger flowers. The scales are about the size of a silver dollar—if any one can remember that far back—and jew fish scales are somewhat smaller. In the process the scales are soaked overnight in brine, bleached, and then dyed. They are easily cut and curled into shape.

Palmetto and coconut fiber are used for making hats, mats, and baskets. These are handicraft classes for children. Other Chicagoans supporting this project are Mrs. George H. Malcolm and Mrs. Joseph M. Cudahy.

The Everglades club wrote finis to its season on Wednesday night when about 500 gathered at the famed orange gardens.

Mrs. Charles H. Chadwick was elected as a new member of the board at the annual meeting of the Society of Four Arts. Other Chicagoans reëlected to the board were Mrs. George A. McKinlock, Mrs. Joseph M. Cudahy, and Mr. and Mrs. Ralph H. Norton.

London Gives Lebruns Its Best Welcome

By May Birkhead.

PARIS

When you cross the channel, after some days in London, and see Paris again, you cannot but be struck by the contrast between these two great capitals. London seems as spread out as Chicago, and by train it takes a long time to get beyond the urban limits. Paris is more concentrated geographically, although the agglomeration which might be called "greater Paris" is constantly increasing, but its population is scarcely more than half that of greater London.

Both cities, Paris last July, and London very recently, played their respective rôles of hosts to the visiting heads of the two nations. There was some exchange of the classic attitudes of London detachment and Parisian demonstrativeness. The street decorations in London were not as lavish as those in Paris last summer, and Covent Garden, in spite of the brilliant dress of the men and women, could not quite match the scene of July in the Paris Opera. But taken as a whole, it was a superb affair, and there is no doubt it warmed the hearts, not only of the principal figures, but of the populations in the two countries.

The success of the Lebruns' visit has put up M. Lebrun's stock again as a candidate for president to succeed himself. Many are in favor of not having his name presented at Versailles in early April until the last possible moment, so that agreement will fall on his name after the others have been given a chance. It has long been assumed that Lebrun did not hanker for the post a second time, but perhaps that was merely a cagey attitude. In any case, his popularity now is greatly enhanced.

Several of the associations interested in promoting social and cultural relations between France and Great Britain did not lose the occasion to come to the fore. They organized a reception for the Lebruns at the National Art Gallery. One of the most active of them, the Anglo-French Art and Travel society, has as its chairman Lord de La Warr of the British board of education, who recently visited French universities. He took part in the presidential fêtes in London, as did Lady Bessborough and the former Consuelo Vanderbilt's son, Lord Ivor Churchill.

This group arranged a number of public and private entertainments, some at the Dorchester hotel, others in the homes of members. Among the notable French persons who stopped at the Dorchester and partook of British hospitality in town and country were Mme. François Piétri, noted for her looks and dress, whose husband is in the running for the French presidency; Duc and Duchesse de La Rochefoucauld, the latter active for years in agitating women's suffrage for France, and Comte and Comtesse Georges de Castellane. Some of the country houses which this group visited in England include the residences of the Duchess of Devonshire, and those of Lady Allendale, Lady Cunard, Lady Gosford [daughter of J. Ridgely Carter of Morgan's, Paris], Sir Philip Sassoon, and Sir Alfred Beit.

Propaganda Is to Be Subject of Institute

By Betty Browning.

Propaganda, its rôle in European affairs and its influence in this country, will be discussed at the third annual institute of human relations, to be held all day Thursday at the Palmer House. The woman's committee of the Chicago Round Table of Christians and Jews sponsors the institute. Mrs. Frank P. Hixon, former president of the Illinois League of Women Voters, is chairman of the committee.

Mrs. Frank P. Hixon.
[Underwood & Underwood.]

Explaining the choice of the theme, "Propaganda and the Modern Crisis," Mrs. Hixon said: "If the dictators consider propaganda their first instrument of conquest, we in a democracy should have a thorough knowledge of propaganda as our first line of defense against being misled in national and international affairs.

"We were struck with the necessity of being able to recognize propaganda as such, understand its mediums, and examine its source," Mrs. Hixon continued.

"Also in this country, where we have a competition of propagandas rather than a monopoly, we can and should see that there is plenty of good propaganda, based on fact, to counteract subversive propaganda. We have a right to teach our own ideals, and should know how to do so."

Speakers at the institute will be Fulton Oursler, editor in chief of Liberty magazine and ten monthly magazines; Crane Wilbur of Warner Brothers' studios, producer of the 1938 Academy award film "Declaration of Independence"; Clyde R. Miller of Columbia university, secretary of the Institute for Propaganda Analysis; Mme. Irene Harand, editor of the Viennese Catholic weekly Justice until Germany absorbed Austria, and Dorothy Fuldheim, world traveler and commentator.

An attendance of about 1,500 is expected at the sessions, which will run from 9:30 to 3:45 o'clock. A luncheon will be served at noon. Scores of the city's leading women are sponsors of the institute.

Thomas Mann, self-exiled German author and Nobel prize winner, will donate his services as a lecturer tomorrow evening at Orchestra hall in order to help fellow German Christian refugees. He will speak on "Dictators at War with the Democracies—The Consequences." The midwest division of the American Committee for Christian German Refugees will present Dr. Mann. Homer J. Buckley heads the division.

Another interesting discussion of European conditions will be that of Rabbi Charles E. Shulman before the National Council of Jewish Juniors, Chicago section, this afternoon at the Standard club. Dr. Shulman's lecture on "Europe's Moral Decline" will follow the theme of his recently published book "Europe's Conscience in Decline."

Dr. Shulman, who is rabbi of North Shore Congregation Israel in Glencoe, has traveled extensively in Europe and the near east, and is a frequent contributor to periodicals. The Chicago section's cultural groups are sponsoring the meeting jointly with the membership committee and are inviting prospective members and men friends.

Erika Mann, Thomas Mann's daughter and herself an actress and author, will speak at a luncheon meeting inaugurating Chicago youth week on Monday, April 17, at the Morrison hotel. The theme of the meeting will be "The Interpretation of Adult Responsibility to Youth in a Democracy," and Miss Mann appropriately has chosen as the subject of her talk the title of her recently published best seller, "School for Barbarians."

The adult advisory council of the American Youth congress has arranged the meeting. Prof. Paul Douglas of the University of Chicago will preside. Dean Curtis Reese of Abraham Lincoln center, and president of the Chicago Federation of Settlements, will speak for the adult advisory council. Jack Fishbein, acting Chicago chairman for the American Youth congress, also will speak. Mrs. Samuel T. Lawton, honorary chairman of the Chicago Association for Child Study and Parent Education, is in charge of the luncheon.

Another interesting event scheduled for April 17 is a luncheon meeting and panel discussion of "Scientific Research in Group Leadership," to be held at the Chicago Woman's club, 72 East 11th street.

Dr. Ronald Lippitt of the University of Iowa will present for the first time to a Chicago audience the results of a two year experiment in group leadership, directed by Dr. Kurt Lewin at the University of Iowa. Dr. Lewin applied scientific research methods to a study of groups of boys under complete leadership, partial leadership, and no leadership at all.

Possible application of the results of this study to adults, and business and governmental groups, will be discussed by Miss Harriet Vittum of the Chicago Recreation commission; Edward H. Stullken of the Montefiore special school, and V. K. Brown of the Chicago park district. The park district is planning similar experiments with the university's cooperation. There will be demonstrations of recent developments in the parks' activities. Mrs. Moses L. Purvin, chairman of the municipal recreation committee of the Chicago Woman's club, will preside.

Consuls to Be Guests at Art Group Dinner

A "consular" dinner Wednesday evening will celebrate the opening of a spring exhibition by the South Side Art association's 350 artist members at the Auditorium hotel.

Mrs. Albion L. Headburg.

The fact that Elmer A. Fosberg is to be the principal speaker inspired the association to invite all foreign consuls to the dinner. Besides being professor of painting at the Art institute, Mr. Fosberg is Finland's consul in Chicago. He also is president of the Cliff Dwellers and vice president of the Chicago Association of Painters and Sculptors.

The famous Finnish male chorus of the Sibelius club, under Edwin Karhu's leadership, will sing at the dinner. For all its diplomat guests, the association plans to have the party informal. Mrs. Albion L. Headburg, who founded this organization of artists and art lovers fifteen years ago, and has headed it ever since, will preside.

Another artistic event of interest will be the Musical Guild's celebration of its twentieth anniversary at 8:25 o'clock Wednesday evening in the Guild studio, room 825, Fine Arts building. Hour and room number have been made identical to fix them in the members' minds. This will be the final artist program of the year.

Dennis King, Vera Zorina, and other members of the company of "I Married an Angel," and members of the "What a Life" company will be guests of the Friends of Drama at a spring breakfast and guest day Wednesday at the Palmer House. Hope Summers will give a review of plays current on Broadway, and Leonard Huber will sing.

Now in their seventeenth year, the Friends of Drama are headed by Mrs. James E. Lukey, their founder. Hostesses Wednesday will be Mrs. Carroll Shaffer, Mrs. Charles Heggie, Mrs. A. A. Frank, Mrs. George Martin, Mrs. Hal Hanson, Mrs. L. A. Germain, Mrs. J. H. Allen, and Mrs. Floyd Thompson, members of the board.

A different form of poetry will be described for members of the Chicago chapter of the Catholic Poetry Society of America when Anna Lynch, Chicago artist, addresses them this evening on "Poetry in Painting." The meeting will be held at 8 o'clock at the Chicago Woman's club, 72 East 11th street. Mrs. Daniel B. Hayden has been made chairman of the chapter's forthcoming annual dinner on May 22 at the club.

Talented members of the Chicago branch of the National League of American Pen Women will contribute to a program following the branch's luncheon Thursday noon at the Woman's University club, 410 South Michigan avenue.

Polly Simpson MacManus will discuss "The Short Story"; Irene Jean Crandall, "Pageantry"; Clara E. Adrogna, "Radio"; Alice G. Parker, "Editing"; Esther Olson Dummer, "Research," and Ruth Crary Clough, "Markets."

The Friends of American Writers will hear one of their members, Mrs. Robert M. Watkins, discuss "Emerson Interpreted for Our Times" at a literary tea Wednesday afternoon. A board meeting will be held in the morning, with Mrs. James D. Cooney presiding for the last time. Mrs. Cooney's successor in the presidency will be Mrs. Charles H. Stresenreuter.

Reminiscences of New England by members of the Chicago Colony of New England Women will enliven their "Colony Day" meeting Thursday at the Blackstone hotel. Songs and poems composed by Lila Curtis Bates, another member, and music by Mrs. George Bell Nelson, harpist, also will have a place on the program.

A meeting Wednesday and a literary tea Saturday will make this week a busy one for the Musarts Club of Chicago. Shirley Geis will give Edna St. Vincent Millay's "Interim" to an accompaniment of Chopin's nocturnes played by Clara Chayes, when the organization meets Wednesday at the Woman's City club, 410 South Michigan avenue. Florence Feinzimer also will play a group of Chopin compositions. Mrs. Edward B. Weinstein has planned the program, and Henrietta Greenfield Sachs will be hostess.

A symposium, "What Is Happiness?" will be given by Mrs. Leo Harris and Mrs. Morris Lieber at the literary tea Saturday at Mrs. S. Kohn's home, 6649 North Ashland avenue. Mrs. Irving R. Becker, literary chairman, will be in charge.

Critic Replies to Mail: Most Exhibits Free

By Eleanor Jewett.

A great many letters come to this desk asking whether the art exhibitions in the various galleries discussed in this column are open to the public and whether they are free. It may be as well to repeat now the answer we have given before: All of the art exhibits throughout the city and the north shore, in fact any art exhibit no matter where it is held, is open to the public, indeed eager to welcome the public, and the more of the public that tries to see each show the prouder and happier that gallery manager is. The exhibitions are free unless otherwise announced.

Infrequently during the year the first day of a show may be a gala affair with a small entrance fee, asked usually in the name of some definite good cause. The Art institute, as we all know, has certain free days and certain days on which a charge is made. But, on the whole, the art exhibitions are free to every one and the wider an audience they reach the better for artist, gallery, and public. There is no need to buy. One may, but there is no obligation attached to a visit.

April promises to be so filled with amusing and interesting art exhibitions that this may prove to have been a fortunate moment at which to have made the foregoing remarks. It would be a pity were any one kept, through false reasoning, from enjoying the various new April shows.

The Association of Chicago Painters and Sculptors opened last Monday, to continue to April 22, the annual exhibition of work by members at the Chicago galleries, 215 North Michigan avenue. The exhibition is stunning, one of the finest and richest that the association ever has held. No one who has a fondness for good, sound painting, brilliance of technique, and intelligence of composition can afford to miss this show. It is superb.

Equally fine in proportion to its size is the exhibition of prints by members of the Chicago Society of Etchers [the twenty-ninth annual of the society] that opened the first of April in the Roullier galleries, Fine Arts building, 410 South Michigan avenue, to run to April 29. Here is the cream of the etching being done today. The artists are drawn from countries other than our own, England being particularly ably represented. Among the artists whose prints are outstanding are Stanley Anderson, Samuel Chamberlain, Kerr Eby, Frank Benson [dean of American artists in painting as well as etching], and Elizabeth Orton Jones, whose charming "Sewing Circle" will win her many new friends.

Just next door to the Chicago Society of Etchers' exhibition, in the Findlay galleries, 424 South Michigan avenue, is an exhibit of a group of paintings by H. Dudley Murphy, one of the most beautiful one man shows in town this month. Murphy is well known for his brilliance of color and stroke. These paintings are another "must" on an art lover's program.

The Findlay galleries are exhibiting another painting just now that is of interest. It is the portrait of Gen. John Pershing done in oil on stainless steel by Mrs. Buell Mullen of Lake Forest, who already is well known for her portraits on various metals. Mrs. Mullen painted Nelson Eddy on aluminum, Gov. Lehman on brittanium, Eugene Ormandy on chromium, and other sitters on copper, gold, and everdor.

The portrait of Gen. Pershing on stainless steel is one of her most successful works. It is to be installed permanently in the observation car of the Burlington railroad's "General Pershing," the ninth Zephyr in the road's fleet of Diesel powered trains.

For those who revel in modern painting the Katharine Kuh gallery, 540 North Michigan avenue, opened April 3, to continue through April 30, an exhibit of work by Carlos Merida which consists of ten variations on a Mayan Motif and ten variations on a Love Theme. Merida is ultramodern, so you may have difficulty in recognizing which variation you are observing, but, probably, you will be amused.

The Arts club is offering three interesting exhibits, which opened March 30 to continue to April 18. In the large gallery is a comprehensive showing of paintings by Matisse, a name so familiar it needs no discussion. The pictures date back as far as 1896 and are as up to date as 1938. As you follow them you will note the entire sequence of development that modern art has followed along fairly standard lines. There is nothing startling and nothing that today strikes one as novel about the various paintings. The present type of work Matisse is turning out, from the Arts club evidence, is slighter than that done fifteen years ago. It is apparently a mere scratching on paint, color, and not content being emphasized.

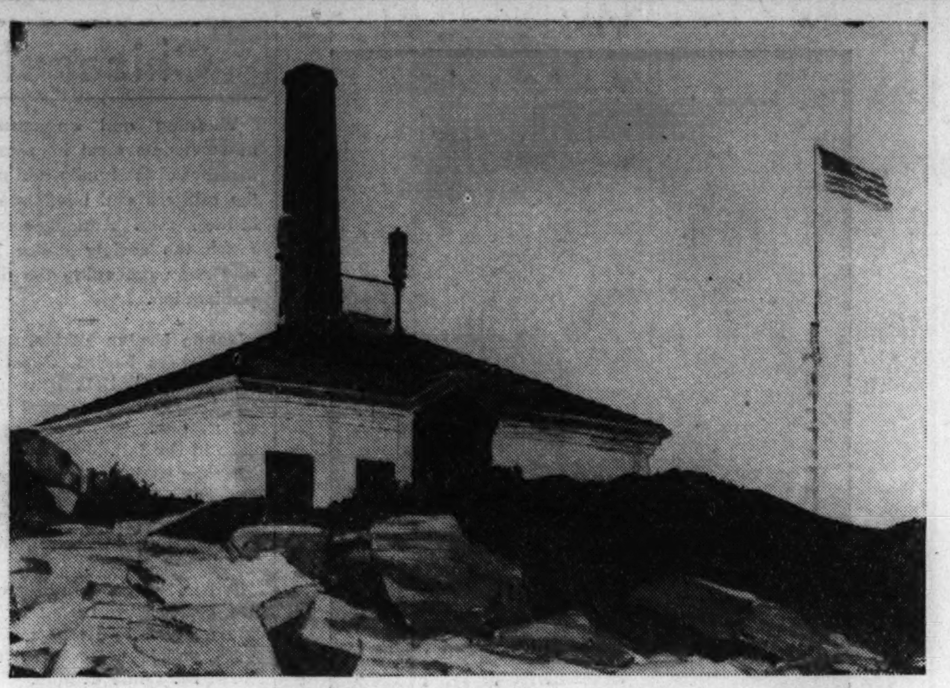
The second gallery is devoted to the abstractions of B. G. Benno, which, like all abstract compositions, stress pattern with color a cool complement. Benno is devoted to the sweetly fluent shape of the egg and there are one or more eggs in many of the paintings. A flood of threatening black creatures against a brilliant background is one of the dynamic conceptions found in the show, but, on the whole, the effect caused by the paintings is that of remote austerity, of mathematical chill.

The third of the Arts club exhibits is truly delightful, compensating those who do not care much for Matisse or Benno for having given their time to investigate the exhibitions. The paintings are by Jean-Francois Thomas, who paints in an impressionistic manner with a rich and delightful palette. His flower studies are entrancing; the miniature still lifes are gems. In his paintings of people the grouping and atmosphere remind one strongly of Watteau and Fragonard. They are deliciously romantic.

The annual exhibition of painting and sculpture by members of the Chicago Society of Artists opened yesterday at 227 North Michigan avenue, to continue for two weeks. The society is celebrating its fiftieth anniversary. The society is made up of most of Chicago's better known modern artists, and its exhibitions are invariably modern in tone. Those of the last several years have not been particularly inspiring. Even modern art, it seems, needs to take a new lease on life occasionally. This year's show may prove to be the critical one. Among the members are Ethel Spears, Elise Donaldson, Beatrice S. Levy, Andrene Kauffman, Clara MacGowan, Florence Arquin, and John F. Stenvall.

The Northwest Art league has a delightful exhibit of work by members at the Edgewater Beach hotel to April 15. There is a number of attractive paintings in the show.



"HOUSE OF THE FOG HORN": EDWARD HOPPER

Edward Hopper is one of three painters to be given an entire gallery for his work in the Current International Water Color show at the Art institute. His painting is simple and austere. The exhibition continues to May 14.

Cubs and Sox Are Knee Deep in Desert Fans

By Lolita Linn.

PHOENIX, ARIZ. The desert gave the Cubs and Sox a hearty western welcome last Saturday and Sunday. The stadium was packed, every knothole in the fence was taken an hour before game time, and outfielders who undertook to chase long flies found themselves knee deep in spectators.

The rivalries of baseball seem to know no limitations of distance or race. We have never, even in Chicago, met more rabid Sox fans than the four Mexicans who sat behind us chattering excitedly in Spanish and cheering loudly when Luke Appling made a much needed home run.

Society of Phoenix and Tucson gathered in the Westward Ho before the game Saturday for the last continental buffet of the season. This buffet, offered every Saturday noon during the season, has been a social institution in Phoenix for ten years. Guests from the resorts roundabout doff their riding clothes and come in for a bit of town life.

Of all those who visit Arizona, the most to be envied are the children who come out to go to school. For the desert is a child's paradise. There are no mittens or galoshes to worry over; there is a horse to ride, a glamorous cowboy always ready to explain the mysteries of rope spinning—and romance and adventure lurk on every trail.

One of the best known of the desert schools is the Judson School for Boys, just out beyond Camelback inn. Lately the boys of Judson school and the boys of the Desert and Southern Arizona schools of Tucson have been competing in a tournament of polo and tennis. Polo is the natural sport for boys out here, for good riding is taken for granted and it is hard to beat the western cow pony as a polo partner.

A star rider at the Judson is Billy Swift, nephew of Mr. and Mrs. James Minotto of Phoenix.

Other Chicago boys attending the school while their parents winter on the desert are John Jr., Timmie, and Mickie, sons of Mr. and Mrs. John J. Louis of Evanston, and Charles, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles R. McKay of Chicago. Mr. and Mrs. McKay came to Arizona this winter after a year in Honolulu. Their daughter Marjorie is attending the Jokake school. Dick Noel goes to the Judson school from Camelback inn, where his father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. D. S. Noel of Champaign, Ill., have been vacationing.

The Jokake School for Girls, adjoining Jokake inn, seems particularly close to Chicago, for the head of the school is Miss Lilias S. Bill, formerly of Highland Park and well known to Chicago for the European travel school which she conducted for fifteen years. Miss Bill does not mind admitting that she attended classes at the University of Chicago when Cobb hall was the "quadrangles," but we imagine that her pupils have difficulty keeping up with her in energy and humor.

Mrs. Ruth Melody, the delightful housemother of Jokake, comes from Highland Park, and Miss Dorothy F. Ellinwood, instructor in science and mathematics, is from Waukegan and was graduated from Northwestern university.

Last Saturday was a large day for Jokake. In the afternoon the pupils entertained themselves and their guests with two plays. In the casts were Jean Ginter, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Howard Ginter of Evanston; Betty Rinehart, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. T. M. Rinehart Jr. of Detroit, and Lillian Lincoln, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John C. Lincoln of Cleveland and Phoenix. The makeup was by Mary Randall, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles P. Randall of Chicago and Traverse City, and Franja Hutchins, daughter of President and Mrs. Robert Maynard Hutchins of the University of Chicago. Stage managers were Nancy Kieckhefer, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Walter F. Kieckhefer of Milwaukee, and Joan Burgess, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth F. Burgess of Hubbard Woods.

Saturday evening a party was given for the school by Mrs. Albert B. Ashforth of New York City. She is the mother of George T. Ashforth, director of the school, who, with Mrs. Ashforth [Barbara Evans], founded Jokake in their own home just five years ago.

Perched upon a mountainside, not far from Camelback inn, is a tutoring school, Los Arcos, where students may continue their studies according to a program outlined by their schools at home. Los Arcos has a choice location. Its veranda has the best view we have seen of mountains, desert, and irrigated valley, and the queerly shaped rocks against which the school snuggles so cozily offer youngsters endless possibilities for exploration and sport.

A few grownup guests come to stay at Los Arcos every winter. Stopping there at present are Mr. and Mrs. Rene d'Harnoncourt [Sarah Carr] and her sister, Miss Malcolm Carr of Chicago. Carol Ryrie Brink, well known writer of juveniles, is spending the winter at Los Arcos with her daughter Nora. Sue Stern, daughter of the Lawrence Sterns of Chicago; Constance Morrell, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Morrell of Ottumwa, Ia., and Betty Beuschauen, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Corkey Beuschauen of Crystal Lake, are among the pupils attending the school.

All the Americas Are to Unite in Fete on Friday

Mrs. Dorothea Seeley Davis, member of the league, who has charge of the program, will sing Spanish and South American folk songs. Although not a professional singer, Mrs. Davis has studied seven years in Italy, and is a pupil of Paul Althouse of the Metropolitan Opera company.

Edwin M. Clough, executive secretary of the World Citizens' association, will talk on "The Spirit of Pan-Americanism," and Salvador Mendoza, young Mexican tenor, will sing Mexican songs.

Judith Lopez-Diaz will dance a "fire" dance, and Miss Faith Hunter Dodge will speak briefly on the flags of South American nations. A drum and bugle corps will open the program, and there will be dancing to the music of a South American orchestra afterward. Mrs. William Cuthbertson, president of the branch, will conduct the meeting.

Two Catholic Organizations Plan Benefits

The first Saturday after Easter has been chosen by two of the largest Catholic organizations as the date for important benefit parties. The Big Sisters will give their spring card party, one of two philanthropic events sponsored each year by them, at 2 o'clock Saturday at the Palmer House. The annual benefit party of the Ladies of Isabella will be held that evening at the Stevens hotel.

Miss Marcella R. Schmitz.

Raggedy Ann "dolls," one from each of the thirty-one councils of the Ladies of Isabella, will auction off their tatters to raise additional funds at that organization's party. This year the proceeds will be devoted to a projected cottage for crippled children at St. Mary of Providence institute, 4242 North Austin avenue. This cottage is to provide a scientifically equipped swimming pool and a model therapeutic department for the handicapped children, representing all denominations, whom the institute serves.

Mrs. Emma Huising Wall, supreme grand lady of the Ladies of Isabella, is general chairman of the party, with Miss Marcella R. Schmitz, grand lady of Perez council; Miss Marie Zimmermann, supreme treasurer, and Mrs. Cecelia Vandervoort, grand lady of Our Mother of Perpetual Help council, as co-chairmen.

Heading committees are Miss Anne F. Horne, supreme scribe, patrons' committee; Miss Barbara Manderscheid, program committee; Mrs. Hattie Gibbons, Mrs. Marguerite Bergen, Miss Elizabeth Regan, Mrs. Catherine Salika, and Miss Ida Loraen.

For twenty-one years the Big Sisters have helped underprivileged girls to become useful, well adjusted citizens. Mrs. George V. McIntyre, public guardian of Cook county, helped to found the organization, and has headed it since the first year. Miss Mildred Partridge, ways and means chairman, is in charge of the party next Saturday. Mrs. James J. Callaghan is treasurer; Mrs. Charles Megan, chairman of table prizes; Mrs. Robert P. Tobin, chairman of door prizes; Mrs. L. Robert Mellin, chairman of patronesses, and Mrs. Marshall V. Kearney, publicity chairman. Miss Rita Kathryn McCarthy is one of the junior committee which is assisting with arrangements.

Once a year the Women's Advertising club interrupts its schedule of program meetings to give a benefit for its civic and philanthropic activities. Next Saturday afternoon at the Drake hotel the 200 members and their friends will meet to play bridge.

Additional "advertising internships" for deserving students at the Northwestern university School of Commerce will be financed with a part of the proceeds. Another portion will go to a fund for the Josephine Snapp award, which the club gives each year to a woman whose work in the advertising field has been outstanding.

Miss Estelle Ryan is general chairman of the party, with Miss Mercedes Hurst, Miss Elsa Smith, and Miss Shirley Dahl assisting. Mrs. Consuela H. Miller is president of the club.

A card party will be given by the John B. Murphy hospital auxiliary for the benefit of the hospital's dietary department on Saturday evening at the Butler house auditorium, Broadway at Belmont avenue. Serving on the general committee are Mrs. William P. O'Grady, Mrs. Charles G. Irons, Mrs. Frederick H. Kampf, Mrs. I. Chevlin, Miss Mary McAvoy, and Miss Margaret L. McAvoy.

Mu Phi Epsilon's school of music at Gads Hill settlement will be benefited through a musical and tea to be given by Iota Alpha chapter of the National Honorary Musical sorority on Wednesday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Harry G. Winston, 2130 Lincoln Park West.

On the program will be Elise Arbuthnot Byler, contralto; Rachel Boothroyd, harpist; Marrie Mitchell Maier, soprano, and Helen Lindsey Schonlau, pianist, with Frances Grund and Dorothy Jane Scott as accompanists. Edith Trewartha Dorsey is president of the chapter. Grace Desmond Holland has planned the event.

Proceeds of a dinner-dance given last week-end by the Rose Dodge Foundation will be used to make Easter a happier occasion for needy orphans. The organization will hold a board meeting tomorrow morning at 209 South State street. A luncheon, an open meeting, and a bridge tournament with a prize for each table will follow. Mrs. Ella Mathisen will have charge of the tournament. Mrs. Charles H. Dodge is president.

The sixth annual dinner-dance of the Helping Sisters will be held next Sunday evening in the Gold Coast room of the Drake hotel. Mrs. Sarah Feldman is chairman of the party, proceeds of which will be used to help families in distress.

The Chicago Alumni club of Phi Sigma Sigma national sorority will raise money to help Jewish refugees through a charity ball this evening at the Medinah club. Miss Jeanne Frank is chairman of the party, with Miss Evelyn Falk and Miss Harriet Rosenthal among those assisting.

When Chicago Was Young:

By Herma Clark

Letters from Martha Freeman Esmond to her friend Julia Boyd of New York.

Chicago, Dec. 31, 1890.

Dear Julia: The last night of the old year! As I look back over the last week I wonder we've survived, with so much eating and merry-making. As our cook was ill, Will and I entertained Martha and Sandy and the children at Christmas dinner at the new Virginia hotel on Rush street. The chef of the Virginia outdid himself in providing delicacies, such as wild turkey, larded quail, and champagne punch. It was delicious, but I hope next year we shall have a simpler dinner at home.

Then we attended the Selfridge reception at the Frank R. Chandler home on Rush street. This was the first post-nuptial party of the newly married couple, and there was a great crowd. The bride looked like a queen in her gown of rose color velvet, with a long train over a petticoat of white satin, embroidered in moss roses. With this stunning gown she wore a dazzling tiara and a necklace of seventeen solitaire diamonds, the bridal gift of Mr. Selfridge. Sandy and Martha attended the evening reception, which ended in a dance, but Will and I, with the sober older folk, were afternoon callers.

Another reception during the holidays was that at the Newell home on Ontario street, following the marriage of Miss Helen Newell to James R. Garfield. The bride's father is president of the Lake Shore and Michigan Southern railroad, and the bridegroom is a son of the martyred President of the United States. We weren't invited to the wedding, which was a small one, but just to the reception afterward. I was pleased to see that the bridegroom looks much like his distinguished father, with a broad forehead and kind eyes.

The bride is a great belle and every one regrets her leaving Chicago for Cleveland, where their home will be.

In the last issue of the Boston Courier I saw an amusing verse describing Christmas in four great cities of the United States. Chicago isn't popular with other centers just now, owing, I suppose, to our having secured the World's Fair, and it seems to be the fashion to hurl shafts of wit at the large feet of our ladies. I wonder if it's true that eastern women have smaller feet than we have. Here is the verse:

Little Penelope Socrates,
A Boston maid of 4,
Wide opened her eyes on Christmas morn
And looked the landscape o'er.
"What is't inflates my bas de bleu?"
She asked with dignity.
"'Tis Ibsen in the original.
O joy beyond degree."

Miss May Cadwallader Rittenhouse
of Philadelphia town,
Awoke . . . as much as they ever do there . . .
And watched the snow come down.
"Well, I'm glad that Christmas has come again,"
You might have heard her say,
"For my family's one year older now
Than it was last Christmas day."

It was Christmas in giddy Gotham,
And Miss Irene de Jones
Awoke at noon and yawned and yawned,
And stretched her languid bones.
"I'm sorry that it's Christmas;
Papa at home will stay,
For 'change is closed and he won't make
A single cent today."

O, windily dawned the Christmas
In the city by the lake,
And Miss Arabel Wabash Breezy
Was instantly awake.
"Ah! What's this in my stocking?
Well, in two jiffs I'll know."
And she drew forth a grand piano
From away down in the toe.

I shouldn't venture to copy such a verse for you, except that Will thinks you should see it.

Much love, dear Julia, and Happy New Year!

MARTHA FREEMAN ESMOND.

An example of French architecture is this old residence, built in the 90s for Mrs. John A. McGill. It is a stone structure of two stories, with attic and basement, and has two large towers in front. Above the wide doorways which lead into the four corner rooms from the main hall are pictorial representations of the uses to which the rooms are to be put, such as dining, festivities, reading, etc. The carved staircase and balcony are exceptionally striking.

This house was bequeathed to the Young Women's Christian association of Chicago by Mrs. McGill on her death in 1925, and it is known as the Carrie McGill Memorial residence. In 1927 the association added a dormitory across the rear of the property, harmonizing with the design of the house and making additional room which was much needed.

Included in Mrs. McGill's bequest were the handsome rugs on the staircase and those on the first floor front which were especially made for the house.

Flower Show Has Permanent Pasadena Home

By Ruth Billheimer.

PASADENA, CAL.—After knocking about the city for a permanent and satisfactory home, the Pasadena Flower show, in both its annual spring and fall editions, is now able to stretch and luxuriate in the series of buildings given by a local benefactor and named for her, the Fannie E. Morrison Horticultural center.

From Thursday afternoon, which was set aside for a public preview costing twice as much to attend as the remaining three days, the annual spring flower show was in progress last week. It closed Sunday leaving a happy feeling in its wake that a dream of years had been realized at last—a realization made possible largely through the vision and work of Dr. Phillip Schuyler Doane, former Chicagoan, president for three years and now vice president of the Flower Show association.

Joined together around an open square are four buildings which house the exhibits of rare plants, cut blooms, flower arrangements, and garden supplies. In the courtyard's four corners this season bloomed primroses and primulas, azaleas, pansies . . . all massed into a carpet of color. An idea for a flagged patio with potted blooms was suggested in another spot. In the center stood a portable charcoal "pit" with benches near enough for toe-warming after standing about in the evening dampness.

Behind the group of buildings, clustered at the northeast end of Brookside park in Arroyo Seco, is a sloping area where the combined garden clubs demonstrated what could be done with a hillside lot. And Mrs. Fletcher Dobyns, known formerly as a landscape architect in Chicago, was largely responsible for its total effect.

It was with a certain thrill that members of the Chicago colony here discovered the names of fellow colonists labeling numerous exhibits and featured high among the prize winners.

The Conrad H. Matthiessens won first prize for their 50 square feet of foaming pink azaleas. George W. Blossom won a first prize for his narcissus blooms and Mrs. Frank H. Sellers for her flower arrangement, a single miniature. A pair of crystal horns of plenty which she had filled with cream and white freesias, ranunculas, sweet peas, and stock won a third place, and Mrs. Edwin Morgan Sherman's arrangement for a patio coffee table . . . pink azaleas in a squat, turquoise crackled dish with a Japanese figure emerging . . . won a second in that class. Her display of cut sweet peas won third.

But it was Mr. Blossom, appropriately enough, who might be said to have won Chicago's sweepstakes in flowers. In addition to his first prize, he won seconds for his waxy pink antirrhinum, for his five specified varieties of sweep peas, his tall, blue San Gabriel iris, and his fat pink snapdragons.

From Santa Barbara, too, came an entry of interest, that of Mrs. Oakleigh Thorne, who sent a rare variety of daffodils.

Miss Lurabelle Murphey, a former Chicagoan and daughter of the Elmer R. Murpheys, will have a honeymoon abroad as a gift from her bridegroom, William Galbally Jr., whose parents reside at Riverslea, Grassendale Park, Liverpool, England. They will be married April 22 and will sail the 29th on the Aquitania to visit his family on their country estate, which is near Chester. They expect to see much, too, of Mrs. Trevor Stamp [nee Bosworth of Evanston] and will later go on to Paris, Venice, and Florence, where Lurabelle went to school, and to Rome. They will return here in August.

Numbers of invitations were received in Chicago for the golden wedding reception of Mr. and Mrs. Harrison Barnett Riley last Monday afternoon at which they were assisted by their daughter, Mrs. Kenneth Cotton Brown, and their son, Donald Riley, both here from Chicago.

On the east-bound mail were the names of the James Cardwells of Barrington, the Fred Amds, R. D. Cunninghams, Chester A. Cooks, Raymond Cooks, Charles M. Cartwrights, Frank Parker Davises, John H. S. Lees, John Meakers, Amos C. Millers, Robert Lindsay Scotts, all of Evanston; Mrs. Amy Marshall of Elgin; Mrs. Grace Shakespeare, Gavin Williamson and Phillip Manuel of Chicago.

Among the former Chicagoans who paid their respects to the Rileys were the Oliver Hinsdells now of Culver City, Carrie Jacobs Bond, Mrs. Robert J. Burdette, the Robert A. Millikans, Ralph F. Burnhams, Scott Browns, Alson Clarks, Robert W. Campbells, Dr. and Mrs. Archibald Church, the Fletcher Dobynses, the Henry and the Richard Dakins, the Max Farrands, Myron Hunts, Guy McCabes, William Masons, William A. Magies, Paul McGinnises, Edwin M. Shermans, Dr. and Mrs. Theodore G. Soares, and the Archibald Youngs.

Also Mrs. Daniel H. Burnham, Mrs. James A. Culbertson, Mrs. Laura Fertig, Mrs. Madeleine Goss, Mrs. George Ellery Hale, Mrs. E. F. Robbins, Mrs. Frank H. Sellers, Mrs. Marion Kavanaugh Wachtel, Thomas G. Winter, and Mr. A. F. Banks.

Congratulations are in order for Mr. and Mrs. Albert Buckingham Sturges [Molly Alger] whose first-born, a little girl, arrived recently in Pasadena. George D. Sturges of Point Loma, San Diego, is the paternal grandfather. The baby's grandmother is Mrs. Leila P. Sturges of Pasadena.

Much merriment was caused by the Gay Nineties costumes that were brought from old trunks for the Huntington's most recent party. Charming Mrs. George Gordon Crawford of Birmingham, once queen of Comas in the Mardi Gras and one of the most popular members of the winter colony this season, came as Mrs. Potter Palmer of a generation ago. She wore fitted pink satin under draped black lace, garnished with large velvet roses. She wore also a twinkling tiara upon her pompadour.

WILL BE FALL NEWLYWED

Mr. and Mrs. John Barret Scarborough of New Canaan, Conn., formerly of Chicago, have announced the engagement of their daughter, Frances Barret Scarborough, to Joseph R. Naylor Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph R. Naylor of Wheeling, W. Va. The wedding will take place in the early fall.

Waits 22 Years for Divorce, but Still Is Married

There lives in Mexico City a venerable woman, Señora Maria Lucilla Ponce Anduaga, who has decided to remain a matron because the courts took so long, twenty-two years, to grant her a divorce, and, as she is so well along in years, she figures there is no kick in being a divorcée.

This strange case goes back to 1917. Then Señora Anduaga, ascertaining that the man she married in 1909 had another lawful wedded wife, filed suit for what amounted to a divorce—annulment. Her tricky spouse was jailed and convicted as a bigamist. The court took the divorce-annulment action under advisement. Meanwhile things political in Mexico became very much upset. The case was sidetracked.

It did not reach the Supreme court—some enterprising young lawyer discovered the ancient case and convinced the aged plaintif that it ought to go to the highest tribunal in the land—until Feb. 15. The justices decided that the elderly woman had a perfect right to a divorce. But she doesn't want it.

The man in the case is still enjoying life. He got only five years in jail, but, as he was a model prisoner, they let him out after he had served half his term. He is still married to his first wife. They are happy. So, seemingly, is everybody else in the case, including the enthusiastic young lawyer who took the case to the Supreme court on a technicality.

English Schoolgirl Wins Medal for Life-Saving

Miss Audrey Clark, Ashford, England, schoolgirl, has been given a gold medal by a Belgian society for saving two men from drowning.

"Aunt Lizzie" Winn, 88, a Creek Indian woman from the hills of eastern Oklahoma, has, during her lifetime, adopted and reared 53 children of the tribe.

Miami Society Marks Easter at Lake Wales

By Clarissa Greene.

MIAMI, FLA.—Many of the winter social colony drove yesterday or last night to Lake Wales in the central part of the state to attend the Easter sunrise service there, where a chorus of 4,000 voices adds to the grandeur of the concert from the Bok singing tower. Others will crowd churches of the area to attend services.

Smartest clubs of the area have entertained lavishly for children belonging to member families, and the Surf club added an egg rolling for children of the little town of Surfside yesterday.

At the Bath club elaborate preparations were made for the party with an egg rolling at 11 o'clock, games which required the children to pin a carrot on the bunny's nose, an egg hunt, a monkey and organ grinding man, with luncheon at high noon in both clubs. An early reservation was made for Theodore Gary III., whose parents, the Theodore Garys, left for Chicago Monday, leaving their small son with his grandparents, the Hewett Browns. Mrs. Brown, whose inspiration the party was, served as chairman of this first annual children's Easter party committee. Mrs. George E. Van Hagen of Chicago was on the committee.

The J. D. Allens entertained with a farewell party at the Bath club Tuesday night, leaving Wednesday for their home in Chicago. Mrs. Ralph Mills of Chicago was among the guests.

Mrs. Herbert W. Young left Saturday on a West Indies cruise on the North Star, to be gone a week.

The George W. Reineckes arrived from Chicago yesterday to spend ten days at the home of the A. J. Biglers. They will then go to St. Petersburg to drive Mrs. Reinecke's parents, the James Gilmores. The Biglers entertain today at the Bath club with a luncheon honoring their house guests. Mrs. Charles E. Krum is among the guests.

Among many late stayers are Mrs. A. C. Battelle and her daughter, Mrs. E. Battelle Offutt. Mrs. Offutt will go to New York in May for two weeks, returning here to join her mother for the homeward trip to Chicago the last of the month.

The Junior F. Getzes took off for Palm Beach Wednesday for a couple of days, accompanied by Michael Gallagher of Cleveland, who arrived that morning.

Miss Evelyn Ewart, Chicago soprano, recently presented a group of songs, among which were two written by Olive Dungan Pullen with lyrics by Vivian Yeiser Larramore and Gertrude Gore. All three were present at the tea party given at the home of Mrs. Richard L. Hoxie and Mrs. Robert Clay Sherrill for Mrs. Lucia Hanna Hadley, Washington writer and commentator, recently returned from Japan.

Mrs. George M. Patch of Oak Park, who is a guest at the home of her son-in-law and daughter, the John E. Burks, will accompany her sisters, Mrs. William Douglas Merriweather and Mrs. Elizabeth Gilman, also guests at the Burk home, back to New Orleans. The Burks' tea on Monday for the honor guests gathered a happy group of old friends in a beautiful setting.

The young college crowd still dominates the social calendar. James C. Danly of Hinsdale and his fiancée, Miss Anne Mae Schoonover, were honor guests at the Royal Palm club Tuesday night, with Mrs. E. J. Jones of New York and her daughters, Miss Betty and Miss Peggy Jones, as hostesses. Out of town guests included William Bradford and John Dellinback of Chicago, students at Yale, where Mr. Danly will be graduated in June.

The Fred D. Breits gave a luncheon in the Bayside Nautilus Gardens Tuesday for a group of Chicago friends, including the Bert Hendersons, Miss Ruth Henderson, Mrs. John Lawson, John Lawson Jr., Richard Lawson, the William Halls, Miss Katherine Ahern, Mrs. Leslie Harbison, and Mrs. Philip Harrington.

Women of the Bar Will Have Dinner-Dance

At least three members of the Illinois Supreme court and a number of other judges and lawyers are expected to join members of the Women's Bar Association of Illinois at their annual dinner-dance Saturday evening in the Casino room of the Congress hotel.

Miss Bernice Hoffman.
[Hoffman Photo.]

The entire membership of the judiciary and the legal profession has been invited to this party, the one purely frivolous occasion on the association's calendar. Miss Bernice Hoffman, assistant attorney general of Illinois, is chairman of the dinner-dance. Miss Marion L. Marshall heads the association.

Another attractive party will be the 16th annual spring luncheon of the Chicago Woman's Ideal club Thursday in the Crystal ballroom of the Blackstone hotel. Carroll Binder, authority on foreign affairs, will speak on "The United States in a War Minded World." Gudmundur Kristjansson, Icelandic tenor; Mina Smith, concert violinist; Marguerite Neal, harpist, and the club chorus will give a musical program. Mrs. Arthur W. Nelson is president.

A reception and program will mark the silver anniversary of Lady Aberdeen chapter, Daughters of the British Empire in Illinois, at 2 o'clock tomorrow at the House of Biggs, 50 East Huron street. Mrs. Brutus A. McGee will speak. Mrs. George Cooke Adams, president of the British Old People's home and organizer of the chapter; state officers, and charter members will be special guests. Mrs. J. W. Aspley is regent.

Judge and Mrs. Otto J. Kerner, Supt. W. R. McDaniels of the Oak Park and River Forest Township High school and Mrs. McDaniels, and Mrs. Walter E. Johnson, president of the Arché club, will be guests of the Daughters of Indiana at their spring luncheon Tuesday in the Tower room of the Stevens hotel. Ruby Spencer Lyon and her Continentals will give a musical program.

The Daughters of Indiana, headed by Mrs. Frederick Tice, contribute to the Children's Scholarship league, the Chicago Woman's Shelter, and other philanthropic institutions, and also award a scholarship enabling an Indiana girl to complete her high school education. Each year they purchase a painting from the Hoosier salon for their collection, now hanging at the high school in Oak Park.

French Riviera Sun Drenched for Visitors

By Frederic Babcock.

CANNES, France.—This is the winter capital of English society. For that reason it is said to be one of the snootiest places in the world. Some travelers prefer Nice or Monte Carlo as a stopping off place on the French Riviera.

"The casino is the artistic, social, and intellectual center of Cannes," read the travel folder. "During the high season crowned heads and famous men frequent its hall, theater, gaming rooms, and restaurant. Its galas and unique displays set the rhythm of society life, and on them is founded the success of the season."

We set out to see for ourselves. And what we saw confirmed the printed description, as far as society was concerned. But the casino didn't impress us as a particularly desirable hangout for the average American traveler.

In the first place there were certain formalities to be gone through before gaining entrance. Passports had to be shown, antecedents questioned, tickets made out, and money handed over. We waded through enough red tape to reach from here to breakfast. Finally, for a price, we were permitted to enter the halls. But even then our troubles were not over. When we tried to convert our money into chips for use at the roulette tables the exchange desk refused to take it. It appeared that, with half of Europe bankrupt and the other half frantically shipping its gold to the United States for safekeeping, the currency of the richest nation on earth was no good. To a newspaper man in search of a story this was real news.

When we demanded to know how come the dollar had sunk to such a low estate, we were told that some counterfeit American money had been circulating around Cannes, and it behooved the casino management to be careful. "Now," said our informant, "if your resources were only in English pounds——"

This resort, we reflected, could if it would be one of the world's favored places for visitors from across the Atlantic. Its sun drenched climate is nearly perfect; its scenic effects are even more so. It has everything for what the natives call the joie de vivre.

We were about to conclude that the French didn't want our dollars, when the management relented and permitted us to spend our money. By midnight everything was forgiven, everybody was friendly. Vive la France. Vive l'Amerique.

But, even after our delayed reception, we still regarded Cannes as merely a way station from which to start for more interesting places along the Azure coast. The Grand Corniche, for example. Winding over the Alpes Maritimes from Nice to Menton, it is one of the world's most spectacular highways. In our opinion its splendor is exceeded only by that of the Amalfi drive in southern Italy. The auto trip to Grasse, for another example. It leads straight up through flower bedecked villages strangely reminiscent of the hill towns of northern Italy.

No matter which drive you take, you are never far out of sight of the Mediterranean, with its silver beaches and its unbeatable appeal to the pleasure seekers.

Swiss Exposition Will Open May 6

ZURICH, Switzerland.—The Swiss National exposition, scheduled to open here May 6 and to continue to Oct. 29, will be the largest fair ever held in this country. Many fields of industry and art are contributing displays. Textiles, watchmaking, woodcarving, weaving, embroidery, transportation, electrical production, chemistry, forestry, and other lines of activity will have special exhibits.

Summer Cruise Visits Northern, Southern Ports

Announcement of an unusual summer cruise was made last week by Canadian Pacific Steamships and Thomas Cook & Son.

On July 1 the duchess of Richmond will sail from Montreal on a 68 day journey, with calls at New York, Kingston, Jamaica; Colon, Panama City, Los Angeles, San Francisco, Honolulu, Sitka and Juneau, Alaska; Vancouver and Victoria, B. C., and Acapulco, Mexico. From Acapulco there will be an optional trip by motor to Mexico City and thence by train to rejoin the Duchess at Vera Cruz.

Thus both world's fairs will be visited, along with two oceans and both the semi-tropics and the far north, in the course of the 21,000 mile cruise.

5,500 Go on Easter Caribbean Cruises

New York, April 8.—[Special.]—Some 5,500 persons—about 10 per cent more than last year—are making Easter cruises to the West Indies, the steamship companies sponsoring such trips announced today. Twelve ships are carrying Easter voyagers to Bermuda, the Bahamas, and Jamaica. The increase over last year, said James Findlay, general passenger agent of the Furness-Bermuda line, is partly due to the fact that Easter this year coincides with spring vacations in the colleges. Many students are making the trips.

The Voice of the Traveler

Letters regarding travel conditions and experiences are welcomed. Address: Travel Editor, Chicago Tribune.

LINGER LONGER.

Winnetka, Ill., April 2.—To the Travel Editor: The temptation to answer C. Hugo Brandt Jr.'s letter in today's TRIBUNE is irresistible. I traveled for three months in Europe last summer, and he would be amazed at the number of young people I found doing the same thing, but the idea of hiring some one to do that traveling for you is ridiculous. Why not do it yourself? It's cheaper than living at home. That is, by going the Youth Hostel way, living with the people of the country you are visiting, doing the things they do and the way they do them. Mr. Brandt, it's not only thrilling, it's the most wonderful experience to see the sights, not as a tourist who rushes in and gasps at the proper objects, but as one who lingers to see the things they really enjoy, and not the things a guide tells you you should appreciate. Try it some time—you'll never regret it!

B. R. H.

SALUTATIONS.

Chicago, March 25.—To the Travel Editor: Upon reading the highly interesting letter from "A Tribune Fan," I find it necessary by all rules of the game called conscience to exclaim that his idea is a delightful one from my point of view.

His suggestion presents a new train of thought to be explored without delay. I have experienced many "insane" desires, too, but, now that some one else has so frankly set his down in print, mine seem to have taken on a new aspect and I feel more than ever like bursting forth.

With so much of the unbeautiful round about us, it is refreshing to chance upon an epistolic gem such as this, whose brilliance of originality far outshines the present glitter of a self-centered world.

For introducing this subject to a travel conscious group, I salute you, sir! May every detail of your plan meet with success.

GRACE GRONLUND.

BOUQUET.

Lawrenceville, Ill., April 3.—To the Travel Editor: The TRIBUNE has one of the most attractive travel sections I've ever seen, and I don't mind saying so. The travel magazines, and some of the other American newspapers, are worthy, but somehow they don't carry with them the spirit of travel. Your section does.

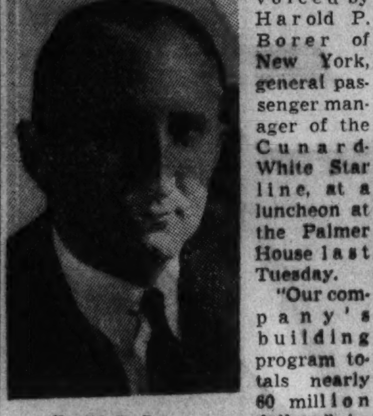
War Clouds Over Europe Vanishing, Says H. P. Borer

Confidence that there will be no general war in Europe this year was voiced by Harold P. Borer of New York, general passenger manager of the Cunard-White Star line, at a luncheon at the Palmer House last Tuesday.



Harold P. Borer.

"Our company's building program totals nearly 60 million dollars," he said. "We shall place the 34,000 ton Mauretania in the trans-Atlantic service this year and the 85,000 ton Queen Elizabeth next year. We wouldn't be investing all this money if we were afraid the travel business was going to be interrupted by armed conflict.

"For the first three months of this year our bookings to Europe were 25 per cent ahead of those for the like period of 1938. This increase, we believe, is an index of the return of confidence on the part of the traveling public."

For more than a year, Mr. Borer said, there have come from across the Atlantic "rumbles of threatened war, rabid pronouncements by heads of governments, threats and counter-threats, followed by overnight changes in the map of Europe." This, he pointed out, has resulted in many war scares, "but the months go by and still no major conflict develops."

Mr. Borer maintained that the people of Europe, far from being excited over the prospect of war, are going ahead on a "business as usual" basis in their preparations to receive the American tourists. He predicted that, under the favorable rates of exchange and the reduced rail rates over there, the Americans will find travel in Europe this summer more economical—and therefore more attractive—than ever before.

Similar opinions were expressed by William E. Fleming, manager of the Donaldson Atlantic Line. The luncheon was attended by more than 100 travel agents. William Franklin Crum, Chicago manager of the Cunard-White Star Line, presided.

GOING SOMEWHERE?

Among this week's travel lectures: At Orchestra hall Saturday afternoon Burton Holmes will give his sixth talk on Sweden. At the Fair store at 11 a. m. Friday W. A. Stickler will show natural color movies of the animal and plant life in the Minnesota north woods.

Last Thursday's TRIBUNE announced that the state department had lifted its ban on travel in Spain, following the ending of the civil war there. As a result, says Manager Edward O'Connor of the Chicago office of Thomas Cook & Son, the only places now closed to the traveler are Canton and the railroad from Shanghai to Peking. Last Monday the Italian line announced resumption of its regular passenger service between this country and Spain. Both the Vulcania and the Saturnia will make Vigo their first stop on the eastbound voyages.

The first "off the beaten track" excursion of the year will be run by the Pennsylvania railroad next Sunday. A special train will leave Chicago for scenic and historic spots in northern Indiana.

San Antonio's Fiesta de San Jacinto celebration, expected to draw a large number of tourists from the middle west, will start a week from today. Six days are to be given over to the pageantry.

Wisconsin's first outdoor life exposition opened at the Hotel Sherman in Chicago Friday and will close next Thursday night. Live samples of the state's fish and game form a part of the large display.

Railroads running between Chicago and Louisville will have special excursions for the 65th annual Kentucky Derby, to be held Saturday, May 6.

Assistant Superintendent Jack Emmert of Yellowstone National park lets it be known that the roads to Old Faithful and West Yellowstone will be open to travel today. This is one of the earliest openings in the history of the playground.

Capt. Theodor Koch last week completed his hundredth voyage as master of the Hamburg American line's Hamburg. Next Saturday he will round out his twenty-fifth anniversary as captain.

On May 24 the American Republics line's Uruguay will sail for Bermuda and Nassau on an eight day cruise lasting over Memorial day. This marks the first time that one of the liners of the "good neighbor fleet" to South America has scheduled a short cruise.

Calendar of Travel Events in Europe Distributed Here

The Chicago Tribune's Public Service office at Madison and Dearborn streets last week received a large supply of "Europe in 1939" booklets, known as the traveler's calendar of events over there.

More than 1,000 of this year's events are listed chronologically. The principal ones also are listed under the headings: "Fairs and Expositions," "Games, Races, and Sports," "Music, Song, and Drama," and "Pageants and Folk Festivals."

Manager John F. Gillespie of the Public Service office announced that the booklets could be had, free of charge, by those calling in person. Persons wishing to have one mailed to them, he said, should inclose 2 cents postage.

The pamphlets are published by the Institute of Foreign Travel, representing all the trans-Atlantic steamship lines.

Styles the Mirror of History

FASHION is a stern taskmistress. She used to be more adamant than she is now.

● Marie Antoinette, hapless queen of France, stuck feathers in her hair. All the court ladies perforce followed her lead. The price of aigrettes rose until a good one cost 10,000 francs. Some grande dames went broke buying them.

● There were other inconveniences. Headdresses became too tall for the carriages of the nobility. The canaille around Versailles were titillated by the sight of duchesses riding courtward with their heads, awave with plumes, craned out of their coach windows. Serious writers maintained that if the mode persisted architects would have to start building higher doors and ceilings. Before any such drastic changes were made the queen's feathers were gone and her head was off.

● Dame Fashion trips along with history and mirrors it. Marie Antoinette's ladies suffered for her whims. They wore iron hoops in their dresses and pretended to like them. But the woman friends of the men who made the French revolution threw off all restraint and most of the traditional garments of womankind.

● Mme. Tallien wore rings on her toes and nothing on her bosom. With unanimity the new leaders of fashion discarded the chemise. One shapely lady went to a dress ball as a living representation of a classic statue. "They showed everything they shouldn't have shown," wrote one shocked observer. Thin and clinging materials, silk and muslin, were favored; wool and linen were abhorred.

● Fashion changed from day to day. Greek and Roman dresses were taken for models, worn, and discarded. It was said that a Parisienne of the ruling group during the directorate had to have 600 dresses a year.

● Some of the modes, naturally, were bizarre. One (Continued on page two.)

Looking at Hollywood with Ed Sullivan

Ann Sheridan Heads List of "New" Jean Harlows

By ED SULLIVAN

Hollywood.

IT IS ALMOST two years since Jean Harlow died, and although the movies have found a substitute for almost everything, the unique place which she filled in films has not been occupied, which is the finest tribute that could be paid to her platinum blonde importance. Not that the movies haven't tried. Warners at the moment are making efforts that are fairly Gargantuan with Anne Sheridan, M-G-M is hopeful of Lana Turner, Paramount has come closest with Dorothy Lamour, RKO at one time thought that Lucille Ball might qualify, and the other big lots, lacking any semblance of a successor, haven't even made the effort.

Mary Dees, who looked most like Jean and who actually finished the scenes in "Saratoga" for her, was so handicapped by the resultant publicity that she couldn't get a job in films. I received a card from her not long ago, postmarked Australia, where she had gone with a road company of a legitimate show.

What, then, did Miss Harlow have that others have been unable to supply? Her platinum blonde hair was an identification mark that registered most strongly in the public consciousness, I think, and her physical charms had a certain earthy appeal that attracted rather than repelled fans. Movie fans felt that she was one of them—better looking, undoubtedly, but still one of them. She symbolized the good looking, streamlined blonde who lived around the corner or who worked a few desks away in the office. That at least is what the letter writers have tried to express in the ton of mail that has come to her mother since Jean died on June 7, 1937. The tenor of the mail is that "I always felt, from seeing her on the screen, that she was regular."

Mary Dees

The movies, however, did not realize the hold she had on the fans. At one time, when she was at the height of her career, M-G-M was ready to get rid of her contract. That was the time she went on her personal appearance tour, and, perhaps with a fine sense of irony, she picked M-G-M's own houses, the Loew chain, to ridicule the brain trust which had proclaimed her to be all washed up. She appeared with N. T. Granlund, better known as N. T. G., on the night club circuits, and busted so many records that M-G-M sent in a hurry call for her to return to Culver City.

ANN SHERIDAN

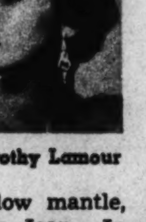
JEAN HARLOW

Her box office strength was the fact that she represented a certain definite type of picture and never deviated from it. Joan Crawford, Jim Cagney, Robert Montgomery, and other stars have become famous for one type of characterization and then attempted to veer away from it, to the disappointment and resentment of their fans; but the Harlow name on a marquee was an implicit promise to the ticket buyers that they would not be disappointed.

A 70-year-old veteran, Samuel Kayzer, well known to an older generation of Chicagoans, was responsible for the charting of Jean Harlow's professional course. She had gone to Mr. Kayzer when she first was becoming successful and asked the veteran voice analyst to teach her to talk differently. "I'd like to play some of the characters that Helen Hayes plays," she told him. Kayzer snorted: "Miss Harlow, that would be suicidal. Your greatest assets are your physical charms and your youth, and your voice has to express them." She never forgot Mr. Kayzer's advice, and while often she was tempted to essay other rôles, a visit to his studio always disabused her mind of the idea. It was that continuity of purpose that perpetuated her popularity with her fans.

Ann Sheridan, the Texas girl who is being groomed by her studio for the Harlow mantle, is completely unlike Jean. In fact, Miss Sheridan, Dorothy Lamour, Lana Turner, and Lucille Ball all are on the brunette side, sultry in contrast to her blonde brittleness. In "They Made Me a Criminal," with John Garfield, Warners succeeded in getting a scene past the censors that was a typical Harlow scene, the wrestling match in which Ann engaged with Garfield and which concluded with both of them on the floor, toasting each other with glasses emptied by the tussle. While it wasn't as daring as Jean Harlow's bathtub scene with Clark Gable in "Red Dust," it was in the same groove.

Lana Turner



Dorothy Lamour

Matching the constancy of the fans who never have forgotten her is the constancy of William Powell to the Harlow memory. He never has been the same since she died, and his generous and touching tenderness toward her mother has been one of the nicer chapters of this town of contradictions.

It is within the realm of possibility that the movies some day will find a substitute for the famous platinum blonde from Kansas City, Mo. It is equally certain that William Powell never will be that fortunate.

That goes double for her mother, who has attempted unsuccessfully to find a certain measure of forgetfulness as an interior decorator.

Another Dictator Is Dame Fashion

group of aristocrats gave a ball. Its theme was guillotined heads. Only those whose close relatives had been executed could attend, and the woman guests wore narrow neckbands of red ribbon to represent the cut of the executioner's knife.

A fortunate chance might start a note that would sweep France in a week. One astute clothmaker in Lyons found the formula. He went into the dressing room of Mlle. Mars, the famous actress, and laid a vast fold of yellow velvet before her.

"Wear this," he begged. "It is marvelous cloth. But I can make no color well but yellow, and there is a great deal on hand. Set a fashion."

The actress hated the shade, but her heart was kind. She had a yellow gown made. When she donned it she wept. "I am a huge canary," she cried. "The performance must be called off." Other members of her company persuaded her to go on. The audience agreed with them that Mlle. Mars had never been so striking.

Within ten days the Lyons manufacturer had sold every yard of his goods. The women of the salons for the time being would wear no other shade. To prove his gratitude the Lyonnais presented the actress with a beautiful villa.

Radical trends in dress continued under the rule of Napoleon. The styles of the consulate and the empire still get respectful consideration. Paris established itself as the style center of the world. Among the women who favored the spectacular in their gowns were the Empress Josephine and Pauline Bonaparte, the hoyden sister of the emperor.

They were bitter rivals. History has recorded one of their clashes. Pauline was married to the Prince Borghese, who possessed one of Europe's finest collections of diamonds. She was to attend a party at Malmaison, where the Creole empress resided. She procured a spectacular gown of green velvet, dressed in it, stuck a few cupfuls of precious stones upon it, and swept into the palace.

But the artful Josephine had heard of the green gown. She had decorated all her great rooms in a hard, uncompromising blue. Pauline looked ghastly. The heroine of the occasion was the empress, entirely without jewels and in a simple gold-edged dress of white muslin.

England was too conservative to follow the French fashions in a time of enmity and hatred. A court dress in London in 1808 had the same lines as those of Marie Antoinette's time — the huge skirt and the tight waist. And milady of England still feathered her hair. But she wouldn't powder it. Prime Minister Pitt didn't know he was doing it, but when he ordered a tax on powder in 1795 he was the instrument of fate in bringing about the end of the white wig.

Napoleon fell and the Bourbons returned to power. There was a reaction to old styles in Paris. The daring costumes of Mme. Récamier, of Josephine and Tallien, were taboo. By 1816 the lady of the court was wearing something with the general shape of, and not much more graceful than, a flannel nightgown.

For a dozen years and more ladies' dresses in Paris and in London and in America grew more and more stuffy, more and more concealing. In the 1830s a woman with pretensions to smartness had to be shaped from the waist down like a farm dinner bell. Hoops came back; it was disgraceful for a woman to have anything like a normal outline. The voluminous creations were to be favored for wellnigh forty years more. They reached the depths of ugliness in the 1850s, after France changed from a short-lived republic to an empire under the sad-faced Napoleon III.

Dominant dressmakers decreed that the skirts would have to be fuller than they ever had been before. The usual materials were too limp to support the flounces that were part of the mode. Even a dozen starched petticoats wouldn't serve. So a material known as crinoline was developed. It was made of horsehair and flax and could almost stand alone.

But alas, even crinoline was too flabby, and the dressmakers, harassed by their own genius, cried loudly to steelmakers for help. The artificers came up with some new gadgets in the way of steel springs and hoops. A lady became a walking hardware store. Strangely enough, she liked it. Skirts billowed out. You could sail a boat with the material a 100-pound girl had to lug about with her.

Statistics compiled in 1854 showed that the steel manufacturers of the world were making ten million pounds of dress springs a year! That's what kept the ladies getting more and more tentlike.

The style held on through the days of our own Civil war and well into the 1870s. Then came a mild revolt. Skirts were shrunk a little. But the pannier came in. It was a looped overdress, something like a pair of curtains, that emphasized the size of the hips. With it came a problem: What, for goodness sake, would a dressmaker hang his panniers on?

That stroke of genius known as the bustle was the answer. It was a device, often of wire, sometimes of padding, that made a lump near the base of the spine. The relieved dressmakers decreed bigger ones. To balance their customers fore and aft they built them out in front above the waist.

Several efforts for dress reform were made during the long era of uncomfortable and unesthetic costuming. George Du Maurier, noted English artist, drew striking pictures of an idealized girl in the 1870s — a creature he described as "divinely tall and divinely fair." Some observers have credited him with starting a movement for more sensible and natural styles. His drawings were almost as pop lar as the Gibson girl became later years.

". . . divinely tall and divine fair."

Mrs. Amelia Bloomer should be forgotten. She seems to ha been filled with the reformi spirit. As editor of an Americ publication called the Weste Home Journal, she designed new feminine costume that fe tured a short skirt and loo trousers or pantalettes gather at the ankles.

America wouldn't adopt and Mrs. Bloomer in 1851 cour geously invaded the Briti Isles. She advocated the she ding of hoops and the cageli corsets that were torturing ha the civilized world. She was n a success abroad, although son Bloomerites braved the ha-ha of the multitude by paradi publicly in pantalettes in Du lin, London, Edinburgh, a Glasgow. Hecklers on one occ sion forced Mrs. Bloomer abandon a lecture. Soon afte ward she wrote a letter to London paper follows:

The stroke of genius known as the bustle.

"Sir: May be allowed your columns ask why t British public so horrified the idea of wo en dressing trousers, seei that they ha for many yea tolerated a nu ber of men fro north of th Tweed in wearing petticoat and shockingly short petticoat too?"

This jab at the bare kn knobs of the Scots helped Mr Bloomer little. She won the su port of nobody much but th doctors, who had long inveighe against tightly laced corset She went away from Englan a disappointed pioneer a few de ades ahead of her time. But he fame lived on, and the deride "bloomers" blossomed event ally into knickerbockers for lad cyclists and bloomer girls' bas ball teams.

More graceful styles cam after 1890. The willowy curv was the aim of every dressma er. In the early years of th present century the drawings o Charles Dana Gibson immorta ized a type of girl who can sti rival any other for charm an smooth appearance.

Almost every popular mod since has emphasized natura ness. Sometimes the emphas was too marked. For instanc when the first sheath gown a rived in Chicago in late 1908 th police had to protect the weare from the jeers of a crowd tha followed her in the streets.

The jeers didn't halt evolutio Woman's dress became more lo ical. It remained, in the eyes o its devotees, beautiful.

Looking back from 1939, seems that Mrs. Bloomer in th ghostland has won two-thirds o her fight. Pantalettes are sti behind the eight ball, but wh could say the vigorous reforme of 1850 wouldn't find today's co sets light enough and the dresse short enough?

Dear Miss Tinée: Tonight I've written my first fan letter! Prompted by Ed Sullivan. His article in The Tribune recently hit me the wrong way—and, as he is on vacation, I'll pass my impressions on to you.

Having just seen Franciska Gaal in "The Girl Downstairs," I can't agree with Mr. Sullivan that Darrieux and Hedy Lamarr are the only imports of the year that have definitly clicked. True, the impish Danielle and the sultry glamor of Hedy have added something—but certainly no one can forget the gamin of "The Buccaneer." Hats off, we say, to a gal who isn't afraid of a part that makes her look grandly ridiculous.

Here's hoping we see more of her refreshingly different acting in the coming year! Sincerely,

MRS. G. H. LUNDGREN,

There Is a Fuehrer in Memphis!

Boss Crump Rules the Roost

● This is the story of E. H. Crump, political boss of Memphis, Tenn. The author, a Memphis newspaper man who requested that his name be not used, told last week of how Crump rules and how he gets rich federal grants for Memphis. Like all dictators, Crump has a whipping boy, revealed today.

Memphis.

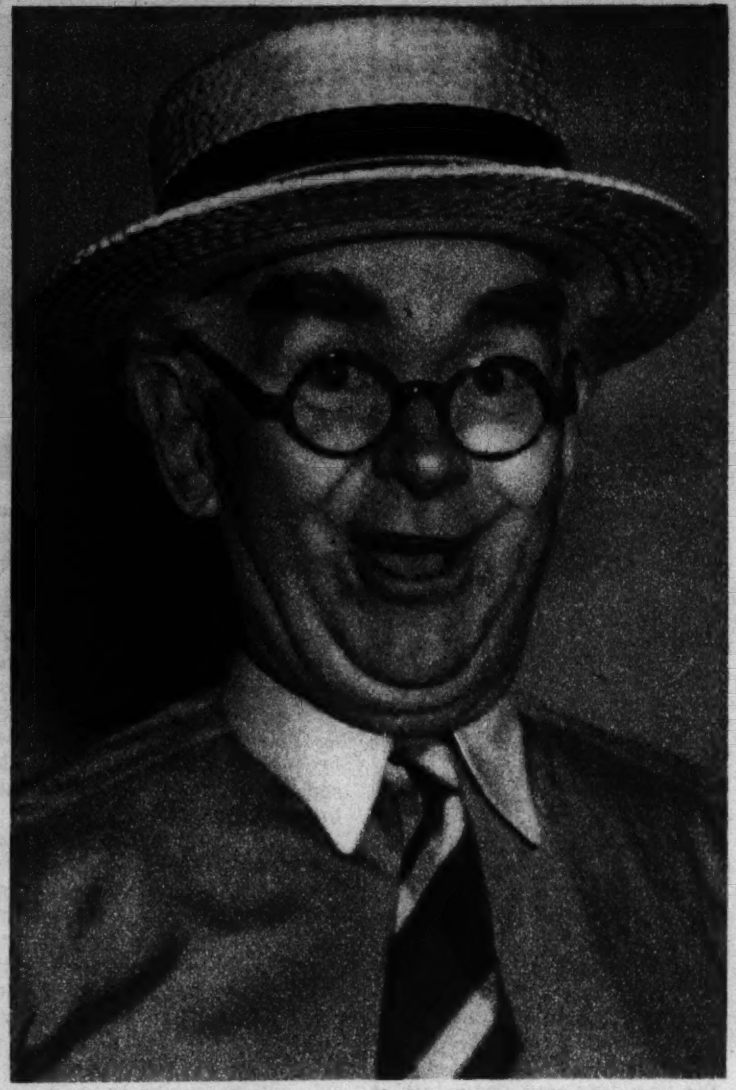
ONE OF Boss Crump's bitterest enemies in Memphis is an attorney, Ben Kohn, who actively supported Gov. Gordon Browning in the 1938 campaign. About 5 p. m. last May 20, at the busy corner of Madison and 3d in Memphis, Kohn was set upon by a boy who said Kohn had mistreated a girl friend. Kohn was severely beaten with a blackjack.

A newspaper reporter witnessed the beating. The assailant ran around the block and gave himself up to the police, but before Kohn could get to the police station to prefer charges the boy had been freed on payment of a $25 forfeit. Kohn was arrested on charges of assault and battery and not allowed to make bond. A guard was kept over him three days in the hospital.

A month later Browning's state police found the boy in Arkansas, living with his sister. State police said they got from him a confession that he had beaten Kohn for $25 and promise of a job as fireman. When city police questioned him he repudiated this story. Later state police said they obtained a statement from the sister confirming his first confession. When city representatives questioned her the sister then repudiated her first statement. The boy was indicted, but has never been brought to trial.

One weapon which Crump uses, and which many men fear, especially business men, is his capacity for verbal assault, his vicious personal attacks. He has a record of all his enemies or those who might be. The man who asks him for a favor may some day have it thrown in his face.

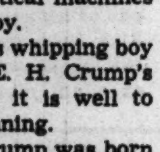
But if Crump employs a type of political organization that other political bosses have not thought of or failed to accomplish, he has one technique common to many political machines—the whipping boy.



Boss E. H. Crump—"You've got to be good to stay in politics as long as I have." (Associated Press photo.)

The story of this whipping boy is the story of E. H. Crump's political life, and it is well to start at the beginning.

Edward Hull Crump was born in the hill country of Mississippi in 1875 on a plantation that suffered from erosion, from the effects of four years of war, twelve years of reconstruction, and no money. He is proud of his lineage. His mother still lives on the plantation comfortably and quietly, admiring her son in Memphis, who visits her often and speaks of her frequently with pride.



L. M. Stratton

Crump first showed his qualities of leadership in organizing and managing a baseball team which beat everything in the country. He came to Memphis in 1901.

He was tall, rangy, red-faced, and red-haired. They were calling him "the Red Snapper" shortly after he took over the old 4th ward, toughest in Memphis, because politics was the natural place for him.

He was elected mayor of Memphis in 1909, and some of the men who worked with him then are with him today. The magnetic appeal of this man for some of his followers is unbelievable. He has all the flash, charm, and unbending personal force of the high-powered salesman, the bluster and eloquence of Webster—using Lincoln's homely words.

An example: In the midst of the fight against Browning, Crump said: "As governor of Tennessee he's been a hot barrel of cider for the power trust and Luke Lea. They have tapped him at both ends and tied him hand and foot. . . . In the art galleries in Paris there are twenty-seven pictures of Judas Iscariot. No two look alike, but all resemble Gordon Browning."

"He is the kind of a man who would milk a cow through the fence," Crump also said of Browning.

Just before Crump's third term as mayor ended in 1915, ouster proceedings were started on grounds he did not enforce the prohibition law, which he admitted. Before the courts upheld the ouster he was reëlected, but he resigned immediately after qualifying. Crump says the ouster suit was engineered by the "power trust" because of his program for municipal ownership of utilities.

At the time the city of Memphis had an option to purchase the old Merchants Power company, operating downtown. Crump made known his intention of exercising that option, setting up a municipal power system, but he was ousted before he could act. He never forgot it.

He moved into the office of county trustee, still boss of the situation. Memphis had six mayors in one month during the upheaval that followed, but Crump carried on. The power fight was an issue in 1916-'17, again in 1921-'22, when the highly successful Memphis Power and Light company was formed out of three bankrupt old companies.

Crump fought not only the power companies but the railroads and literally forced many of them to build viaducts and to eliminate grade crossings. He once organized a force of workers and tore the tracks of one line off a certain street because the company refused to remove them.

With such a background Crump was well prepared for the New Deal power program. His whipping boy, the power company and its holding companies, came in for verbal lashings the like of which they had never heard before.

When the Tennessee Valley authority was organized Crump took it up. Since 1933 his political battle cry has been, "Cheap TVA power for the people," and it has been a successful cry to rally the ever-increasing number of voters who do as he says.

Memphis tried to buy out the Memphis Power and Light company electric system, then began building its own. Not until the city had spent more than $5,000,000 and taken 5,000 customers did Electric Bond and Share, top holding company of M. P. and L., agree to talk sale. After months of negotiations an agreement was reached whereby the city would buy M. P. and L.'s electric system for $13,500,000, with TVA paying $2,000,000.

But that deal was made by the mayor and the (up to then) politically independent board of light and water commissioners. Crump said, "It isn't good enough," and the city commission, the legislative body of the city government, split into two factions of three and two members, with Crump telling the majority what to do. Crump wanted a reduction in gas prices, which the deal didn't provide.

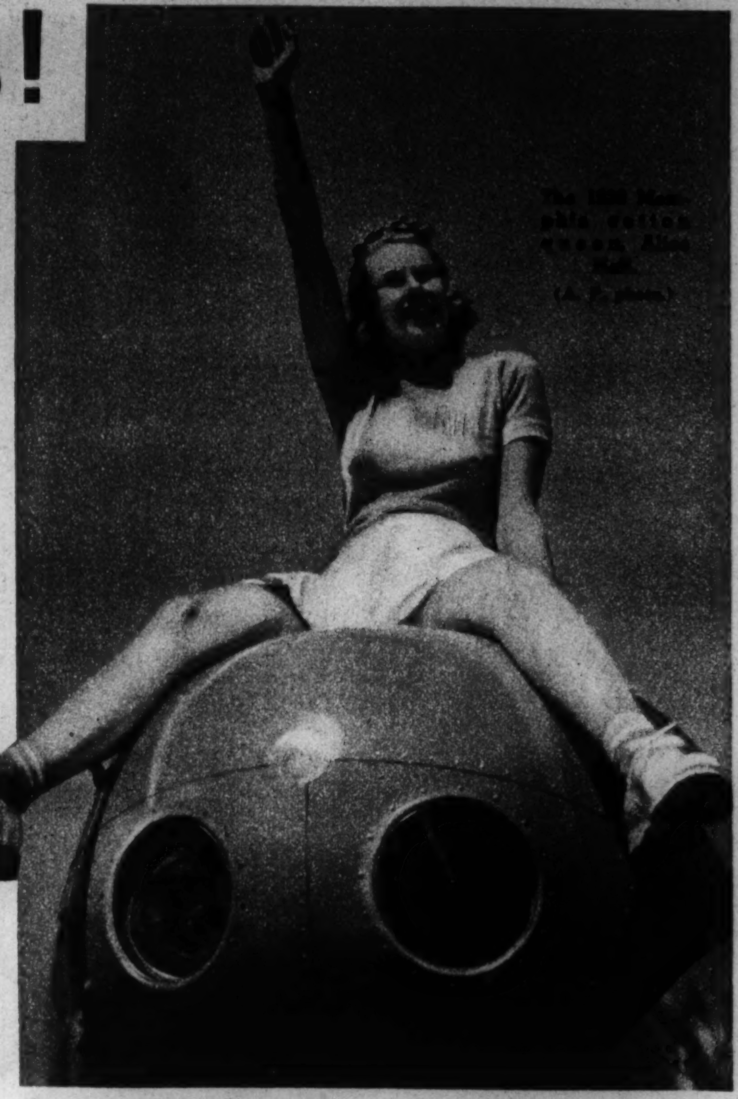
Crump installed commission government in Memphis in 1910, and now he used it to advantage—against the mayor he had made in 1928. Watki[illegible] three-term mayor, wa[illegible] the shelf with the city comm[illegible]sion minority.

If Crump was out to wreck his old enemy, the power company, he reckoned without the press. One paper suggested a settlement without costly duplication. "The people don't want a fight between the power company and the city if it can be avoided," it said. The paper carried statements by some sixty business men of the city to prove it—all urged the city to buy.

EX-MAYOR WATKINS OVERTON

One of the business men quoted was Leslie Stratton, head of Stratton-Warren, a wholesale hardware company, church leader, mainspring of the city's annual community fund drive. Of him Crump said:

"Leslie Stratton has been eating too high on the hog," meaning Stratton had "lost the common touch." One of the staples of diet among poor of the south is side meat.



The newspaper campaign had its effect, and the city and power company finally got together, with the city buying out both the electric and natural gas distribution systems of M. P. and L. Memphis will be the nation's only major city with municipal gas, water, and electric systems.

Crump's power, absolute over the nearly 2,400 employés of the city and county governments, will be increased by the addition of the 750 to 1,000 that will be employed by the huge light, gas, and water systems.

The Crump organization has a card index of every voter in city and county, and ward workers canvass every house before an election. Naturally these employés contribute to campaign funds, but probably the bulk of the money comes from other sources.

Merchants, industrialists, bankers, big property owners, theater owners, professional men, and business men who are willing to turn their duties as citizens over to Crump contribute handsomely when it is announced a fund will be raised. Tennessee was a dry state for nearly thirty years, but recently passed a local option liquor bill. The liquor dealers will probably make up the bootleggers' share of campaign costs.

Crump accused Stratton of "eating too high on the hog," but he eats pretty high himself. He has a successful business, but none of his competitors accuse him of using his political power to get business. There's more to a name than that. He doesn't have to use his power any more than Jimmy Roosevelt had to call on his father to help him sell insurance. Crump's firm will not take the bonds of political officials.

His three sons are in the firm, not in politics.

No American political boss ever cultivated "the peepul" as Crump has—such as having a party with 75,000 guests.

The Mid-South fair grounds is the scene of Crump's annual party, to which everybody in the county is invited—and nearly half of them go. Everything is free—amusements, concessions, food, and soft drinks. Firemen and policemen and ward workers help; most of the refreshments are donated.

Every year Crump hires a Mississippi river excursion boat and takes from 1,000 to 1,500 shut-ins from all Memphis institutions for a boat ride on the river—picnic and entertainment free. The street railway system furnishes free transportation to the boat; business men go along for an informal chat with the boss.

Crump is an ardent football fan. Memphis' bid for big-time football is Crump stadium, soon to be enlarged to 30,000.

Any Memphian will tell you E. H. Crump is a man of sterling integrity. They refer, however, to the money box, not the ballot box. Political blasphemy, an art in Tennessee, rolls off him like water off a duck's back, but a personal reflection on E. H. Crump brings a wrathful castigation of the accuser—and usually a reward if the charge can be proved.

"You've got to be good to stay in politics as long as I have," says Boss Crump.

Spring Comes to Norway

Oslo, Norway.

By ANDREAS BACKER
(Chicago Tribune Press Service.)

SPRING does not come slowly in Norway, as it does in so many European countries. It blossoms out suddenly. The weather is warm, the sun shines throughout the longer days, the nights are mild, the fields and parks are covered with green leaves and blossoms.

In the middle of this Maytime Norway celebrates its independence day—the 17th of May.

This national holiday is of fairly recent origin and is celebrated in memory of May 17, 1814, when Norway became a free nation, independent of other nations, even though it chose later to unite with Sweden. On that day Norway had its first free constitution, based greatly on the one gained by France after the revolution of 1789.

Some years after this great change in the government the people of Norway began to feel they should celebrate this day of freedom. The king of the united kingdom, Carl Johan, formerly a French marshal, was against the idea, as he saw in it a demonstration not only against himself but also against Sweden. Nevertheless supporters of the holiday idea grew in numbers.

In 1824 the poet and national hero, Henrik Wergeland, spoke openly for a national holiday. For some years the day was celebrated in spite of the continuous displeasure of the king, and since 1830 it has been regarded as the only national holiday of Norway.

It was not until 1873, however, that another poet, the famous Björnesterne Björnson, who was the author of the national anthem, "Yes, We Love Our Country," gave to the celebration its present color and drama.

Björnson instituted a demonstration that has become so famous that it now is used in other countries as well—the barnetog, or parade of children. All school children parade through the streets waving their small flags, singing national hymns and anthems, and shouting with their own natural enthusiasm.

In the capital the barnetog follows the most picturesque and beautiful street in all Norway—Carl-Johan street—from the city right up to the royal palace situated on top of a hill in the very middle of Oslo. It is an odd twist of circumstances that the greatest of barnetogs takes place on a street named for the king who tried his best to abolish from the the mind of the Norwegian nation the idea of that very holiday observance. But year after year the graven image of Carl Johan sits on its pedestal just outside the royal palace and looks down this street on the twenty-odd thousand children and the tremendous masses of people who have but one thought in their minds: "Be glad today; it is the 17th of May."

The "barnetog" marches up Carl Johan street to the palace.

Perhaps the late king knows now that when the children in their brightly colored spring clothes wave their blue, white, and red flags, when people along the street are shouting, when every building is hung with national banners, when city and nation celebrate the coming of spring in this manner, it is not a protest against him. It is rather the spontaneous expression of a free nation.

Its climax is the children's parade sweeping up in huge colored waves in front of the palace and ending before the statue of the man who composed the national anthem. On the balcony of the palace stands the royal family. King Häkon, tall and elegant, raises his top hat to the procession. Beside him, and attracting almost as much attention as the sovereign himself, are Crown Prince Olav, the popular Crown Princess Märtha, and the two little princesses who are the idols of the Norwegian people, Astrid and Ragnhild.

Norwegian youths in holiday attire leaving the royal palace.

In the parade of more than 20,000 children, ranging in age from 10 to 18, there are groups of happy boys and girls with red caps on their heads, tufted with dark silk. They are not communists, for all forms of political demonstration are forbidden. They are the pupils of the highest school class who are about to take their baccalaureate examinations. These caps are modeled after those worn by the academic students, which are also made of silk but with a larger tuft on top. The younger students, to mark their "dignity," have copied this cap, made it red to be more noticeable, and modified the tuft.

In Norway this cap is called the russ, which is short for the Latin word depositurus. It means that in the days of the russ the younger students have the right to take off their old insignia marking their junior character.

Not only in Norway is this day celebrated, but all over the world, and especially in the United States, by the two and a half million Norwegians living abroad.

2 Brushing downward. Gums are massaged and bristles forced between the teeth.

One Way to Beautify Mouth

By ELEANOR NANGLE

YOUR DENTIST will tell you that not one out of ten persons, including those who want to practice correct mouth hygiene, brushes his teeth correctly. The up-and-down brush swishing over the outer surface is the cleansing method practiced by most. Your dentist will tell you, too, that this method not only is more or less ineffectual, since it fails to stimulate or "exercise" the gums, but also sometimes serves to "manicure" the teeth and to encourage rather than prevent recession of the gums.

There is, of course, no substitute for the regular attention of a dentist. No dentifrice, mouth wash, brush, or technique of brushing can take the place of regular professional examinations, cleansing, and treatment. But correct mouth hygiene, followed day in and day out, plays a most necessary part in tooth preservation.

A tooth-brushing technique developed many years ago and steadily gaining wider acceptance among dental authorities is illustrated here. In this method the bristles of the toothbrush are always pointing toward the biting edge of the teeth. A tooth is not "manicured" at the gum line with the points of the bristles.

When brushing the lower teeth, on both outer and inner surfaces, the movement is always upward, never up and down. The brush is placed below the gum line, bristles pointing upward. If the brush bristles are well spaced the sides of the bristles will be forced between the teeth, dislodging food particles. Only two or three teeth should be cleansed at once.

The biting surfaces of the teeth are brushed by placing the brush squarely upon them, with some pressure, and rotating the brush.

In brushing the upper teeth the brush is placed just above the gum line, bristles pointing downward, and here the brushing movement is always downward, never up toward the gum line. The tooth surface will be cleansed, the gums will be massaged in the proper manner, and here again the sides of the bristles will be forced between the teeth.

This description of a brushing technique is not offered as a cure-all of tooth ills, or even as the ultimate in the correct methods of brushing. Dental authorities have varying preferences. But it is acknowledged as an excellent method.

5 On lower teeth place brush below gum line, bristles pointed upward toward the biting edge.

6 Here the brushing movement is upward, with gums massaged toward teeth instead of away.

7 Even on the inside surfaces the brush, which should not be too large, is used in an upward motion.

8 On the biting surfaces the brush is applied squarely on the teeth and rotated gently.

9 If bristles are properly spaced the sides will work in between the teeth, cleansing them efficiently.

French endive leaves make the decorative garnish for this apricot-cheese salad ring. Dried apricots, gelatin, lemon juice, sugar, American cheese, and whipped cream go into the ring. The center is a mixture of fresh fruits.

Dressing Up the Menu for Easter Parade

By MARY MEADE

NO ONE wants to serve ordinary food on Easter Sunday. Easter breakfast and Easter dinner deserve charming food served in a charming manner.

Serve an apricot-cheese salad ring, done up in endive leaves and filled with a mixture of fresh fruit, at dinner time. And for breakfast, early or late, depending upon whether you eat before or after church, have popovers filled with scrambled eggs. This is a new and attractive way to serve Easter eggs.

Since you'll want to start the salad before breakfast in order to have it chilled and jellied in time for dinner, I'm giving that recipe first.

APRICOT AND CHEESE RING
(Serves six)

- ½ pound dried apricots
- 2½ cups water
- 1 tablespoon gelatin
- 3 tablespoons cold water
- 3 tablespoons lemon juice
- 2-3 tablespoons sugar
- ¼ teaspoon salt
- 1 cup grated American cheese
- 1 cup cream, whipped
- French endive
- 2 cups fresh fruit

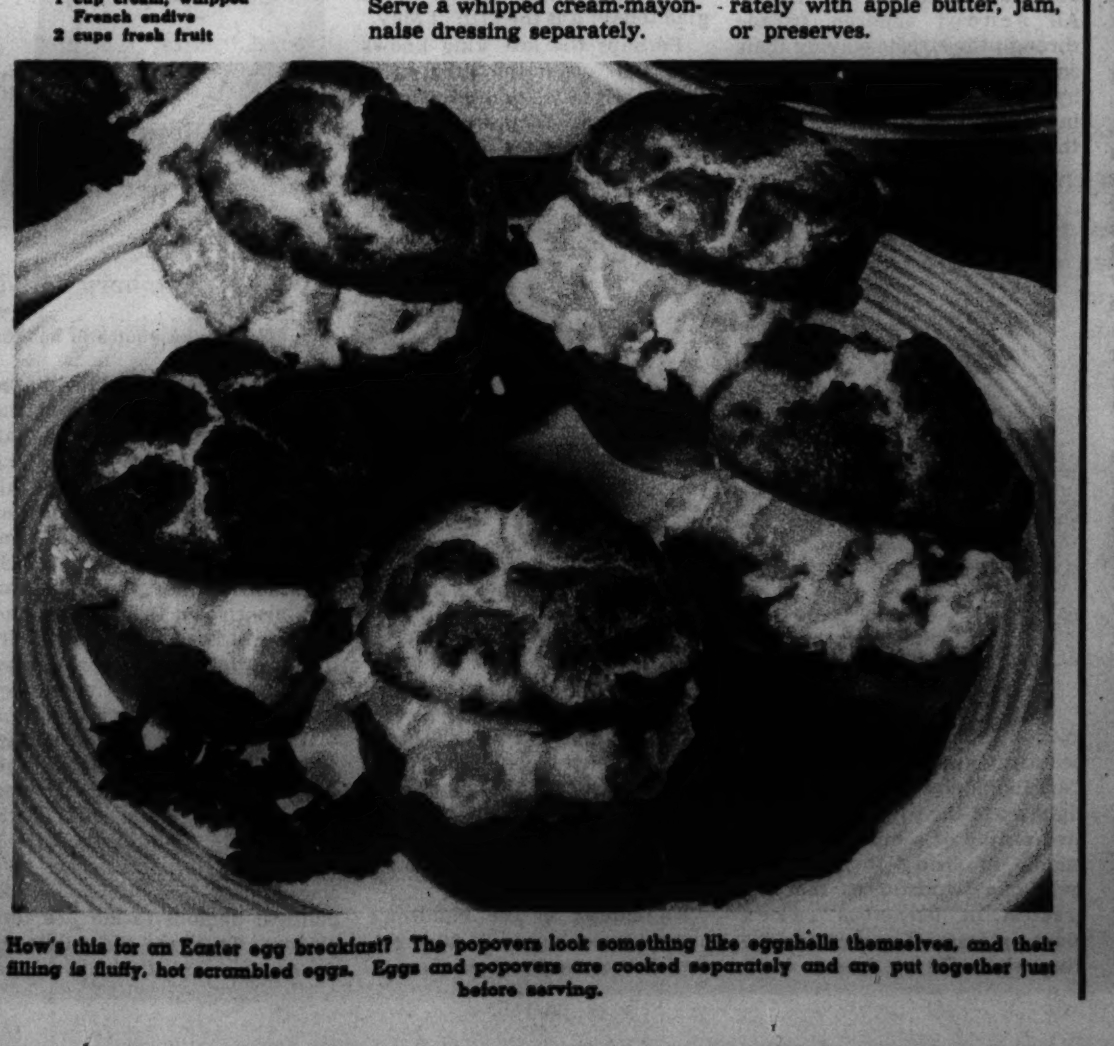
Wash apricots, add the 2½ cups water, cover, and simmer for an hour or until apricots are very soft. Remove from heat and stir until the fruit is thoroughly broken up. There should be 2 cups apricot sauce. Soak gelatin in the 3 tablespoons cold water for 10 minutes. Stir in the hot apricots. Add lemon juice, sugar, salt, and grated cheese. Stir until well mixed. Cool and fold in cream which has been beaten until stiff. Pour into a four-cup ring mold and chill until firm. Loosen sides of mold carefully with a thin-bladed knife, dip mold into warm water, and turn out on a plate. Garnish with French endive, chicory (curly endive), or lettuce leaves. Fill the center of the ring with fresh fruit, using three or more of whatever fruits are in season. Fresh pineapple, strawberries, apple or avocado balls are possibilities. Serve a whipped cream-mayonnaise dressing separately.

The nice hollow centers in popovers are ideal nests for Easter eggs—scrambled ones. The eggs are scrambled separately, of course, and filled into the popovers just as both eggs and "pops" are ready to serve.

POPOVERS

- 2 eggs
- 1 cup milk
- 1 cup flour
- ¼ teaspoon salt
- 1 tablespoon butter

Beat eggs until light and fluffy. Add milk. Sift flour. Add salt and resift. Add flour mixture to eggs gradually, beating constantly. Add melted butter. Pour into pre-heated, greased popover pans. Bake 25 minutes in a 450-degree oven. Reduce temperature to moderate, 350 degrees, and bake 15 minutes longer, so that the popovers may dry out. Cut off tops of hot popovers, fill with fluffy scrambled eggs, replace tops, and serve at once. Popovers which aren't filled with eggs may be served separately with apple butter, jam, or preserves.



How's this for an Easter egg breakfast? The popovers look something like eggshells themselves, and their filling is fluffy, hot scrambled eggs. Eggs and popovers are cooked separately and are put together just before serving.

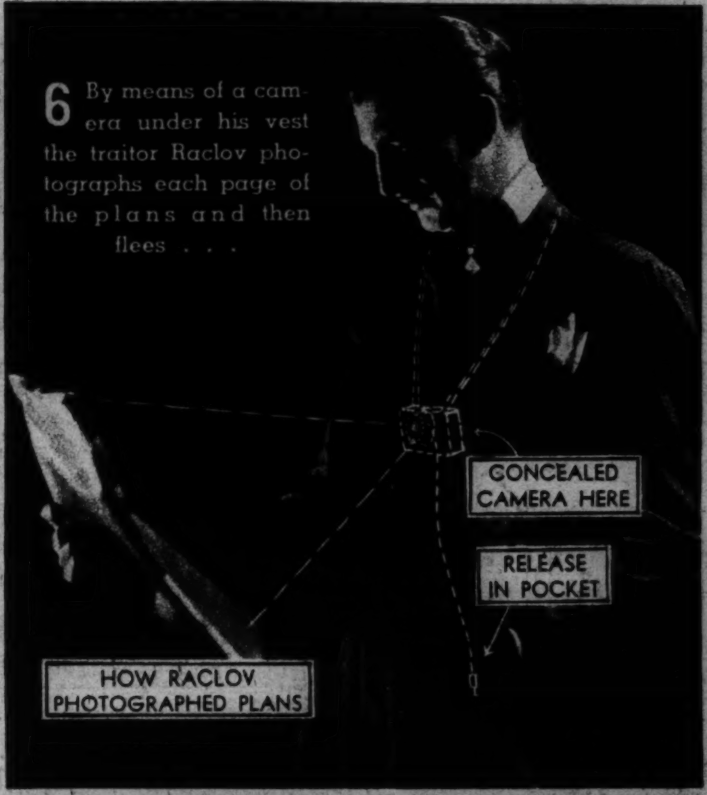
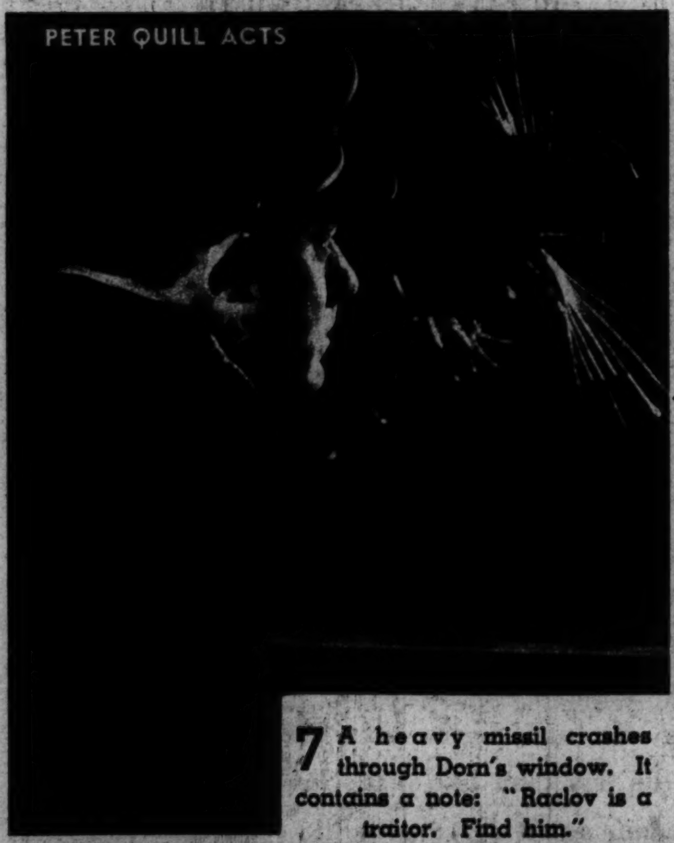
4 The countess invites Raclov to her suite. Knowing he has lost heavily at gambling, she offers to pay well if he will carry out her instructions.

5 Raclov presents his secret bureau credentials to Captain Dorn of special intelligence, who guards the Caribbean defense plans.

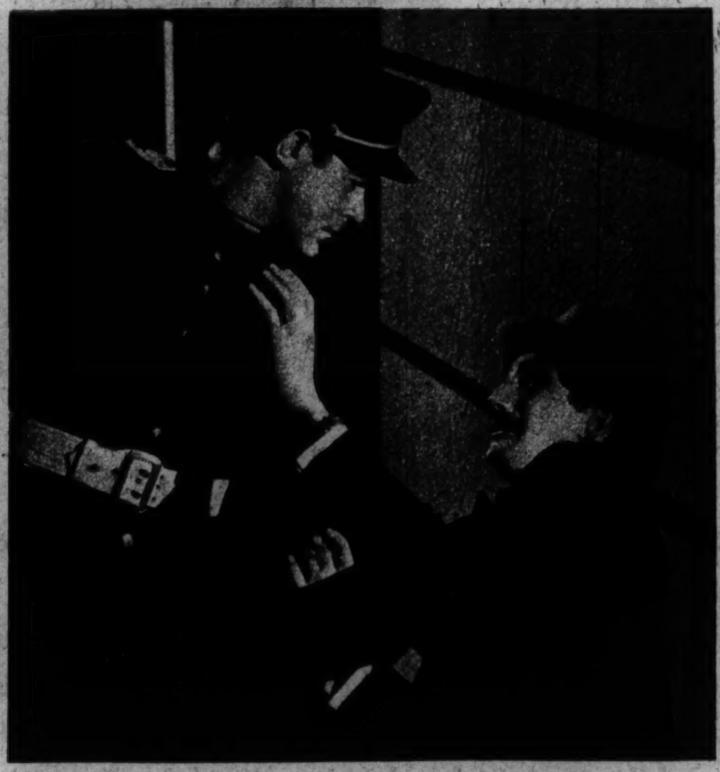
6 By means of a camera under his vest the traitor Raclov photographs each page of the plans and then flees . . .



PETER QUILL ACTS



7 A heavy missil crashes through Dorn's window. It contains a note: "Raclov is a traitor. Find him."



8 Dorn discovers Raclov's hideaway. Threatened, the traitor confesses selling the plans to Countess X.

THE RED CIRCLE AGENTS CALL ON COUNTESS X.

9 "For $10,000 we are getting priceless plans," whispers Sonya to her confederate. But she does not notice the countess reach for the tube in which the plans will be put.

10 The countess inserts a mysterious capsule into the tube.

Station Is a City Within a City

By WILLIAM FULTON

New York.

THIS YEAR in New York marks the twenty-sixth anniversary of the opening of the Grand Central terminal, an event which not only ushered in a new era of railroad comfort but furnished the nucleus for a monumental civic development of hotels, apartment houses, skyscraper office buildings, and shops of every description. Grand Central is a city within a city, woven together by a network of subway passages and elevators.

Here in this immense station the Twentieth Century Limited, crack flyer of the New York Central railroad, glides in to a stop from Chicago. Crowds press forward for a glimpse of a famous movie star, the reigning swing band leader or dulcet crooner. A short distance away a group of sullen men, convicted criminals, waits under guard for the train to Ossining, N. Y., and the gray walls of Sing Sing prison. The scene shifts a few steps farther on to a half dozen boys and girls in bright costume, with their polished wooden skis raised like soldiers' pikes, awaiting the "special" to the snow-covered mountains of New England. Here a honeymoon couple, peppered with rice. There a party of grieving relatives on the way to a funeral. Grand Central is a changing movie of real-life comedy and tragedy.

Less than a hundred years ago there stood on this spot in the center of Manhattan Island, then mostly farm and woodland, a small, rude shack. This was the terminal point for the puffing wood-burning locomotives which pulled their wagon-wheeled trains at the lightning speed of four miles an hour. At this junction the engines were disconnected and horses tugged the cars two miles farther southward to the Center street station near the present approach to the Brooklyn bridge.

So it was in the early days of railroading until along came that dour old Staten Island Dutchman, Commodore Cornelius Vanderbilt. The commodore merged all the roads he could get his hands on into the New York Central system, and then, amid cries of "folly," built the first terminal to house his trains on the present site of the Grand Central. The structure was completed in 1871. Then it was rebuilt and enlarged in 1900. Work on the modern terminal began in 1902 and continued for eleven years. Some idea of the magnitude of the task may be gained from the knowledge that three million cubic yards of rock and dirt were scooped out during the process.

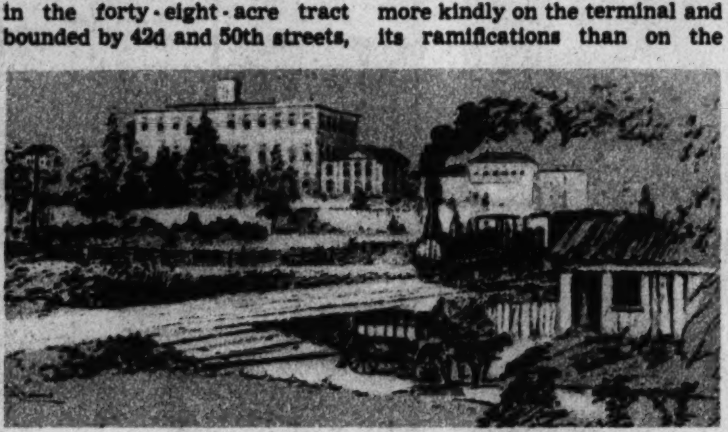
Today thirty buildings soar over the subterranean maze of the terminal's railroad tracks in the forty-eight-acre tract bounded by 42d and 50th streets, Lexington and Madison avenues. The New York Central leased long-term air rights for these structures, besides erecting its own mammoth terminal and thirty-five-story office building. The station is owned outright by the New York Central, but the facilities are also used by the New York, New Haven and Hartford railroad, which shares costs on a car entrance basis.



Old drawing of first Grand Central terminal.

The terminal and its facilities alone were valued at more than sixty-four millions of dollars last year, but the land and improvements of the area owned by the New York Central are estimated to be worth more than 200 millions. The railroad, incidentally, owns the nearby Biltmore hotel outright, a $12,750,000 property, and has a sizable interest in the new Waldorf-Astoria.

Grand Central grew up with New York and its needs. Real estate men are inclined to look more kindly on the terminal and its ramifications than on the modernistic Radio City of the Rockefellers, which was thrown up seemingly overnight and which on obtaining its tenants left empty buildings and blighted real estate areas in its wake.

In many ways Grand Central is the greatest railroad station in the world. More persons pass in and out of it daily than any other terminal. Its facilities are almost boundless. It is the only large railroad station in the world with two levels of tracks, one on top of the other, a big-city utilization of space made possible by complete electrification of trains. Six hundred trains pass in and out daily over a maze of trackage which if laid end to end would stretch thirty-four miles. Grand Central is a seventh wonder of the engineering world wherein smokeless, noiseless, swift trains arrive at the heart of the city.

Searching for comparisons or contrasts is made difficult because railroads are squeamish about disclosing figures on the performance of their terminals, what with their tax payments and finances always under the surveillance of the government. It takes only a look around to see, however, that the Grand Central geniuses have enhanced their property from a real estate viewpoint in contrast to the little-developed area within the sphere of the Pennsylvania station, the only other large railroad terminal in New York City.

The Pennsylvania handles a greater volume of passengers, but 80 per cent of them are commuters on the Long Island railroad, which is merely a spur or extension of the city's transit system. The New York transit commission in its 1936 report showed that 56,331,290 passengers used Penn station that year. During the same period the New York Central carried 21,437,702 passengers in and out of the terminal, while the New Haven transported 14,289,223, making a total of 35,726,925 passengers using Grand Central in 1936. Passenger volume in Grand Central rose to 38,899,142 in 1937. In 1938 it was still greater—39,942,739.

While the number of passengers using Grand Central in a day is approximately 100,000, the total actually in the station runs to nearly half a million, counting in relatives and friends of travelers and the New Yorkers who use the terminal's web of underground passages for short cuts or protection from bad weather. Station engineers vouch for the half million figure, backing it up by tallies taken at the various exits, a human ebb and flow exceeding that of Penn station.

Hard by the Grand Central and abutting it on the north is the New York Central skyscraper office building in the center of Park avenue and straddling it like the Colossus of Rhodes between 45th and 46th streets. Park avenue goes directly through the office building on two ramps which carry vehicular trafic on elevated highways around the terminal itself. The viaducts join at the south side of the terminal and pass over 42d street, descending to the surface level at 41st street. Park avenue is studded on either side by luxurious apartment houses which stand on stilts over the invisible railroad tracks.

The terminal itself, fronting on 42d street, is a monumental structure 600 feet long and 300 feet wide at street level, rising 105 feet above the street. Below the surface the station spreads out to 745 feet in length and 480 feet in width. Finished in Stony Creek red granite and Bedford Indiana limestone, the main façade is designed in the form of a triumphal arch, surmounted by a statuary group representing the glory of commerce, with Mercury attended by Hercules and Minerva. The triad of gods surround a massive clock. The architecture is Doric, with some modifying ornamentation.

Control board in master control tower guiding trains in terminal.

Entering the main concourse of the station, the observer is immediately overwhelmed by its bigness. Overhead is an immense barrel vault of blue with a night sky of twinkling stars and figures of the zodiac. A falling star would plummet more than a hundred feet before shattering on the concourse floor. The Grand Central's heavens, by the way, are in need of redecoration, but the railroad people are finding it difficult to scrape up the $100,000 needed for the job in these days of decreasing car loadings.

The concourse, 275 feet long and 125 feet wide, is built around the circular information booth in the center, topped by a bronze four-faced clock. The New York Central ticket windows occupy the westerly side of the concourse, for this is the side nearest that road's trains, while New Haven tickets are to be found on the opposite side, nearest the tracks it leases. A staf of seventy-three sells tickets, while a regiment of nearly 500 redcaps is called into service daily to handle an enormous volume of baggage. Also arranged about the sides of the concourse are the baggage and parcel checking spaces, telegraph and telephones, the main waiting room, smoking room, bootblack shops, and other concessions run by the "tip trust."

The east balcony is reserved for exhibitions in keeping with the season. During the winter a giant figure on skis stood poised at the top of a slide cutting down through a huge map of New England. Last summer a full-sized sailing yacht adorned the balcony.

ILLINOIS' Abner Nelson:— "I Forgive You For Killing Me"

In the cold, gathering twilight of February 19, 1939, those last words were gasped from the lips of Abner Nelson as he lay dying on the gravel walk outside his farm home near Morris, Illinois.

Why did he forgive the man who murdered him? What was the tragic drama behind the trio who had gone from boyhood, through college into manhood as inseparable pals, only to find one shot to death, another accused of the murder and the third standing in court as State's Attorney to send his friend, the killer, to the electric chair?

Here's the whole inside story—truths never before printed about this recent tragedy that shocked Illinois. Read it exclusively in Official Detective Stories for May.

Vitamins Are Vital to Animals

THE AVERAGE dog fancier hears much about vitamins these days, for many people, whether they own dogs or not, are more vitamin conscious than they were several years ago. Breeders especially are paying considerable attention to the whole subject of unstable organic compounds, as vitamins may be described. Litters are being fed more scientifically than ever before. Cod liver or haliver oil, yeast, orange juice, and other food items containing vitamins are being fed to dogs.

To make it easier for breeders and owners to give dogs their vitamins, many new compounds and products containing one or more of these elements are available. There are liquids, capsules, powders—in fact, many different methods of adding vitamins to the diet of the dog.

Vitamin A is an important vitamin for both man and his dog. It's one that is soluble in fats. Cod liver oil and butter are rich in A. Fish livers and fish oils also are rich sources of A. Cows get A from the green leaves of plants. Lack of A brings lowered resistance. One scientist reports that he even produced pyorrhea in dogs by depriving them of vitamin A.

Vitamin B is one that is found in a wide variety of foods, such as meat, milk, egg yolk, yeast, whole wheat bread, beans, and other foods. Actually vitamin B is a complex of several factors. A deficiency of this vitamin has not caused a prominent nutritional disorder except in dogs subsisting on prepared foods of poor quality or foods which have been too highly processed.

Vitamin C is the vitamin that prevents scurvy in humans. It cannot be stored by animals. A rich source of vitamin C is fruit, including oranges, lemons, and pineapples. Tomatoes also contain vitamin C. One eastern scientist says that only man, monkey, and the guinea pig require vitamin C in their food. The common domestic species of animals are supposed to manufacture this C factor in their bodies.

Vitamin D, popularly called the sunshine vitamin, is one of great importance to dog owners, and especially those those who are raising puppies. Without D pups will suffer from poor bone development and poor dentition—in other words, rickets. The teeth of puppies with improper amounts of vitamin D are small and may be rough and pitted. They decay easily. The legs of animals deprived of D are weak. Fish livers (cod, halibut, salmon, etc.) are rich sources of D. But this vitamin can be developed in foods by exposure to ul[illegible] violet rays of an artificial sou[illegible]

Another important vitami[illegible] E. Among dog owners [illegible] known as the anti-sterility v[illegible] min and naturally is of pa[illegible] mount importance to breed[illegible] of dogs. Vitamin E is conc[illegible] trated in the germ of cer[illegible] grains and certain seeds. Wh[illegible] germ oil, for example, is an es[illegible] cially rich source. Meat, eg[illegible] yeast, and other foods of t[illegible] type have practically no vitam[illegible] E in them. Therefore a ken[illegible] that is feeding what appears [illegible] be a very sound, nourishing [illegible] may find female dogs not p[illegible] ducing litters when expected.

Fortunately, many of the b[illegible] prepared dog foods contain v[illegible] mins. These foods, plus a nu[illegible] ber of vitamin preparati[illegible] which may be added to the do[illegible] diet in convenient and sim[illegible] form today, make it easy for a[illegible] owner to keep his dog on a c[illegible] rect vitamin schedule.

The Strato-Liner Crash

Wreckage of the Boeing strato-liner in which ten died.

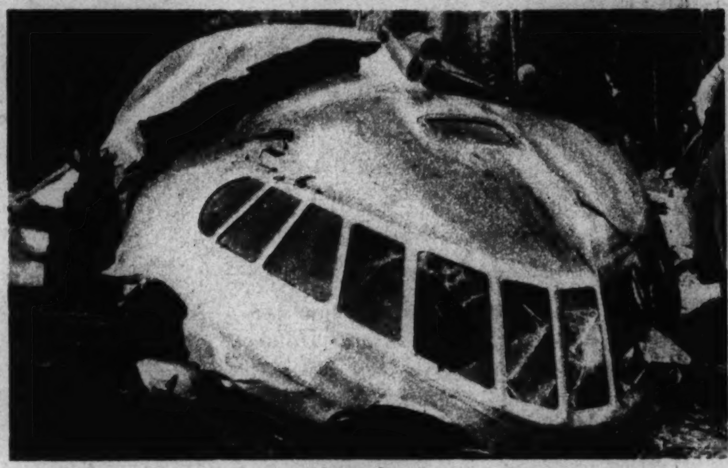
Test Flying Necessarily Dangerous

By WAYNE THOMIS

THE LOSS of ten lives in the crash of the Boeing Airplane company's experimental strato-liner on March 18 is one of the tragic consequences of pioneering. Those lives at least were not lost in the senseless slaughter of a war, but in the advancement of commercial aviation—part of the expected toll of test flying.

The plane was one of six identical machines now being built by the Boeing company. They are 45,000-pound, four-engined monoplanes constructed entirely of metal, capable of carrying thirty-two passengers and a crew of five. The type is a commercial refinement of the army's B-17 bombardment machines, but it has a larger, rounder cabin that can be supercharged for passenger comfort at high altitudes.

The plane that crashed was the first of the six to be assembled, and it had just begun its program of flight tests. The pressure cabin apparatus was not being tested in the air, although it already has been tested on the ground. Instead the ship was up for dive tests and pull-outs. This was to test the inherent strength of wings and tail surfaces and to determine the controlability of the ship at high speeds.



(Acme photo.)
Nose and pilot house of the demolished plane.

(Acme photo.)
The left outboard engine of the strato-liner, lying a quarter of a mile from the main wreckage. Notice unfeathered propeller.

According to eyewitnesses of the accident, a breakage of one of the wings occurred after a prolonged dive in which, unquestionably, high speeds were reached. The plane was extremely "clean," and speeds up to 300 miles an hour might easily have been reached in a few seconds with the nose down.

Photographs of the wreckage reproduced here show that the major part of the left wing, including the left outboard motor, broke away from the ship in flight. That motor and pieces of the wing tip were found about a quarter of a mile from the rest of the wreckage. This led investigators to consider that a weakness in the motor mounting of the left outboard engine had caused it to rip away, taking with it the wing. A failure within the engine itself might also have caused this to happen.

The photograph of the engine shows that the hydromatic propeller on it was not feathered at the time the motor tore loose from the wing. This would indicate that the breakage was violent and sudden. If the motor had failed internally, and the pilots within the ship had been given as much as thirty seconds, this propeller could have been fully feathered and stopped, thus relieving the strain on that motor.

Some of those who looked at the wreckage said that the right wing outside the two right engines also pulled away in flight, and the wreckage from the wings also sheared away the horizontal tail surfaces. They added that the machine apparently descended at high speed in a flat spin. Evidently the fuselage struck the ground in a horizontal position, so that the cabin "broke its back" in several places, but was not accordioned into a heap of metal, as it would have been had the machine struck nose first.

An air transport executive recently said that it was far better that such accidents should occur during tests than after the plane began carrying passengers. Findings after the accident should enable the engineers to prevent any such accident in the future.

The strato-liner had a wing spread of 105 feet and was 90 feet long. It was reported to have a top speed in level flight of more than 250 miles an hour and to be capable of cruising at 230 miles an hour at 17,000 feet. The cabin was built to withstand 2½ more pounds of air pressure inside than outside, so that at 17,000 feet the pressure in the cabin could be maintained at an equivalent of 11,000 feet in actual height—a pressure that is comfortable for passengers.

building and back at night by another passageway to the Biltmore, Commodore, or Roosevelt hotel.

Beneath all this pulsating life the railroad trackage system feeds into the terminal like an unraveling rope. The tracks leading from upstate New York and New England skim underneath the surface of the streets at 96th street in Manhattan. Four tracks run directly beneath the shell that is Park avenue until 57th street, when the system divides into ten tracks. These extend to 50th street, where forty-two tracks widen out on the upper level and thirty-seven on the lower. Most of the tracks are stub end, but there are five which tie into a complete loop, enabling trains to go back to the Mott Haven yard at 149th street, where they are cleaned and serviced, where the steak you will order that night on the Century going back to Chicago is prepared and placed on the diner.

Access to the terminal tracks is afforded by a series of ramps. The main concourse is ten feet below street level, so that platforms for the trains on the upper level are only four feet down on an easy grade. This upper level is used for express or through trains because of its convenience for the travelers with baggage.

Commuters come in on the lower level, and this concourse immediately below the upper level hives with shoppers and workers early in the morning and with home-going throngs at dusk. Two towers raised in the subterranean recesses of the lower level control the movements of trains in this area, while five towers govern movements on the upper level.

Tower A, the master control tower, is located at 50th street. At this point the engineer who guided this correspondent through the labyrinthian passages of the terminal indicated a brick wall a few feet away which he identified as the supply basement of the Waldorf-Astoria.

Baggage is handled by a series of elevators beneath 45th street and a subway extending east and west under this thoroughfare. The Grand Central post-office shoots mail bags downward through chutes to tracks numbered 14 and 15, where mail cars are always standing for loading. Overhead are belt conveyors 800 feet long to carry the mail to the proper car. The conveyors are implemented by metal slides on wheels down which the sacks slip and finally plump to the station platform. The guide explained that these contraptions are necessary because Uncle Sam's postal regulations will not permit mail to be dropped vertically for more than three feet.

Twenty-five hundred persons are employed in the terminal, and unknown to the millions of persons who tramp about it every year is the nerve center which supplies life to the huge development, the physical plant which is carved out of the granite ribs of Manhattan Island 110 feet beneath street level and under the Graybar building. Here are the shops of the marble cutters and polishers, the painters with their paint-spraying apparatus, the carpenters with their dust-removing equipment, the plumbers, machine workers, and masons. Beneath the shops is the room in which live steam is passed through giant boilers to obtain the hot water for all the buildings.

Down at the bottom is the electrical substation where juice is transformed from alternating to direct current by a battery of ten huge converters singing a symphony of power. Paneled control boards on one side govern the amount of electricity sent into the smallest light bulb at the furthermost point in the terminal and also dispatch a current of 660 volts to the third rails for propelling the trains. Near by is a wet-cell battery room, a constant reservoir of power from which enough voltage may be drawn to operate the lighting of the terminal for three-quarters of an hour, during which time, the station officials say, any emergency may be met.

Not until late at night does Grand Central quiet down. A small army of cleaners wielding mops, brushes, and rags advances over the polished floor of the main concourse about 1 a. m. Then the station rests for a few hours until early in the morning, when it receives the first surge of commuters or a rush of holiday pleasure seekers. So it has been for twenty-six years.

Many people are buying Gulistan because it is more practical than Plain Shade carpeting—footmarks don't show so much. Equally beautiful as rug or as wall-to-wall carpeting, the new style provides the perfect quiet base for all types of furniture—period or modern.

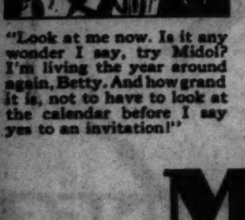
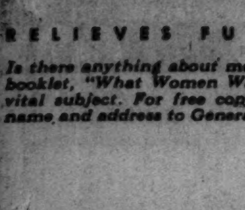
"My years were only eleven months long"

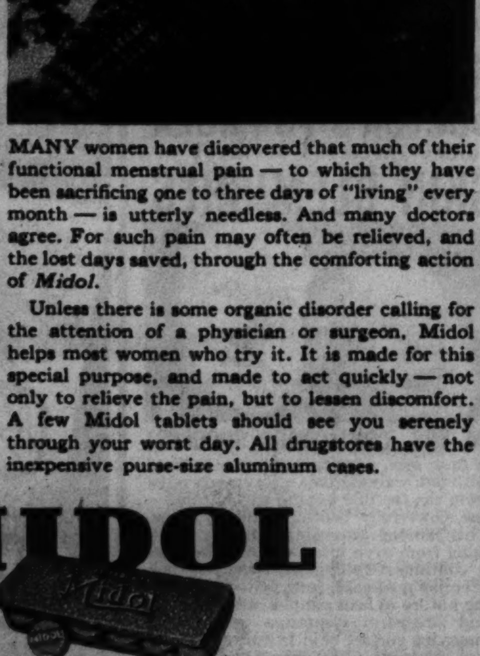
"Don't tell me how you feel, Betty. I know. Before I learned how Midol helps, my life was just like yours. I lived eleven months a year, and wasted the twelfth in miserable inactivity."



"As regularly as my periodic pains came on, I looked forward to a day of suffering, and several more when I believed I had to keep off my feet to spare myself discomfort. A full month, gone!"



"Look at me now. Is it any wonder I say, try Midol? I'm living the year around again, Betty. And how grand it is, not to have to look at the calendar before I say yes to an invitation!"



MANY women have discovered that much of their functional menstrual pain — to which they have been sacrificing one to three days of "living" every month — is utterly needless. And many doctors agree. For such pain may often be relieved, and the lost days saved, through the comforting action of Midol.

Unless there is some organic disorder calling for the attention of a physician or surgeon, Midol helps most women who try it. It is made for this special purpose, and made to act quickly — not only to relieve the pain, but to lessen discomfort. A few Midol tablets should see you serenely through your worst day. All drugstores have the inexpensive purse-size aluminum cases.

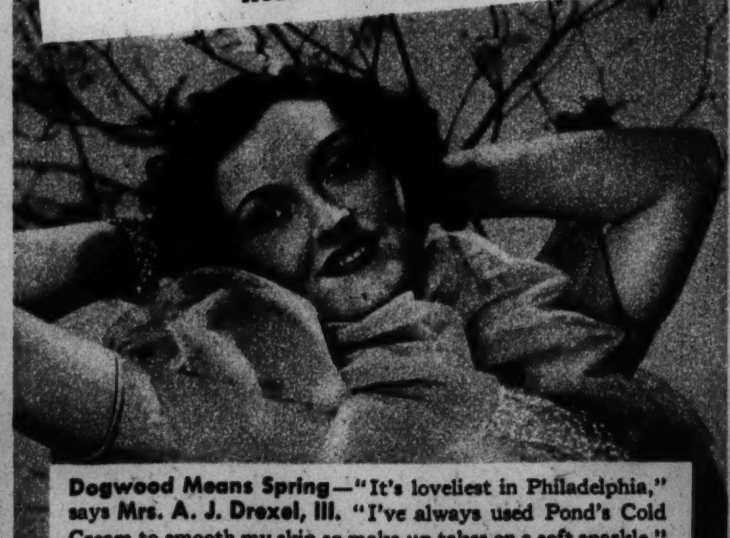
Turn Your BEST Face Toward Spring

—THE WAY SOCIETY FAVORITES DO!

April in Paris—An American countess stops to buy a fragrant bouquet. The Countess de la Falaise says: "Pond's cleanses my skin—its use helps keep it smooth and glowing. Now it contains 'skin-vitamin,' too, and I'm simply delighted!"

NOW YOU, TOO, CAN CREAM EXTRA "SKIN-VITAMIN" INTO YOUR SKIN*



Dogwood Means Spring—"It's loveliest in Philadelphia," says Mrs. A. J. Drexel, III. "I've always used Pond's Cold Cream to smooth my skin so make-up takes on a soft sparkle."

Vitamin A, the "skin-vitamin," is necessary to skin health. Skin that lacks this vitamin becomes rough and dry. But when "skin-vitamin" is restored, it helps make skin soft again. Scientists found that this vitamin, applied to the skin, healed wounds and burns quicker. Now this "skin-vitamin" is in every jar of Pond's Cold Cream! Use Pond's night and morning and before make-up. Same jars, labels, prices.
